IT'S HAPPENING

CSC Lobsterfest set for Aug. 8

The Cohasset Sailing Club is sponsoring its fourth annual "Lobsterfest" for members and their guests from 7 p.m. to midnight Saturday night, Aug. 8. Cohasset's own Dan Anderson will provide the repast and "DJ With Class" will provide the music for dancing. The club has used this DJ in the past and he manages to get everyone rockin'.

The menu will include chowder with oyster crackers, steamers with drawn butter, native corn on the cob, sweet grilled sausage, coleslaw, assorted rolls and chilled watermelon for dessert. The main attraction is choice of a 12-oz. sirloin steak or a 1-1/4 lb. select lobster — either meal cooked to perfection. A 7 p.m. arrival time is recommended in order to grab your table and get your dinner tickets. Dinner will be served promptly at 7:30 p.m.

The cost of the dinner is $30 per person and participants should bring their own beverages.

Ice, only, will be provided.

The "fest" will be held rain-or-shine, as the usual tent will be provided. Attire for the evening is casual. Tickets must be reserved no later than Friday, Aug. 1. Payment, in check form, payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club, may be left with Heather at the sail club office, or, left in an appropriately marked envelope, inside the front step mail box at 38 Summer St. Checks must indicate the number of steak and/or lobster dinners. Please put your phone number on your check.

For more information, or more importantly, to volunteer to help with this outstanding social occasion, call Lyn Previte at 383-9723.

'Anastasia' tickets to go on sale

Tickets are on sale for the Children's Drama Workshop production of "Anastasia" at the Cohasset Recreation Department, Town Hall.

Tickets are $5 in advance and $7 at the door. The production involves 92 children from Cohasset and surrounding towns. Performances are Tuesday, Aug. 11, at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m., and Wednesday, Aug. 12, at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Summer band concert series

The next concert on the co[illegible] scheduled for Tuesday evening, [illegible] 11, at 7:30 p.m.. The concert, which is sponsored by the Cohasset Recreation Department, is free and open to the public.

Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

LIBRARY CORNER

New at the children's room

Suzanne Terry, children's librarian, has new and exciting summer options for all ages in the Children's Room at the Paul Pratt Library. Books on tape are available for one week circulation and are considered a vacation "must" for car, boat, plane or train trips. Choose between a wide selection of well-known authors and stories. Some of the newest purchases are "Island Boy" and "Hattie and the Wild Waves," both by Barbara Cooney; "Sees Behind Trees," by Michael Dorris and "The Boggart," by Susan Cooper.

Adding to the already entertaining selection of videos are the following titles which are available for a three-day circulation: "Babe;" "The Magic School Bus Gets Eaten;" "Caddie Woodlawn;" "Huck Finn;" and "Wallace & Gromit — A Close Shave."

"The newest CD roms for "in-Library" use only for the Apple Mac computer are "Reader Rabbit" and the ever popular "Cat in the Hat," by Dr. Seuss.

And new for the pre-school group (or older) are terrific furry and fuzzy puppets which come in all shapes and sizes. There is a slithery snake that is at least a foot long, a dinosaur that pops out of its egg, a "not so scary" shark and a grand brown bear. Take them home FREE from the library after checking them out and let your children create stories at home with these creatures using their imaginations. Come in and explore the latest at the library.

Story hours continue

The library continues to offer a "Twilight Hour" story hour for younger children ages 3 and up & their families. This is held on Tuesday evenings at 7 p.m. on July 28, August 4 and I 1. No registration is required.

Ongoing library programs

All children in Cohasset are welcome to participate in the statewide reading program, "Unlock the Mystery-Read!" Children record books on cards or in log books as they read them over summer. For each five books a "Key" is added to a keyring displayed at the children's room. All those who read 20 books receive a free paperback book from the library selection. It is open to all reading levels and will remain open until school begins, which means it's never too late to join!

Up and coming at the library

Story teller Alice Quintano will present "The Mysterious Stranger" and other stories, a program of stories and songs for children age 9 and under and their families Thursday, Aug. 20, at 7 p.m. Listen to mysterious and exciting tales from many cultures and observe wizards and magical beasts come alive as the audience and storyteller join together telling tales. This event is sponsored in part by a grant from the Cohasset Local Cultural Council, the Massachusetts Cultural Council, and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Tenants thrive a year after Woolworth's leaves

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Route 3A has become a magnet for new commercial developments. The massive new Shaw's Plaza is just the most recent example of the kind of commercial ventures sprouting up along the busy road. But lost in the excitement over big new stores are a number of strip malls that have faithfully served the town for decades. Tedeschi's Plaza at 790 Chief Justice Cushing Highway on the Scituate line is one of those strip malls.

"The need for Woolworth's was at the end of its era."
Brian Noble , Noble's Camera Shops

When Woolworth's closed last year, many residents and merchants mourned the loss of the venerable department store. But a year has passed and the former Woolworth's space remains empty. The common wisdom among retailers is that anchor stores are necessary for bringing customers into malls, who will then shop in the smaller establishments. But most of the merchants in Tedeschi Plaza interviewed for this article say they have done fine without Woolworth's. Tedeschi's Plaza is also home to a number of solid businesses that benefit somewhat from sitting close to the Cohasset/Scituate border. Although Woolworth's is vacant, Noble's, Victoria's Pizza, Cohasset Jewelers, CVS and Curtis Liquors continue to do business out of the plaza.

And as for the rumors about the future of the Woolworth's space, the merchants in the plaza did not wish to be quoted, but they consistently

Some want to curb sidewalk plan

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The village task force's plan to use a $165,000 state grant to widen the sidewalk along the South Main Street stretch from the common to Elm Street is being met with opposition.

At a July 30 meeting at the town hall auditorium, 25 local merchants and residents voiced a variety of concerns following a slide presentation and discussion of preliminary plans for the new sidewalk

What they are raising doubts about is architect James Shipsky's proposed six-inch-high granite curb along an eight-foot-wide sidewalk ornamented with trees, shrubs, 10-foot-high, nautical-looking street lamps, and benches from which to take it all in.

In order to achieve this, a portion of St. Stephen's ledge would have to be removed. The road in front of the church would also be widened.

The raised curb was not seen as a plus by

Quonset hut condos get nod

By Mary Ford

The Quonset Huts at 430 S. Main St. will come down after all. The Zoning Board gave the go-ahead Monday for Hingham builder John Murphy to proceed with plans to replace the structures known as the "ugliest buildings in Cohasset" with five townhouse condominiums.

Murphy first presented his plans to the zoning board last month which held off approval on modifications to the design pending input from the design review board.

At that time, members of the zoning board described the new look as "barracks like". The old plans submitted late last year by developer and prior owner Noel Collins and designed by architect Jim Shipsky, who are both Cohasset residents, featured large sloping roofs on the buildings. Murphy's plans replaced the sloping roofs with double gables.

The board preferred Shipsky's design which made the condominiums look like five different

New Mobil sign considered

The zoning board is considering a request for a new sign from the Mobil station at the corner of Sohier Street and Route 3A.

The sign, which will feature Mobil "On the Run" and Quikava signs as well as gasoline prices will be within the legal size limits in the town by-law, Mobil attorney Charles Humphreys said.

The only relief Mobil is seeking is a special permit to create a "lawful sign on a non-conforming structure," Humphreys explained. Back in February, Mobil's initial application asked for a variance for a bigger, free standing sign and offered to keep the window by the cashier clear of signs.

Humphreys said the application before the zoning board was not a repetitive one because there was a substantial change in character of the plans.

Once denied, applicants cannot resubmit applications within two years unless there is a material change in the plans.

The existing sign is on the lot line. Town by-laws require signs to be 15 feet from the lot line hence the request for the special permit. Mobil said the new sign will be one foot in from the property line.

This week Mobil Mart operator Paul Vercollone said he did not want to be bound in the decision to keep a window clear of signs in case he changed the interior configuration of the store. The store now keeps the window clear by the cashier so the employee can keep an eye on activity at the gas pumps.

The zoning board took the matter under advisement.

Register to vote

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or election day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

The last day to register to vote and change party enrollment for the State Primary Sept. 15 is Wednesday, Aug. 26. The Town Clerk's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mail-in registration forms are available from the Town Clerk's office, Cohasset Post Office and Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before Aug. 26.

Maternity leave is granted

Melissa Barry, a world languages teacher at the Middle School, has been allowed a one-year maternity leave by the school committee. Superintendent Stephen Hart recommended the leave during the committee's July 23 meeting and his recommendation was unanimously accepted by the committee members.

Marina expansion plans on table

The selectmen and harbor committee plan a joint meeting at 7 p.m., Aug. 6 at town hall to discuss a proposal to expand Cohasset Harbor Marina off Parker Avenue.

Owner, Paul Trendowicz, would like to add 50 more slips to his boat docks. He plans to ask the town to move the federal anchorage line in Bailey's Creek about 25 feet.

Ten minutes for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and are held on alternate Tuesdays. The next selectmen's meeting is Tuesday, Aug. 11.

Getting away from it all at St. Joseph Villa

Retreat Center benefit concert slated

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Were it not for last summer's benefit concert at the South Shore Music Circus, Saint Joseph Villa Retreat Center's Ionic-columned porch would not overlook the Atlantic in the pristine condition it enjoys this summer. Sister Barbara Feney, facilitator for the retreat, hopes that this Saturday's Anna Maria Alberghetti and John Raitt concert will prove equally restorative for the badly peeling and cracking trim of the Center.

"We're still relatively new at this," said Sister Barbara Reney, referring to the three-years-young summer benefit concerts. The retreat buys 50 tickets for a South Shore Music Circus concert which they re-sell at a higher cost to cover the expense of the after-concert dinner at the villa.

"Most often, people who attend the fund-raising event are already involved with our retreat, but some come for different reasons," said Reney, like the woman who bought up six tickets to help her entertain friends visiting for the weekend.

The dinners are held on the retreat's porch, replete with sea breeze, an ocean vista and Sister Ellie Weigand's "comfort food."

From the spacious pink and white kitchen issue the sounds of a bustling and skilled cook. "No fancy hollandaise sauce in here," quipped Weigand, as she added more strawberries to a half-filled bowl. "Just plain, simple comfort food. Tonight, it will be strawberry shortcake, chicken, beans, corn-on-the-cob and homemade biscuits."

The Sisters of St. Joseph of Boston, who are celebrating their 125th anniversary this year, have owned Center at 339 Jerusalem Road for 50 years now. Originally, it was purchased as a summer house for the sisters to vacation in and go swimming. "The water is only 30 degrees so maybe it's more like they were doing penance than taking a dip," joked Sister Barbara.

The pre-Vatican II sisters lived a fairly communal existence while at the villa, sharing a 50-bed dormitory. Today, individual living quarters have whittled the center's capacity to 15 visitors at a time. "These people have aged," explained Reney, "and they want their own room. Young people now wouldn't abide by it the way it was at all. But that's how it was."

Sisters also used to visit for the day, bringing a picnic lunch to eat by the shore. Most of those visiting were teachers on summer schedule.

Some time around 1974, the sisters requested a special place to pray and it was decided that the villa could be used during the winter months, as it was winterized.

Since then, the villa has been used for week-long and weekend retreats for sisters and other spiritually inclined women.

"People come here for the quiet and reflection that they need. Sometimes people need time to contemplate a change in their life, like the loss of a spouse or other loved one, or maybe making a change in career," Reney said.

Aside from their periods of reflection, visitors can also join in on programs offered at the retreat, such as the quilting weekend with Scituate's Bobbie Sullivan called "Quilting Weekend: Piecing Together the Fabric of Our Lives.". "She's incredible," declared Reney, of Sullivan.

Mornings of prayer are well-attended by people in the area, according to Reney. There are also tai chi sessions led by Jade Forest's John Loupos in the garden area three mornings a week. "John says the garden has 'feng shui', or right balance,' said Reney, of the area situated to the right of the porch.

Surrounded by hedges to the right, rocks dotted with low-lying flowers and cherub statues to the left and the ocean beyond, the garden is a verdant and private setting for meditation.

A tour of the retreat starts at the porch where 87-year-old Sister Gonzales-Maloney is enjoying the morning paper and cooling breeze. "I am privileged to even just share in this," said Gonzales-Maloney animatedly. "I haven't been here in years but what a happy place it is! The sisters I love are here and the beauty of the ocean together makes this a double blessing—what a privilege!"

From the porch doorway, Reney heads down a hall to the dining area where four folding tables are set; three with plates and eating utensils and the other with snacks and soft drinks.

Sister Theresa Jardin's office is small but miraculously organized and spotless. "You can come down here and look for anything and it will be right in its place," said Reney, of the retreat's registrar and administrative assistant.

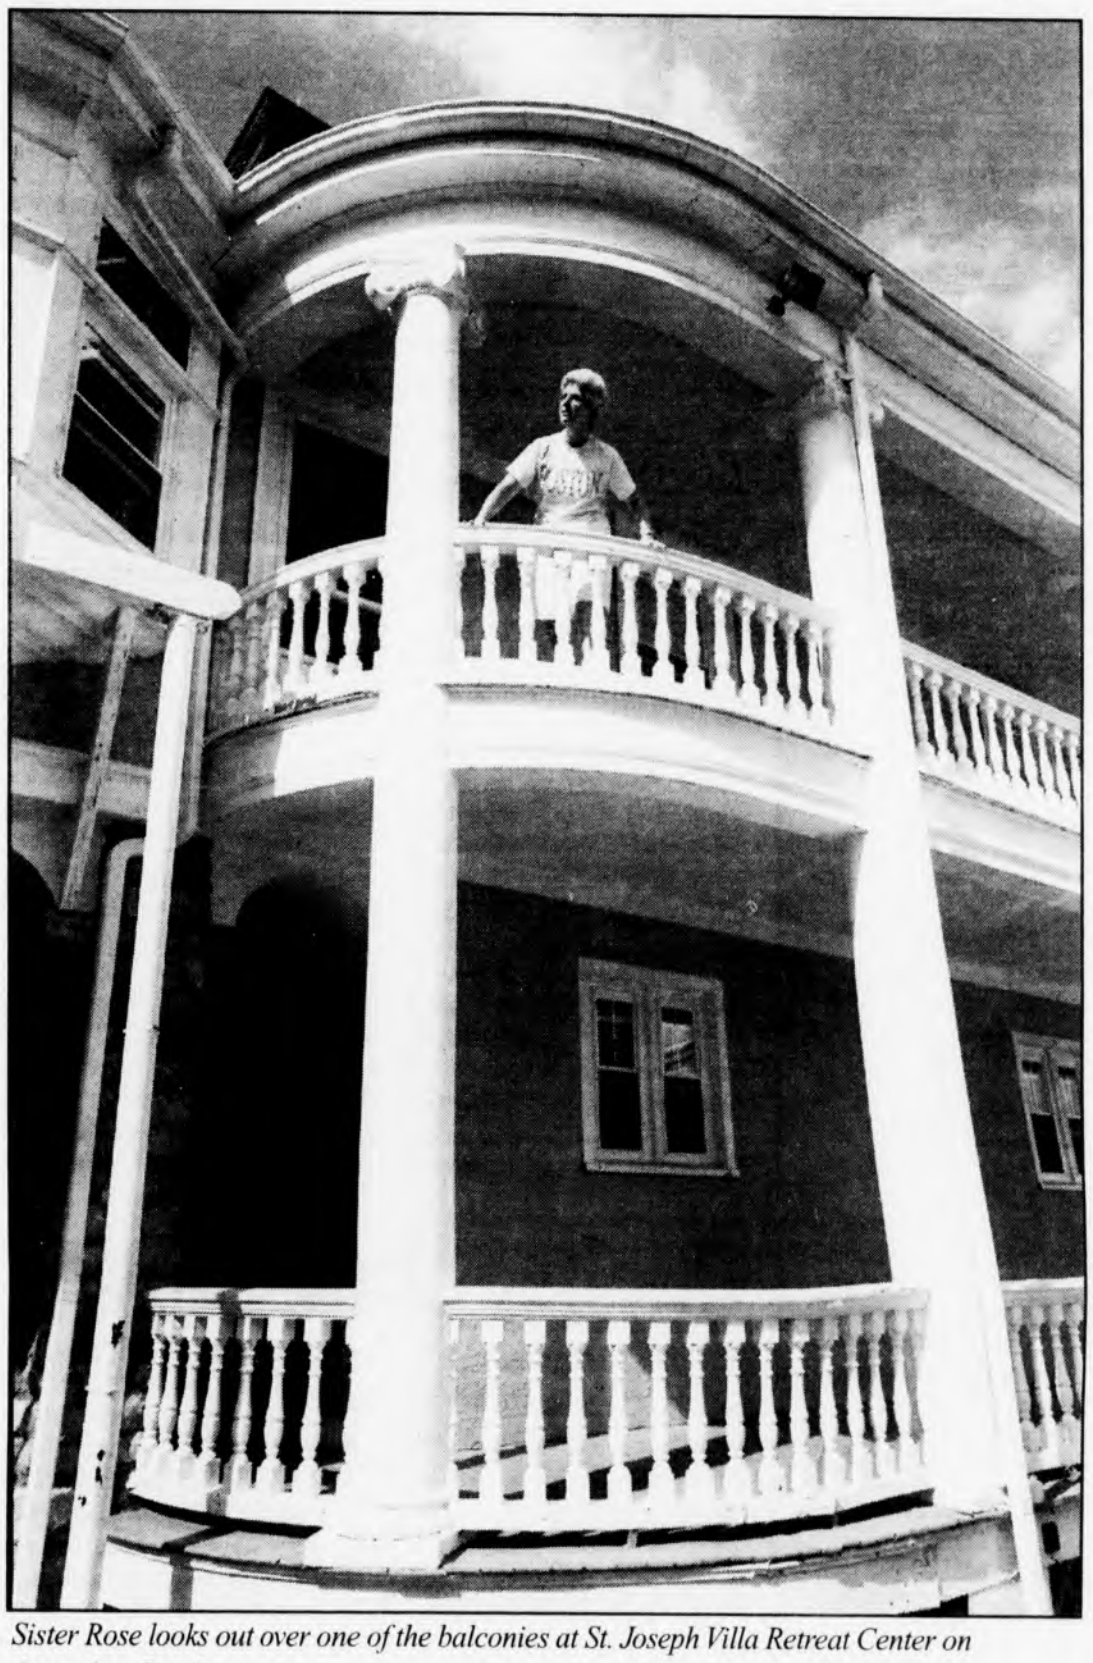
A quick peek in the library shows a working fireplace, a small TV—"Used only in the summer," defended Reney—books and a selection of social justice and spirituality publications. For the more esoterically inclined, there's "Parabola, a Magazine of Myth and Tradition" and portraits in an upstairs hall depicting, surprisingly, Dorothy Day of New York and Mohandes Ghandi in icon fashion with halos over their heads and Greek lettering in the background. When asked how it is that these social and ethical luminaries came to be depicted as saints, Reney responded, "The artist can do what he likes."

Further down the hall at the top of the stairs is a sketched rendering of the four sisters martyred in El Salvador; Jean Donovan, Maura Clark, Dorothy Cozzell and Ida Ford. "The picture is very powerful, I feel," said Reney. "It brings to mind how years have gone by since their lives were stopped short."

Colorful and multi-cultural images of women in thoughtful poses are also displayed.

Books, such as "Feminism Without Illusions", "The Language of Color" and "Feminine Mystique" line the shelves in the upstairs hall and audio cassettes are laid out on a corner table alongside an inviting easy-chair.

At the end of the hall is the chapel with leaded glass panes, a stone fireplace, wood paneling, and azure cushioned seats under the long windows. Two sisters are sitting in quiet contemplation there. "We had a priest in from Glastonbury Abbey this morning to lead morning prayer," said Reney, exiting the room.



Peeking into one of the bedroom doorways shows a pink-walled room, simply and comfortably decorated, with a chair facing the window to the blue ocean.

"A 1908 blue book lists this house as belonging to a Mr. And Mrs. John W. Farwell at 457 Beacon Street," said Reney, opening the pages to a scrapbook of the center's history. Prior to that, it was originally called Ahahden House when Samuel S. Spaulding bought the home in 1876. The house had been named for the signer of the first deed. Ahahden may have been the son of Chicketawbut, the chief of the indigenous tribe that once populated Cohasset and Hingham. The spacious house, later named after Spaulding, was the owner's summer home. As president of the Buffalo Street Railway, Spaulding and his family spent most of their time at their Buffalo, New York home.

The large scrapbook is filled with information about the retreat—photographs, articles and the like—depicting the history of the mansion and its occupants who, like Sister Gonzales-Maloney making her return visit after so many years, have filled its halls and cloistered garden.

"Most people, when they come ," explained Sister Barbara, "say that they feel a sense of peace from the minute they step inside. They appreciate the homecooking, the hospitality, that they're welcomed and made to feel at home. They also know that it's sacred space. I feel that there's a continuation from one group of people to the next—that the walls hold everyone's prayers."

For benefit tickets, write: Sisters of St. Joseph, 339 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset 02025 or call (781) 383-6024. Performance begins at 8 p.m., Aug. 8. (Supper is limited to the first 50 respondents.)

Some want to curb Cohasset village sidewalk plan

Robert Martin, whose insurance office window looks out across South Main Street, offering him sometimes heart-freezing views of mothers with strollers making their way along the street-level asphalt that runs the ledge of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and down to the Teen Center.

Martin doesn't believe that a curb is enough of a deterrent for the higher-sitting sport-utility vehicles in use today which he believes can easily ride over a six-inch curb. For that reason, he thinks it would be best to do away with the walkway entirely.

Richard Avery agreed with Martin, noting that the current narrowness of the street slows motorists down.

Exacerbating matters is the not uncommon appearance of limousines parked at the steep steps of St. Stephen's. Unaware of the church's parking lot, whole wedding parties can sometimes be seen huffing and puffing the climb to the church, described Roger Whitley, a resident and former chairman of the town advisory committee.

"Yes, it certainly inhibits traffic flow," conceded Village Revitalization Task Force chairman Dean Rizzo, discussing the walkway that runs alongside St. Stephen's. "It's a very tight roadway as it is. If you have the limos that do park there, especially during the normal business day when you have delivery trucks parking opposite, that restricts traffic flow safety, too. It's a very tough area. It has the potential to be a dangerous area at times when you have over-congestion. Doing the sidewalk is one way to provide a safer pedestrian-vehicle flow in that area and to try to take away some of the dangerous situations that occur.

"People say quite frequently that we've never had a serious accident there but I think a lot of people would agree that there have been some close calls. I'd hate to have us have regrets and have something happen and we will have passed up this opportunity to rectify that now. We have an opportunity to fix the problem to prevent something bad ever happening so why not take that step to do it?

"You do have usable buildings on that side of the street. There is access to the front stairs. A lot of people use that and will continue to use that no matter what you do there. I think the best solution and really the most practical way is to make it a safe passageway so that it's part of the village, part of the atmosphere and can work safely. I think with the readjustments of the width of the road and proper curbing, it can be made safe," he said.

"I think the best solution and really the most practical way is to make it a safe passageway so that it's part of the village, part of the atmosphere and can work safely."

— Dean Rizzo, village task force

But the walkway is not the only issue that many in the audience expressed concern about. Specifically, members of St. Stephen's and the church's admirers were worried about damage to the structure if the proposed removal of the ledge at the church's base to make room for a new sidewalk were to occur.

Many expressed disbelief that the ledge could be removed without harming the church's structure and especially its stained glass windows. Indeed, Rizzo said that he could not guarantee that nothing would happen to the windows.

However, Shipsky attempted to assuage fears about the possibility that the ledge would be removed by blasting. Shipsky's plan is to remove the ledge through an application of heat and then cold water. Should this not work, he would try a hydraulic splitter. Movement-sensitive instruments would be brought into the church to record the degree of vibration caused by the ledge work, in order to prevent the vibrations from reaching a point of causing damage.

Rizzo is not overly worried by the degree of dissent at this time. "We've been thinking about how to make these changes for some time now and most of these people are just now hearing the plans."

"There were a lot of interesting thoughts shared during the meeting," concluded Rizzo. "I think it's like with anything. It's a long process to convey what is actually being done and having a sort of overall understanding by everybody about what the project is about. We're trying to give the people who would be affected an understanding of the scope of the work and how things would be done. In turn, we're trying to understand as a committee everyone's needs. Hopefully, over time, continuing to talk things through will allow us to come to a good medium where everyone is comfortable with what's being done. I just encourage people to continue to express their thoughts, to think about the project and any ideas they may have to enhance our goals and efforts."

dwellings, members said. They said their earlier approval of a variance to allow the condos was tied to the design.

But Murphy's new plan, which incorporated suggested changes offered by the design review board, won unanimous approval Monday.

"The design review board recommends approval," said member Max Pounder, who pointed out the board met with Murphy twice including an on-site visit. "We're interested in continuing to work with him."

Changes included lessening the "impact of the verticality of the design," Pounder said, by eliminating the double gables. The center building has been moved back ten feet and an overhang which encroached into the minimum sideline setback on one of the buildings has been removed.

The zoning board also approved the addition of the decorative feature of non-load bearing columns to the roof overhangs.

Murphy bought the 54,000 square foot site this spring from Collins for $575,000. Collins had fought hard to win the right to build condos at the site. He initially wanted ten, then six, and finally reached a compromise with the zoning board which had wanted no more than four.

Plans are to house the five condos in three buildings; there will be two double units and a single unit. The condos, which back up to the Gulf River, will sell in the $420,000 to $490,000 range.

Murphy will raze the Quonset huts within the next few weeks. He looks forward to getting on with the project.

"Both the zoning and the design review boards were most helpful in the redesign of the units at 430 S. Main St.," Murphy said. "Their suggestions were most insightful and I appreciate their time on behalf of the town and myself."

Little Harbor Study summit scheduled for Aug. 12

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The town will hold a public hearing on the upcoming Little Harbor study Wednesday, Aug. 12 at 7:30 p.m. in town hall to solicit residents' comments on the project. Members of the board of selectmen, the sewer commission, the health board and Town Manager Mark Haddad will be on hand to discuss aspects of the "Work Statement" which outlines the reasons for the study and the methods to be used. If approved by town boards and the Department of Environmental Protection, the town will issue the work statement, which is basically an RFP (request for proposals) asking companies to bid on the project. The town will have one year to complete the study, and an additional six months to implement solutions.

But the public hearing is shaping up to be a battle between the sewer commission and other town boards. Members of the sewer commission are angry that they were not consulted about new information they say was included at the last minute in the latest draft of the "Work Statement." Sewer Commissioner Ted Guild said unless those "new" items are modified to the sewer commission's satisfaction or removed, the only topic worthy of discussion next week will be the impact of those inclusions.

"At the last minute, a number of substantive changes were made to the Work Statement without our knowledge and submitted to the state," Guild said. "The purpose of this is to maneuver and manipulate the town into a situation where we will be subject to further fines from the state. The board of health and the board of selectmen are trying to get done what town meeting would never approve."

The sewer commissioners are concerned that the scope of the project is being expanded far beyond Little Harbor. Guild pointed to numerous references to a town-wide watershed study, something that hasn't been approved by town meeting, he said.

Health board Chairman Kevin Ulmer said the Little Harbor Study came about because of the Second Amended Final Judgment's requirements that the town create a wastewater management plan for areas of town without sewer service. The town began a comprehensive plan by creating two priority districts: one on Lily Pond and one around Little Harbor. (The agreement for judgment is a legal contract between the town and state to solve Cohasset's long-term wastewater treatment woes.)

If approved by town boards and the Department of Environmental Protection, the town will issue the work statement and will have one year to complete the study and an additional six months to implement solutions.

But residents in the priority districts felt the town had singled them out. The town then agreed to sewer homes on Lily Pond and to initiate a study of Little Harbor to identify pollution sources. Shellfish beds have been closed for many years because of pollution from an unknown source, and algae beds have been growing out of control. The study will attempt to identify the types of pollution in the area, possible sources and potential solutions. The study does not guarantee that the town will sewer homes around Little Harbor.

"The algae may all be caused by lawn fertilizer, which would then force us to restrict lawn fertilizers," Ulmer said. "The study will also have to identify the source of bacteria contaminating shellfish beds. If there's a problem with nutrient loading, then new septic systems won't correct the problem and sewer pipes will be necessary. It all depends on the nature of the problem."

The sewer commission objected to many parts of the "Work Statement", including the opening statement which does not make reference to the Second Amended Final Judgment and the creation of priority districts. Also, the sewer commissioners are unhappy that the opening statement does not state that Lily Pond will be sewered as a priority district.

But the change that sewer commissioners found most upsetting were several references to a town-wide examination of wastewater treatment needs. The sewer commissioners have offered revisions to the "Work Statement" to remove those references because the scope of the "Work Statement" is meant to cover only Little Harbor.

But Haddad said the selectmen, the sewer commissioners, members of the health board and residents will have a chance to look at the latest revised "Work Statement" at the hearing and offer comments.

"We want the public to get a look at the statement," Haddad said. "We have to get this document to DEP by the Aug. 22 deadline. Mr. Guild has to understand it is the selectmen are working in conjunction with the sewer commission and the board of health."

Haddad added that the board of selectmen are the final signatories on the Second Amended Final Judgment and act on behalf of the town.

spoke of vague plans to divide the store, possibly for a health club, video store and a small supermarket. Officials from Tedeschi Realty Corporation, the owner of the plaza, did not return telephone calls to The Mariner.

According to figures available at the assessor's office, the plaza is comprised of 7.68 acres of commercially zoned land valued at $2.39 million. Tedeschi's Plaza has gone through many changes since it's construction in 1961-1962. It was originally the site of a Tedeschi's supermarket until the owner leased the store to Stop & Shop. Five or six years ago, Stop & Shop vacated the plaza for a new location on 3A and the store was subdivided to accommodate a number of stores. Woolworth's, which opened in 1962 as one of the plaza's original tenants, closed last year after the parent company succumbed to market forces and intense competition, leaving the strip mall without a major anchor store.

Curtis Liquors, which has been in the plaza for the past eight years, is the closest thing Tedeschi Plaza has to an anchor store. Manager Andy Hailer said Curtis started out as Cohasset liquors, then changed owners when Stop & Shop moved and former owner Peter Logan sold it to Rick Curtis. Curtis is a full-service liquor store specializing in fine wines. Logan has stayed on with Curtis as the company's wine specialist.

Hailer said he misses Woolworth's and his friends who worked there, but its closure had little effect on the liquor store. Business at Curtis remains solid, thanks to a strong local customer base from both Cohasset and Scituate.

Business is good at Tedeschi Plaza off Route 3A despite the fact that the former Woolworth's store is still empty.

Brian Noble is one of the co-owners of Noble's, a camera shop and Hallmark store with other locations in Norwell, Kingston and Hingham. Noble's has been located in Tedeschi Plaza since 1966, offering cameras, cards, and film-developing. Like Hailer, Noble misses Woolworth's for reasons other than its purpose as an anchor store.

"The need for Woolworth's was at the end of its era," Noble said. "It had a lunch counter and I liked eating there as a kid."

Noble considers himself part of a dying breed of independently run, medium-sized businesses.

"There are few locally owned businesses left in the U.S.," Noble said. "even in the camera business now, there are two large companies, Ritz and Wolf, and a few small businesses. But we have a good location in Cohasset, and being on the Scituate line offers us the best of both worlds, Being on Route 3A doesn't hurt and the town has been good to us over the years."

Mark Cirone, one of the co-owners of Cohasset Jewelers, has also benefited from the plaza's location. He said his business is thriving without the presence of a large anchor store.,

"We're a full-service discount jeweler, and a destination store," Cirone said. "My business grows by advertising and word-of-mouth. I don't need a lot of foot traffic through the plaza necessarily."

Cohasset Jeweler's has been in Tedeschi Plaza for 17 years since relocating from the jeweler's building in Boston. Cirone said he and his brother maintain a thriving business by offering first-class jewelry and china at great prices. While large retailers sell jewelry stamped out of cookie-cutter molds, Cirone offers more personalized pieces.

"When Filene's has a one-day jewelry sale, there prices are the same as our everyday prices," Cirone said. "We're an aggressive discounter. We also specialize in estate sales and are planning a massive $1.5 million estate sale on Aug. 6,7 and 8."

The owner of Victoria's Pizza was the only merchant who missed the customers brought in by Woolworth's presence. Peter Kostopoulos of Cambridge bought Victoria's Pizza six year's ago. Kostopoulos said he has lost some business after Woolworth's closed because fewer people travel to the plaza. He also cited large development elsewhere on 3A as a factor drawing traffic away from Tedeschi Plaza. Despite these challenges, Kostopoulos has maintained a profitable business thanks to local regulars and the all-important location between two towns.

"I offer good food at good prices, I advertise a lot, and I offer a lot of deals through coupons available in The Mariner, on the back of Stop & Shop receipts and in Valu-Pack mailings," Kostopoulos said. "Cohasset is a nice place with nice people. I wouldn't be here if it wasn't a good place to conduct business."

Kostopoulos has also heard the rumors about Tedeschi Realty sub-dividing the Woolworth's space. But he has heard a lot of rumors since the store closed and said he would believe the latest ones when something real materialized. Until then, he'll be busy offering good values and service like all the merchants at Tedeschi Plaza.

Two new Cohasset school buses to be leased

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The school department will lease two new school buses to replace a couple of 1987 buses in need of extensive repair.

According to Supt. Stephen Hart, it will cost $8,000 to lease each bus. The total cost would come to $16,000 per year over a five-year period, or about $80,000 in all. A new bus costs about $100,000, he said.

It was only two years ago that the schools' entire fleet failed inspection, though only due to a need for minor repairs. "That was a big story then," said Hart.

So to prevent a closing down of the fleet again, Hart traded in the two 1987 buses to help cover the leasing cost of the new buses.

Hart said some of the pluses to leasing rather than purchasing include: the school would have difficulty in purchasing a new bus this late in the summer in time for a September; the five-year leasing period for buses would mean that buses wouldn't be around long enough to require substantial maintenance costs; and there would be less chance of having one bus out of service for repairs.

"It's an option. The good thing about five-year leasing is that it's a predictable expense. You can turn the buses over every five years and not have to contend with repairs on the older buses on the fleet."
SUPERINTENDENT STEPHEN HART

Hart did not rule out moving toward leasing rather than owning the bus fleet.

"It's an option. The good thing about five-year leasing is that it's a predictable expense. You can turn the buses over every five years and not have to contend with repairs on the older buses on the fleet. Older buses require a lot of maintenance," he said.

The oldest bus in the fleet is now a 1989 model.

Another issue connected with Cohasset schools' bus fleet for some time now has been making buses handicap-accessible.

In the July 23 school board meeting, Hart stressed that "there is not much demand for a handicap-accessible bus, although there will always be a need for a smaller handicap-accessible carrier."

While a smaller bus may be adequate to provide transport for those students with special needs, at the meeting school committee member Joseph said those children would miss out on the morning commute with their classmates.

Chairman Rick Shea, however, pointed out in a telephone interview that making the larger buses handicap-accessible does not mean that they would be able to service all students who now use the small bus. The smaller buses are able to provide front-door service that the larger carriers are not able to provide because they cannot maneuver on narrow streets and driveways.

"I expect that this will continue to be an issue," said Shea.

Cedar Street kennel seeks more dog runs

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

John and Christine Millar haven't given up on their plans to build more dog runs at their kennel oat 249 Cedar St.

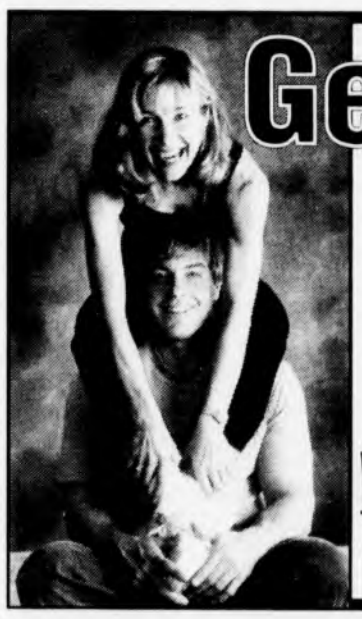
The zoning board denied their request in April because of concerns over noise and that the proposed structure would be ten feet closer to the lot line on one side.

In the revised plans, the Millars offered to drop the proposed east wing so the structure would not further encroach into the sideline setback.

The Millars said they would still install sound-proofing measures including an angled roof on the concrete-walled structure and sound panels to mitigate the noise for the proposed 15 additional dog runs in the west wing. The structure would include basement-sized windows for ventilation.

They do not plan to increase the number of dogs. The existing kennel, which was built in 1983, has cages for 60 dogs but only half those cages have dog runs.

(Town by-law requires kennels to be at least 200 feet from the lot line. A variance was granted in August of 1982 placing the then proposed kennel/office building 40 feet from the easterly lot line. At that time, minimization of noise was a primary consideration in granting this relief, since the 30 covered dog runs would be placed in an open courtyard surrounded on two sides by dog cages, and on one side by an office wing).



At the zoning board meeting this week, the Millars initially proposed adding 30 additional dogs runs but that would have meant keeping the east wing in the plans. This was problematical for the zoning board because of the setback problem and after a denial, applicants cannot resubmit plans to the zoning board within two years unless those plans have changed significantly. This prevents repetitive applications geared to wear the board down, members said.

Heidi Condon, representing the Millars, said they would agree to drop the east wing. She explained the additional runs would reduce the staff handling of the dogs which now must be walked by hand.

The zoning board continued the hearing until Sept. 14 to allow time to hear what the planning board has to say. The matter is before the planning board on Aug. 12.

AROUND TOWN

SAILING IN IRELAND

If you are wondering why you haven't seen Torrey Androski "around town" lately, there is a mighty good reason. She is in Ireland sailing! See, she just graduated from Milton, and was part of the team that sailed to first place in the Nationals; that gave them the opportunity to go to Ireland to compete in the World Championships. What a wonderful way to see Ireland, as well as the feeling of pride that she and her teammates must be feeling to earn a spot there. We'll let you know more about it upon her return, but we're already very proud of you, Torrey! By the way, Torrey is the daughter of Lee and Peter Androski.

NEW ARRIVAL

Let's all give a grand Cohasset welcome to Miaih Ludlow Jones, the brand-new sister of Madison (who is 19 months old). Their mom and dad, Heather and Mike, are bursting with pride (with good reason, they have beautiful daughters), as are Miaih's grandparents — her maternal grandparents are Marsha and Jeff Ludlow, her paternal grandparents are Suzanne and Cliff Jones. We look forward to seeing all of you strolling with Miaih "around town," cannot wait to sneak a peek!

VO-TECH HONOR ROLL

The South Shore Vocational Technical High School has announced the honor roll for the third trimester of the 1997-98 school year, and we have three students who are newsworthy in that department — Michael Kennedy, grade 12, earned high honors; Gregory Connolly, grade 11, and Kristen Moore, grade 9, both earned themselves spots on the honor roll. Congrats go to all three of you, keep up the good work!

DEAN'S LIST

Kristin Lee Niessink, daughter of Deborah and Jan Niessink of Cohasset, was named to the dean's list for the spring 1998 semester at Saint Michael's College. Kristin is a junior biology major at the college, located in the Burlington area of Vermont.

MUSIC CIRCUS

Ran into Beth Salvador last week; she was at the South Shore Music Circus with her husband and their son, watching "Beauty and the Beast!" It was great to see her and great to hear her remember all of the time she worked at the theater! It is truly amazing how many lives have been touched by that organization, and the stories they remember about the various stars are fun to hear again!

COLLEGE GRADS

Hats off to Lauren P. Almeida and Kevin M. Bishop; both received their degrees from the University of Rhode Island during the commencement exercises May 17. Here's wishing you both the best in the job market, may you achieve every success you strive for!

ON STAGE

Diane Purdy's Children's Theatre Workshop, Inc., presented its summer camp production of "Mist Over the Mississippi!" at the Woodward School in Quincy Square July 24. Jim French of Cohasset was a member of the cast — from all accounts the play was wonderful, as was Jim!

Sarah Kirk, a senior at University of Vermont in Burlington, has been named to the dean's list again this term — this time with a 4.0!

PERFECT!

Sarah Kirk, a senior at University of Vermont in Burlington, has been named to the dean's list again this term — this time with a 4.0! Besides working hard at her own class work, Sarah has been teaching assistant for courses in her religion and sociology double major. This fall she will begin working on her honors thesis. Congratulations on a great job, Sarah, we are all very proud of you!

PREP SCHOOL GRAD

The Loomis Chaffee School in Windsor, Conn., announced that Matthew Rossi received his diploma Friday, June 5. Matthew is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Brian K. Rossi of Cohasset. A varsity football and lacrosse athlete at Loomis Chaffee, he was named to the All-Erickson League football team as a running back in 1997. Matthew will attend Fairfield University in the fall, and it is certain we will be hearing more about him in the future.

FACULTY HONORS

Jeremiah Stevenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon McKay Stevenson Jr. of 13 North Main St., earned faculty honors for the spring semester at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. Stevenson is a member of the Class of 1999 and is majoring in studio arts at Trinity. He is a graduate of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School.

COLLEGE SCHOLAR

Theodore W. Noon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas W. Noon, has been named a College Scholar for the spring term at Middlebury College. The College Scholar represents the highest level of academic achievement at the liberal arts college in Vermont.

LIBRARY CORNER

The children's room

We talked to a number of children around Cohasset to find out what reading selections they were making at the Paul Pratt Library this summer and here are a few responses: Laura Campedelli, Grade 4, "Laura Ingalls Wilder Series" and "The Anastasia Series;" Torey Hart, Grade 2, "The Snowball" and "Green Eggs and Ham;" Caitlin O'Connell, Grade 5, "Books by John Bellairs;" Ryan Poh, Grade 4, "Goosebumps" books and his brother Eric, Grade 1, "The Magic School Bus Books;" Emily Savage, Grade 5, "The Wind and the Willows;" and Molly Trisler, Grade 5, "The Phantom Tollbooth," by Norton Juster. Look for the roving reporter the next time you visit the library.

A big thank you to the Mark and Lynn DeGiacomo family for their recent donation to the library of more than 20 "Home Video" series tapes for children. This is a particularly good series for preschoolers with a few of the following titles available for a three-day loan: "Corduroy and Other Stories;" Maurice Sendak's "Really Rosie;" and "Amazing Stories;" which includes the classic "The Five Chinese Brothers" story. If your family has videos or books on tapes they wish to donate to the library, call Suzanne Terry, children's librarian, at 383-1348.

There are also great magazine selections in the children's room. Some of the better known and fun titles are Boy's Life, American Girl, Teen, Sport's Illustrated for Kids, Sesame Street and MAD magazine. On the educational and still fun side are Calliope-World History for Kids and Odyssey-Adventures in Science. All are available for a seven-day loan from the library.

Finally, come in and visit Mushu, the Disney mini-dragon star of "Mulan." The more than three-foot "fire-breathing" stuffed character will welcome you at the bottom of the children's room stairway. He was generously given to the library by Carol Pope, daughter of Paul Pratt librarian Susan Pope. Thanks, Carol, for the great addition to the children's room.

New artwork display

Bill Mattern is the current artist on display at the Paul Pratt Library. Mattern has a wonderful combination of watercolors and photography which he says emphasize "the beauty of nature and man working in harmony in nature." A sailor and sailing racer since childhood, Mattern has been a local sailmaker for more than 40 years. He began as a photographer more than 20 years ago and won many prizes and awards. For the past six years, Mattern has been painting with watercolors and studied under artists such as Marshal Joyce, noted marine painter. Everyone will recognize the watercolor scenes from Minot Light to local beaches. A unique technique developed by Mattern utilizes four images of photographs on one slide of Cohasset Common. This exhibition will be on display until the end of August.

What groups are reading

The Linden and Friends reading group is meeting late this month to discuss "The Divine Secrets of The Ya Ya Sisterhood," by the award-winning writer Rebecca Wells. This is an entertaining and poignant novel about relationships between mothers, daughters and close childhood friends. The book is full of eccentric characters and equally "odd" situations that will make you both laugh and cry. If you have a book club and/or a book selection that you might want to share with the community, call Catherine Davis at 383-2570.

Super summer salad

MAY I PRESENT

SALLYANN CHATTERTON

The Cohasset Village Farmers' Market is enjoying its best season yet; you can purchase fresh fruits, vegetables, flowers, baked goods, etc. that are outstanding! Here is a recipe for a wonderful salad, it disappears so quickly that you won't believe it! You will be asked to bring it to every event or "potluck supper" you attend! And, all of the really fresh ingredients available right now; it makes it even better! Try it!

SUPER SUMMER SALAD

3/4 cup vegetable oil
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
2 garlic cloves, minced
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 bunches (about 1 pound each) romaine, torn
2 cups chopped tomatoes
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Swiss cheese
2/3 cup slivered almonds, toasted, optional
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
8 bacon strips, cooked and crumbled
1 cup Caesar salad croutons

In a jar with a tight-fitting lid, combine oil, lemon juice, garlic, salt and pepper; cover and shake well. Chill. In a bowl, toss romaine, tomatoes, Swiss cheese, almonds if desired, Parmesan cheese and bacon. Shake dressing, pour over salad and toss. Add croutons and serve immediately. YIELD: 14 servings.

1001 adoptions

When Kermit and Jasmine left their kennels for a new home on Saturday, they marked a major milestone for the Eleanor Haughey Animal Shelter. The lively shepherd-mix brother and sister dogs were the 1000th and 1001st adoptions from Scituate's busy "no kill" shelter which also serves Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

Rescued with their mother and four siblings by a Kingston family when they were just eight weeks old, Kermit and Jasmine had been shelter residents for almost a year. Many offered to adopt one or the other since they arrived in Scituate, but shelter director Joan McCafferty and the many volunteers who keep the shelter spotless and running smoothly, held out for an owner who would take both. A Halifax man who had planned on taking one, took the inseparable duo home this weekend.

But Kermit and Jasmine's success story is just one in a thousand for the shelter. Since opening nearly six years ago, the shelter has housed, cared for and found homes for 692 cats, 289 dogs and 19 miscellaneous pets including rabbits, guinea pigs and cockatiels.

McCafferty and her staff are delighted with their accomplishments and grateful to those who support the shelter in so many ways — but they're not resting on their laurels. It's business as usual at the shelter this week with 58 cats and a half dozen dogs in residence currently.

The 40 or so volunteers do an amazing job walking dogs, cleaning cages and kennels, washing dishes and taking out the trash, but McCafferty said more volunteers are always needed. And while shelter volunteer Cheryl Coates' food drive at local grocery stores has kept the shelters shelves stocked with canine and feline cuisine —so much so that Scituate is able to share some items with other shelters in need — McCafferty said medical bills continue to soar. Grants like the Harpley Foundation family grant and shelter sponsored fund-raisers like the Dog Fashion Show, Shelter Yard Sale and this year's very successful Scituate House Tour, help pay the bills. But they're not enough to cover the medical tab. Last year the shelter racked up a nearly $25,000 in veterinary costs. The shelter staff makes sure that all pets eligible for adoption are spayed or neutered and have the appropriate vaccinations and even though local vets give the shelter a discount, keeping pets healthy isn't cheap.

And some animals need more care than others when they arrive at the shelter. In good health now, Bess, a seven-month-old Labrador retriever- mix is on the mend from a case of mange — a skin condition. Crash, a three-month-old kitten, was hit by a car on Route 3A near Booth Hill Road. With a broken jaw and a diagnosis that suggested paralysis in its hind quarters and possible permanent blindness, Crash's prospects looked grim. Amazingly, quick vet treatment and some TLC from the shelter helped Crash bounce back. He's now bounding around with only a slight limp, has recovered his eyesight and is already eating solid food again.

Happy endings like this make the job very worthwhile and rewarding, McCafferty notes. Lending a hand can also be gratifying. A full-time commitment isn't required. Stop by the shelter and check it out. If you can help in any way, lend a hand. During this weekend's Scituate Heritage Days celebration, the shelter will raffle a whole host of prizes including $500 cash, a one-night stay at a Maine inn, two European facials at a local salon and a hand-painted corner hutch crafted by Cheryl Coates. Take a chance and support the shelter. You don't have to be an animal lover to appreciate the good work McCafferty and the shelter volunteers do each and every day.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Abuse of Bancroft Hall

To the Editor:

Renovation of the Lightkeepers Residence into a popular and attractive function facility demonstrated wonderful community spirit for which the townspeople should be proud. But there is a dark side.

Out-of-towners who use Bancroft Hall for private functions pay considerably more than do Cohasset residents, and the difference is important to our ability to provide the hall free to non-profit groups and at nominal fees to Cohasset residents. Out-of-towners respect our rules and premises. They honor the comprehensive agreement (contract) that all users must sign, especially the requirement that they employ a caterer or bar service with TIPS qualified bartenders and appropriate liquor liability insurance, if alcohol is to be served. (The Agreement specifically forbids the sale of alcoholic drinks for cash, drink tickets or any other means).

Sad to say, most of our headaches come from organizations that get the hall free of charge, and from Cohasset residents. Failure to clean up, failure to adhere to the agreed upon time of use, failure to conform to the agreement, may illustrate that people don't respect what they don't pay much for. For example, a recent Cohasset function managed to seriously stain the seats of no less than 15 of our new and costly chairs.

Some people get unduly assertive with our custodian or booking persons, possibly in the belief that "I'm a Cohasset tax payer and this is town property."

But the greatest annoyance is oft-displayed unwillingness to accept our strict rules relative to serving of alcohol. Granted, it costs money to hire a qualified bar service or caterer, and it may seem overkill for a small party. But it is unacceptably risky and ultimately very costly to lack liquor liability insurance and/or to use an amateur bartender who hasn't the training to avoid the underaged or the adults whose intake exceeds their ability to cope.

The town is well served if we can maintain a financially viable operation, providing a function facility at nominal cost to locals and at no cost to non-profits. But the viability could be severely damaged by failure to avoid risk relative to liquor. And behavior that increases our custodial and maintenance expense will result in higher fees. Sure, we could soak out-of-towners for local fecklessness, but surely we are better than that.

Sidewalk improvement supported

To the Editor:

I would like to add my support to the good work that all of the volunteers have done on the Downtown Revitalization Committee. The changes planned for the sidewalk area below St. Stephen's are a welcome change for that very dangerous stretch of walkway. I use that walk several times a day and see the following hazards:

- No physical separation between the pedestrians and the street, only a white painted line; cars often ride over the walk/street line, endangering pedestrians.
- The pedestrians and oncoming cars cannot see each other around the curve due to the ledge outcropping.
- Dirt and plants encroach on the sidewalk reducing its effective width to a foot or less (as is the case now).

The proposed changes will clearly make this busy sidewalk a significantly safer place for all pedestrians.

How could this have ever happened?

A bright, young South Shore teenager was killed on the recently opened Old Colony rail line. The tragic accident occurred when the 15-year-old drove her bicycle around a lowered gate after a southbound train passed, assuming she was safe to cross while never seeing the northbound train that instantly killed her. Some speculate that the excessive speed of the train moments before the crash contributed to the train arriving at the precise moment that it did.

MY VIEW

NANCY BUCKLEY

However, neither the judgment of the child nor the driving skills of the veteran engineer can account for this tragedy. The fault is in the planning, engineering and design of this one track system built on a train route laid out before the Civil War which crosses 46 streets at grade level on the Plymouth and Middleboro branches. The responsibility lies with those who made the executive decision to open the line less than a year ago, knowing that laws and regulations were being ignored that should have halted the project.

Federal legislation was passed in 1994 because of the alarming number of deaths at intersections called grade crossings, where streets and roads cross active rail lines. Research provided from the Federal Railroad Administration prompted the U.S. Congress to implement the Grade Crossing Safety Act of 1994. Because of this identified public safety risk, communities across our nation are being urged to close crossings, and federal tax dollars are being awarded as an incentive for every crossing that is closed. This legislation in and of itself should have put the brakes on the reopening of the Old Colony project. Where is the logic to using U.S. tax dollars to close crossings while using Massachusetts tax dollars to open new ones?

A state law passed in 1996 requiring that a state-of-the-art four gate system of safety gates be installed at every crossing on any new rail line built in Massachusetts. These are called quadrant gates and are designed with two gates on both sides of the road which come down and meet in the middle to prevent a person from going around the single gate. Yet the Cellucci Administration allowed the Old Colony rail line to open in 1997 without installing the gates.

How could this have happened? Pathetic excuses about testing and cost were accepted by disinterested reporters without challenge despite this flagrant violation. The Old Colony project was sold with great fanfare by a public relations campaign that minimized the risks and exaggerated the benefits of this transportation system. Ignorance is bliss, and to misinformed South Shore residents this project seemed like a swell idea.

Could the public be so simple-minded in its legitimate need for improved public transportation, that it accepted the public relations spin, that the Old Colony trains would relieve traffic congestion by removing thousands of people from their cars? While that statement is accurate, it represents less than 1 percent of all South Shore commuters. The 5,000 a day riding each way on those two lines are being drawn from a population base of close to a million people. The risk to the 99 percent of the population living, working and traveling within the communities through which the train passes far outweighs the benefit to the few who ride it.

An educated populace, fully aware of the environmental and safety risks associated with diesel-powered trains traveling at speeds of up to 70 miles per hour through quaint, quiet neighborhoods, would have rejected this project with vigor especially if they knew that a viable alternative could be built.

· Extending the Red Line as far as Derby Street in Hingham using the median strip of Route 3 was proposed by the MBTA in 1969 but was dropped from consideration in the 1980s when federal funding dried up for new transit lines. The state, following the money trail, abandoned the Red Line extension and shifted their efforts to the Old Colony in order to receive the federal funding available for restoration of lines on existing railbeds.

However, in the early 1990s it flipped once again, reinstating federal money for new transportation systems. At that point, the Red Line extension should have been resurrected because it would be

- safer because it would have its own continuously fenced right of way;
- quieter because it does not cross any streets eliminating the need to sound a warning horn;
- less polluting because it is electric;
- able to provide parking in garages built using the air space above the highway;
- able to provide rapid transit every 10 to 12 minutes, giving commuters what they really want which is more opportunities to get in and out of the city unlike the limited one track Old Colony system with its limited schedule.

While one family grieves, the enormity of their loss weighs heavily on those of us who have studied this project. While successfully blocking the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony rail line from being built by utilizing the deep pockets of Hingham to engage Washington attorneys, The National Trust for Historic Preservation, the Army Corps of Engineers, the Environmental Protection Agency and others, tying the project up for years in an endless cycle of studies and lawsuits, it is with tremendous sorrow that one questions where these lead government agencies were when the Old Colony project was being built through South Shore towns with fewer resources.

There were no profiles in courage here in Massachusetts from selectmen to legislators, right up to the governor in the corner office of the Statehouse. Every one of them were discussing mitigation for the disruption the Old Colony would cause when they should have been insisting on alternatives. It is a depressing comparison that South Boston politicians showed more chutzpah stopping a football stadium than South Shore politicians did with a serious public safety issue.

What can one do with the frustration and anger of knowing this last accident should have been prevented? There are steps that people can take. Vote to remove those in public office who were responsible for pressing forward with this project.

As we brace for the next inevitable accident, help communicate the unified message that we on the South Shore demand that a safe, efficient, neighborhood-free transportation system be developed using the median strip of Route 3. Do this through letters to the editor and by calling the governor's office. The state of California recently abandoned a transit project because of public outcry despite having already spent one billion dollars on it.

Then visualize the Old Colony railbed converted someday to a rail trail that would be utilized by walkers, runners, bicyclists and cross country skiers as has been done on the North Shore and Cape Cod.

And "Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world. Indeed, it is the only thing that ever has."

What's the score, dammit? The score!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

"Sports Department. How can I help you?" "Do you have the score of last night's Sox game?

"I'm sure we do. Let me look it up for you."

"It should be right there on the first page. It's the middle of the baseball season, you know."

"Not necessarily. There's a lot of important things going on in the sports world today. Take Mo Vaughan's contract, for instance."

"Do I have to?"

"There's a big story about it on the first page. How he turned down a four-year contract for $37 million because he was insulted by it. How the Sox had him trailed by a private investigator."

"Does it happen to mention the score?"

"All I want are the numbers. You know, how many runs the Sox scored and how many runs the other team scored. By the way, who did they play last night?"

"I'm looking. I'm looking."

"All I want are the numbers. You know, how many runs the Sox scored and how many runs the other team scored. By the way, who did they play last night?"

"I don't know. It doesn't say."

"The score should be there on the second page, right under the American League standings."

"Oh, we don't have room for the standings anymore. We save them for the Sunday paper and give the space to the really big sports stories during the week."

"What's the big story on page two?"

"Ben Coates, of course. You know, the Patriots' tight end. He was in court for assaulting his former girl friend. And we've got long sidebars recalling what happened to Dave Meggett and Wilfredo Cordero, too."

"Look. Never mind the score. I'll settle for just who won. Maybe somebody leaked that information to you at the water cooler?"

"No. We only talk about the important sports stories. Like this one here about the big drug scandal on the Tour de France bike race. Did you know that 133 riders tore off their numbers and refused to race?"

"That's on page three, eh?

"Yep."

"Who won the race?"

"It doesn't say. But here's a story on page four about Mike Tyson trying to get his boxing license back. He lost it for biting off Evander Holifield's ear, you know."

"He win?"

"I don't think so, but I could look it up for you."

"Don't bother. I'm still interested in the Sox score, though."

"It's not here on page five either. But there's a nice story about Casey Martin. He's the golfer with the bad leg who sued and won the right to ride a golf cart in tournaments on the PGA tour."

"Oh. How did he do in the tournament?"

"Doesn't say."

"I still need the score of the Sox game. How about page six?"

"That's the Peyton Manning page. He signed for $48 million to play quarterback for the Indianapolis Colts. Think of it. And he gets $11.6 million of it as bonus money this year.

"What's on page seven?

"Let's see now. Oh, oh. That's the obituary page. I guess we didn't have the score."

"I guess you didn't."

"Say, I know what you can do. Call the ball park. They ought to know."

HEALTH NOTES

A newsletter created by a volunteer staff issued periodically by the Board of Health.

The Little Harbor Study

On August 12, at 7:30 PM in the Town Hall, there will be a public hearing on the Cohasset Little Harbor Study scheduled to begin this fall and continue through 1999.

The purpose of the Study will be to determine the sources of pollution to Little Harbor from septic tanks, and other sources, and to determine its nutrient loading which contributes to the growth of algae and other plant life, eventually killing all marine life in the harbor. One important objective of the study is to eventually open Little Harbor shellfish beds again.

The study will:

Assess septic systems bordering the harbor for proper operation and to detect effluents. This assessment will not trigger any Title 5 or other regulatory requirements.

Obtain water samples at selected sites to determine whether Little harbor meets state standards for coastal water bodies of its type.

Review and analyze the data and make recommendations for reducing pollution entering the waterway.

Homeowners will be sent a letter requesting permission for the successful contractor to enter their property and assess the condition and operation of their septic system and look for other sources of pollution entering Little harbor. If they agree, a date will be established and the assessment will be made. The homeowner will be given a report of what is found, but will not be subject to any regulatory requirements. Also the assessment will not serve as an inspection for the purposes of transferring title to the property.(Title 5 Inspection)

Based on the findings from this study, the town will develop a plan to deal with any sources of pollution that are found.

Septics, Sewers, or Something else

On September 16 at 6:30 until 10:00 PM at the High School Cafeteria, the Cohasset Board of Health will be sponsoring a workshop on wastewater management alternatives.

The purpose of the workshop is to inform the town about wastewater treatment options which will save money, provide fair and equal treatment for everybody, and ensure healthy wastewater disposal.

The workshop will consist of exhibits of modern wastewater treatment systems, sewer technology, advanced/innovative septic systems, and engineering solutions which can be safe economical and effective for homeowners in towns like Cohasset..

A series of lectures will be held on the topics listed below.

Innovative/Alternative Septic Systems

Combined sewer hookups

Alternative Sewer systems

Alternative wastewater treatment systems - The 100 Pond Street Experience

The Wastewater Commission and Distributed Wastewater Management or Do we really need to have an inspection every time we sell a house?

What do pumping records tell us?

Maintaining Septic systems; Septic system additives - the true story

Townwide Wastewater Management, Fair and equal treatment for everybody.

Speakers will include an introduction by Kevin Ulmer Chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health various experts from industry, the DEP and others involved in the preservation of our healthy environment.

There will be exhibits of innovative systems by vendors who will have handouts and brochures.

If you want to know more about wastewater options in this time of discussions about sewers and septics, come to this meeting. It could save you big Money.

Martin proposes alternative school fund-raising

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

School committee member Patricia Martin wants to raise more dollars for Cohasset schools through alternative funding.

Martin was involved in identifying sources of alternative funding in Princeton, NJ. where she used to live.

"Cohasset is similar to Princeton where I was successful in finding and establishing alternative means of funding for the schools there," she said.

Although apart from property taxes, the school department receives funding from the Parent Student Organization (PSO) and the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF), Martin would like to go outside the community to corporations, state and federal government, foundations, and by applying for grants and the like.

"The PSO is a fine organization and does a tremendous job at fundraising. I just want to explore other options," explained Martin.

School baard chairman Rick Shea gave the idea high marks.

"This has been something she's expressed an interest in ever since she became a school committee member in April," he said. "The benefit of alternative funding is that an increased amount of revenue can be obtained outside the normal state aid and tax base.

"The amount we raise every year is terrific," said Shea. "We just need to broaden the bases. It's not that easy to attract that outside funding for a town like Cohasset. You have to use the right approach."

When she goes before the committee this week, Martin would like to propose some of her ideas to fellow committee members.

"The PSO people are dedicated to their group and comfortable with what they're doing. We'd hopefully be bringing in new people to draw upon, like people from the Chamber of Commerce, for instance, or the police department, or even people working for corporations that are privy to how best to approach companies for donations," said Martin. "In Princeton, people wanted to see their money going back into their community and one example of how to do that here is have, for example, a Mother's Day plant sale where the plants you buy benefit you and the school."

Martin would like to see these changes occur, she explained, because "we can't keep tapping into the tax base of the Cohasset community. We just had the facility audit that will put (more) on the tax platter. But what if we want computers or to expand the music program? We can't keep taxing the people in town. Fund-raising is a means of 'voluntary taxation'."

For now, Martin is hopeful that she will get support for her ideas from the school committee. "I'm hoping I can convince them to at least take a chance. What's the worst we can do? Find some money and start funding things!"

Currently, there are 40 or so standing sub-committees in Cohasset, as was pointed out by school committee member Joseph McElroy at the July 23 meeting. He said that the sub-committees' efforts might not always be in sync.

Shea was sensitive to those concerns.

"I think there's a feeling that everyone's efforts could be leveraged with more coordination," ventured Shea. "Even just within school department., more coordination would be helpful. It's something I support. I think Pat will develop a proposal and what we need to consider is what would the composition of this be, who would they report to—the school committee? The town? Plus, there should be a charter. But these are just organizational details."

Liquor license policy still in limbo

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

A query at last week's selectmen's meeting brought into question the legality of liquor being served at the Lightkeepers Residence. The Lightkeepers is town property and none of the selectmen recalled a liquor license having been obtained for the functions there. Town manager Mark Haddad said that he would find out more about the issue by the board's Aug. 11 meeting.

Since that time, R. Murray Campbell, president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, has backed the legality of CLC's liquor policy.

Campbell said caterers or bartender services at the Lightkeepers Residence must have a liquor liability policy that also lists the Lightkeepers Corporation as an additional insured party; the bartender must be TIPS certified (TIPS is a training program for responsible liquor serving); alcohol may not be served or consumed by persons under age 21; liquor cannot be served after 10:30 p.m. and a per drink fee is prohibited.

Maurice Del Vendo, chief of the Investigative Unit at Massachusetts Alcohol Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) clarified the agency's position.

Del Vendo said that a caterer and public property landlord will not need a license so long as "the person holding the function applies for a one-day license for that hall. This is the way it's supposed to be done."

Complicating matters even more is that the caterer "cannot buy the alcohol himself. It has to be bought by the person who wants the shindig," said Del Vendo. "Also, the caterers have to have a transportational license to pick the liquor up for the person who is leasing the facility."

Haddad hasn't heard back from the ABCC yet but expects to have an answer for the selectmen in time for next week's meeting.

Haddad isn't overly concerned about the matter.

"Murray (Campbell) talked to me about what's going on and how the lightkeepers' goes about its business," said Haddad. "I'm comfortable with what's going on there."

Mental preparedness a must for the elite gymnast

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

Sports injuries are a part of the game.

But,when it comes to a sport like gymnastics those injuries can quickly turn from the nagging to the tragic.

Such was the case at the Goodwill Games in New York recently when Chinese gymnast Sang Lan, 17, was practicing her vault routine when something when tragically askew.

Sang, who was working without a spotter, tumbled on a vault attempt she had successfully completed numerous times before, sending her head-first into the floor at the Nassau Country Coliseum..

A national vault champion in her home country, Sang fractured the sixth and seventh cervical vertebrae in her neck leaving her paralyzed from the mid-chest area down. Medical officials say it is still too early to determine if she will ever be able to walk again.

Ruthann Ardizzoni, director of the Gymnastics in Motion program at the South Shore Community Center in Cohasset, said a mistake on any vault can lead to danger. For that reason she will not allow students at her school to practice it unless there is a coach present at the apparatus.

"Vaulting is all about proper form. One slip could foul up everything." said Ardizzoni. "For that reason you always need to follow safety procedures and have a spotter there to help out if needed."

According to Kathy Corrigan, a member of the 1964 U.S. Olympic gymnastics squad, from the novice tumbler to the elite gymnast the most important thing about her sport is to be mentally as well as physically prepared whenever it comes time for you to perform.

"Vaulting is all about proper form. One slip could foul up everything." said Ardizzoni. "For that reason you always need to follow safety procedures and have a spotter there to help out if needed."
RUTHANN ARDIZZONI

"You need to have your mind in the right place before you can do anything," said Corrigan, who operates a gymnastics school in Rockland. "Being mentally prepared is just as important as being in the right physical shape for the competition."

Without that proper all-around preparation, she added, an athlete is heading for failure and maybe worse as what happened to Sang happened in this case, although Corrigan added that injuries like this one were "extremely rare" in gymnastics circles.

As much as the elite of the sport work with personal trainers and coaches while in training for competition, Corrigan said the burden lies with the gymnast to decide when it is the appropriate time to take their routine to the next level of expertise.

But, she added, that time only comes after an extended period of physical and mental preparedness.

"It's like working with building blocks," said Corrigan. "You have to keep bringing your ability to the next level through hard work and repetition. You don't skip any steps in the process.

"We teach all of our gymnasts to start with all of the basics and then build from there. You need to have that solid base of ability before you can go anywhere."

With a safe, logical progression up the skill level chart, most gymnasts are able to stay healthy even with the array of gravity-defying tricks they have up their collective sleeve, save

Hot fishing in the summer time heat

THE FISH STORY

MARK TRASK

In the predawn light fingers of fog wafted fingerlike through the dead cedars in the bog. It was cool, cool like a long drink of ice water on a sweltering day. The recent hazy, hot and humids had slipped to the east over the great fishing banks near the continental shelf. Closer to shore the narrow patterns of clouds lit with eerie pinks and oranges as the sun perched just below the horizon. There was not a whisper of wind. A perfect day for the fishing tournament. Boats large and small milled just inside the jetty awaiting the start. Each was loaded with rods, reels, lures, the freshest of bait and yawning-need-another-coffee anglers.

When the final seconds ticked off the clock the standings of the Cohasset Yacht Club's Annual Fishing Derby were posted. Jon Kasemeyer reported that the top striper was taken by Paul Hart, a thirty-seven incher. Dave Holway took second, followed by Bill Jordan and the Cunning crew. Dave Holway managed to top the bluefish with the only one taken. On the ladies side the Happy Hooker crew; Coleby Mantz, Susie Neer and Betty "Boop" McGilvray skippered by Judy Mantz once again swept the field. Billy McAuliffe reportedly had a bonito on up near the Graves only to lose it boatside.

Only a whisper of a breeze disturbed the golden mirror of Duxbury Bay. Even the seasled's roar seemed muted as they skippered over the surface in a blur of spray. On the distant shore Standish monument stood, a silhouette sentinel to the fun before him. Thousands of 4-wheel-drive vehicles formed a steel wall on the front beach. Each disgorging its happy loads of kids, exasperated Moms and their novels, and a Dad ready to try his new surfcasting gear.

The Bayside was much quieter. The sun didn't seem hot with the cool seabreeze refrigerating the cooking skin.

Children chasing minnows in the shallows mimicked their elders. The elders fished, some waist deep, casting flies near the quahog flat. Further to the south a sailboat dropped its anchor inside the High Pines. Up channel towards the bridge enterprising anglers dragged their beach chairs into the warm current and settled in waist deep to feed the stripers. The bite was steady. Others propped their poles in rod holder 30 to 40 feet from shore and retreated to their blankets. The hullabaloo was great when a fish grabbed one of these poles and the angler made the Olympic dash through the shallows. One bronzed beach chair dweller revealed his bait, clams...and he was doing most of the catching. What a gorgeous summer afternoon it was.

The sources report Bob Clement of Norwell tangled with a 37 pound striper that is now fillets at Mullaney's. don Schneider took a fresh pogie down to the shore and turned each chunk into a keeper bass. Talk about efficient! Bluefish seen to be moving south to the vicinity of the Flat Ledge bell. A couple of boats lo-

Cohasset swim team speeds past Duxbury Yacht Club

By Jennifer Rafferty
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Stalwart youths forged ahead in the steady, light rain as the Cohasset swim team secured a solid victory over the Duxbury Yacht Club in last Friday's meet. The final score at our last home meet was 451 to 170. The next meet will be Wednesday, Aug. 5, against Eel River. League championships are slated for Aug. 14 at Wheaton College. Don't forget the dinner and dance for the swim team Aug. 7. The dinner will be 5 to 6 p.m., followed by the awards and a dance until 10 p.m. at the Cohasset High School cafeteria. If you have not volunteered to help at the dinner, please call Rosemary Baker.

Shall we fraternize with the enemy? Would you like to take a sneak peak at Cohasset's hottest competition? Kamaya Prince of the Marshfield Mask agreed to let us in on some of Marshfield's practice strategies. Kamaya wiil be a junior at the Winsor School in Boston where her swim coach, Deb Hill, works in the athletic department. Deb coaches Winsor's swim team as well as the Mask, and Kamaya swims for both. Kamaya confided that the 10 and unders and 12 and unders "win our meets for us." With a nod to Cohasset, she admitted that "we don't have the big manly guys Cohasset does." At Marshfield, older swimmers work closely with the younger ones and take part in training them by example during practices. Essentially, younger swimmers have older mentors. The 17 and unders swim side by side with the younger 12 and unders and 14 and unders. What is a typical practice like? Kamaya smiled mischievously and gave Marshfield's secret recipe for success: do a 500-yard warm-up followed by 10 100-yard stints or two laps at two minutes each. Swimmers then need to do 15 50-yard swims in a minute and try to beat their time by 30 seconds. The first five laps of warm-up are freestyle, the second five are back followed by breast. Marshfield focuses on teaching the younger swimmers to have a long surface dive. Streamlining is one of Deb Hill's important tactics to teach. Streamlining is stretching out when you hit the water after the dive and on your flip turn. Deb has swimmers practice in the mirror stretching high overhead with fingertips pointed so that the form becomes imprinted on the swimmer's mind. Cohasset's daily practices are not much different. Our warm-up totals 400 yards and is less drill-oriented than Marshfield's. Cohasset focuses more on isolating elements of the stroke like the kick in the I.M. Chris Flynn says that Cohasset also practices diving off the block two times a week. Right from the start, our coach, Allison, stressed the importance of having fun, too. Zach and Abby Markert swim for the Mask during the winter, but they wouldn't miss swimming with Cohasset in the summer. While it is interesting to take a look at Marshfield, don't forget that this team swims together year round. Cohasset shines as a superior summer swim team.

Here are the results from last Friday's meet against the Duxbury Yacht Club:

Congratulations to all who swim and place in the second and third heats of several races. You are an important part of the team. While some swim teams only swim one heat in each stroke and age group with their absolute best swimmers, Cohasset is committed to having every member of the team swimming and receiving ribbons of recognition. At this time, the results of only the first heats are recorded on the meet sheets, but perhaps in the future we can at least post the results of all heats. Good luck to Cohasset at the Eel River meet and in the league championships!

Corrigan said she was fairly lucky through her own gymnastics career with injuries. A dislocated elbow caused from an awkward fall from the uneven parallel bars before the national championships in 1962 that put her own the shelf for about three months is the extent of her time on the disabled list.

For parents wishing to start their child in a gymnastics program, Corrigan suggests they make sure that the teachers are experience and trained in safety measures by a reputable group such as the USA Gymnastics organization.

According to Ardizzoni, soon that organization will not allow coaches to work with the gymnasts at their events unless they are both CPR certified and safety certified.

"You should always ask about credentials," she added. "You need to have all of your safety concerns satisfied before getting your child ..."

cated the hard hitters over the weekend.

Big hooks and heavy cable are the hot items at the store these days as anglers prep for the Scituate Heritage Days Shark Tournament kicking off this Saturday. Tournament organizer Nick Emond reports that lines will go in the water at 8 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday, the two days of fishing. Lines come out at 3 p.m. and weigh-in commences at the Mill Wharf Marina off Front Street in Scituate Harbor. Mass Division of Fisheries biologist, Greg Skomal will be on hand to validate the weighing. Greg works out of the Division's Shark Research Program at Oak Bluffs. In addition he will be showing interested spectators shark anatomy as they are dissected before shipment to the Boston Food Bank. The Shark Tournament is sponsored by the Boston Big Game Fishing Club.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Special Olympians bring home the gold

Jessica MacDonald and Jay Nothnagle competed in the Massachusetts Special Olympics State Summer Games at MIT in June.

Jessica participated in track and field and won two Gold Medals in the softball throw and shot put.

Jay skippered a Rhodes 19 in Unified Sailing competition on the Charles River and won all seven of the races held in the 2-day event.

His seven first places earned him a Gold Medal.

Both Jessica and Jay qualified for the 1999 World Special Olympics Summer Games to be held in Raleigh-Durham.

Limited spots open for soccer camp

Limited registrations for South Shore soccer camp for boys and girls ages 8 to 18 remain available.

This is the South Shore soccer camp's eighth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering for South Shore soccer camp, it is suggested that you call the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, Town Hall, or call 383-4109, immediately. Brochures and registration forms are available at the recreation office.

South Shore soccer will be offered to both boys and girls during the week of Monday through Friday, Aug. 3 to 7, and Aug. 10 to 14.

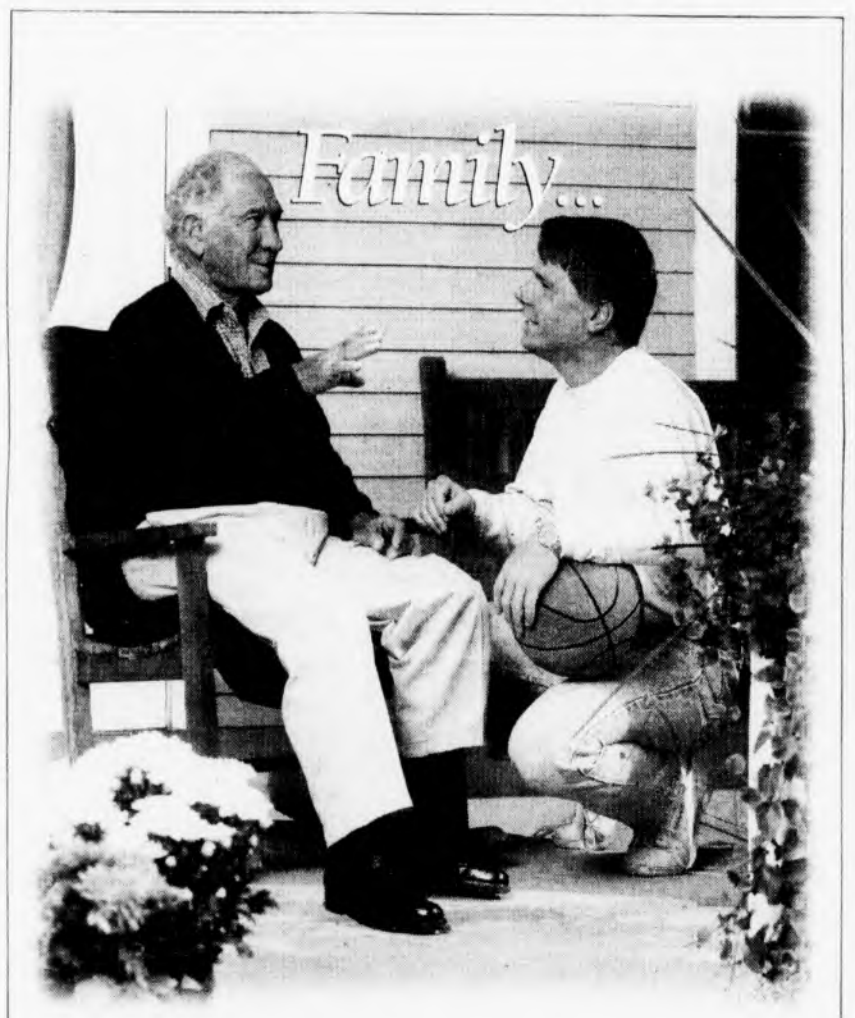
Should a camper wish to attend both camps, this is now possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camps must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., at Cohasset's Miliken Field.

The cost is $195 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available. South Shore soccer camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players for the New England area.

Cohasset Men's Softball League

It was snowing softballs at the Beechwood Ballpark!



The Dog Pound pitcher, Ken Snow, threw a flurry of moon balls at the Last Call squad. After leading 12-0, the Pound held on for a 14-8 victory.

Seeing this was the only game played, let's talk some more about the six-run victory. A majority of the Dogs reached base via the walk. Then a bloop hit, an error, a base hit, an errant throw and the game was out of reach.

Last Call did score eight runs in the last three innings. They had key hits by Gary Smith, "Big Dan" Dooley and Peter Sandblom. But too little too late.

Meet John McNabb:

Activist, environmentalist and tenacious fighter

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

John K. McNabb Jr. is probably best known as the individual most responsible for uncovering legal and environmental violations at the now-closed Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) landfill. Almost single-handedly, McNabb discovered a permit violation and illegal dumping at CHL that led to the town ordering the landfill closed permanently and influenced CHL-owner Paul Barry to finally shut down the facility. But there is more to McNabb than CHL. McNabb is looking to the future even as he continues to monitor the town's negotiations with CHL to settle outstanding legal and environmental issues.

"As [CHL attorney] Tony Moehrke said at a recent health board meeting, I appear to be a man who has devoted every waking hour to closing down the landfill, and that is what I have been doing," McNabb said. "I'm looking for a full-time job in a law-related business that would allow me to attend law school at night.

"But I don't like to lose and I don't like to leave things unfinished. The only way to keep CHL closed is to keep at it. If I don't follow through, I could do all this work and not win at the end," he added.

McNabb said he will be satisfied the fight with the landfill is over when its site assignment is rescinded and when CHL has agreed to closure conditions guaranteeing the protection of public health, safety and the environment. Until then, the fight goes on.

Although many people know of McNabb, few know of the experiences that have culminated in his position as the chief opponent of CHL. And that is a story in itself.

McNabb, who will be 42 next week, has lived in Cohasset for most of his life. He was born in Orleans, France while his father was in the army during the Korean War period. Upon returning from Europe, McNabb's family lived on the South Shore in Canton before moving to Cohasset when he was four. McNabb's parents lived on Brewster Lane for four years, then moved to Pond Street where the family currently resides.

The young McNabb took an early interest in the environment, first in the Boy Scouts, then in junior high when he joined the Cohasset Environmental Action Committee formed by Martha Gjesteby. In high school, McNabb excelled in many extracurricular activities, serving as the student council president for the Class of 1974, the student representative to the school committee from 1972-1974, and the editor of the school newspaper, "High Times."

"The system doesn't work without active citizen participation; people have to work on their own behalf."
— John McNabb

After high school, McNabb studied at Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, graduating in 1978 as a psychology major.

"Bowdoin is very popular for Cohasset kids," McNabb said. "It's a small, New England liberal arts school like Amherst College."

McNabb continued to pursue his interest in the environment at Bowdoin, joining the Bowdoin Energy Research Group, which gathered information about nuclear and solar energies.

After graduating from Bowdoin, McNabb "scrambled around" for a few years, picking up a number of skills that would serve him well in the battle against CHL. From 1979-1980, he was a stringer for the Cohasset Mariner, which led to a six-month stint as a full-time reporter for the South Shore Chronicle published in Hull.

"Hull was filled with interesting personalities and hidden things, but you had to really dig around to get information," McNabb said. "I liked digging into things and uncovering things in the background. That's where I learned about the Open Meeting Law."

He followed the Hull job with a six-month stint as editor of the Somerset Reporter in Skowhegan, Maine. In 1982, McNabb took a temporary public relations job in Pennsylvania raising money for a hospital capital improvement project. Although he preferred journalism to public relations, the experience in Pennsylvania would lead to jobs in the future as a lobbyist.

By 1983, McNabb also renewed his interest in politics, serving as a delegate to Democratic State Conventions numerous times, as well as serving locally on the government structure committee from 1983-1987. McNabb has always stayed active in local politics. In 1986, he lost election to the board of selectmen by 300 votes, and lost again in 1992 by four votes. Voters elected McNabb a library trustee in 1984. Currently, he serves on the Water Commission (an elected position), the CHL sub-committee, and the South Shore Regional Refuse Planning Board which will soon become the South shore Recycling Cooperative.

John McNabb

It was in 1983 that McNabb went to work for the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) as an assistant legislative liaison in the commissioner's office. Eventually, DEQE would change its name to the now familiar Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

"While I was at DEQE, I discovered that I had the job that I had always wanted to do," McNabb said. "I was able to affect change by promoting positive environmental policy on the state level. I answered legislative inquiries, solved problems, worked the department to get decisions made a lot of times when legislators asked to move something forward.

"Later, I became head of the legislative office. A big part of the job was lobbying. I was the head person that people came to when they wanted to know DEP's position on legislation. Most of the job as a lobbyist was to stop bad legislation. In some ways, we were the gatekeeper for environmental protection, flagging bad legislation. I was very effective at that job for six years," he added.

But big changes were afoot in 1989. The job was extremely difficult and stressful. In 1979, William Weld won the governor's race and McNabb knew it was time to leave. He was convinced Weld intended to eliminate legislative aides positions created by former Democratic Governor Michael Dukakis, and in 1980, Weld took office and did just what McNabb expected.

For the next five years, McNabb held several temporary jobs lobbying for various environmental groups and health organizations. From 1992-1994, he worked from Massachusetts as the national legislative director for the National Association of Rehabilitation Professional in the Private Sector (NARPPS).

"This was around the time when Bill and Hillary initiated the national health care debate and it seemed close to culminating in a national bill," McNabb said. "I had to go through the whole national plan, which was the size of six telephone books, preparing a number of amendments to the legislation."

But the health care bill died in Congress. However, McNabb continued making his mark by finding a technicality in a Tennessee bill that would have eliminated rehabilitation professional without nursing degrees.

"That was one of the ways I learned how important technicalities are," McNabb said.

That knowledge of technicalities would eventually lead McNabb to violations at CHL that would force the town to order the dump closed down permanently. McNabb first became aware or problems at the dump when his brother took him on a walk of the landfill.

"My brother Michael took me when CHL was still taking general refuse and it was putrid," McNabb said. "The fumes sickened me for three days. The whole place was run-down with a lack of wildlife."

McNabb joined the battle against CHL in 1991 when Gjesteby asked him to help an environmental group write a comment letter to DEP for an environmental impact report addressing CHL's request for an Area V expansion. That environmental group would eventually become the anti-CHL group Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE) where McNabb now serves as vice president.

Frustrated by DEP's refusal to do anything about environmental damage cause by the landfill, McNabb and SAFE successfully blocked the Area V expansion, while uncovering additional environmental damage. Then in 1996, seeing that the Area V expansion plan had failed, the owners of CHL propose a vertical expansion.

"This was a bogus plan to add space to the landfill," McNabb said. "They saw the board of health couldn't stop them, and DEP was going to approve it, and I just got mad. I needed a strategy to stop them, and I finally looked to DEP's regulations, which said they shall not approve vertical expansions unless the site assignment is in good order.

"I worked non-stop not knowing what I would find. I fell back on my reporter skills, picking up on inconsistencies on their maps, and then they handed it to me with the vertical expansion maps showing the illegal fill in Area IV-B. I was persistent. I had this thing in my teeth and I wouldn't let go," he added.

McNabb quickly found numerous other inconsistencies. He repeatedly examined CHL's reports of waste received, discovering that somehow the landfill had taken in 140,000 tons more than it was supposed to accept. Then the health board acted on that information and found that the excess tonnage was sitting on slopes filled 10-20 feet higher than DEP's authorized height limit. Finally, McNabb inspected all of CHL's permits and found that its special permit to operate, issued in 1977, had never been legally filed, invalidating CHL's right to operate in the water protection district.

"This was where my experience finding technicalities paid off," McNabb said.

McNabb proved that a few citizen's acting with great determination can make great changes in their quality of life. He admits that he did the bulk of the work, and looks forward to a day sometime soon when he can look back on the battle to close CHL as a major accomplishment. But he is also critical of local government's lack of action against CHL.

"This is not a glowing tribute to what government can do," McNabb said. "I shouldn't have had to do any of the things I've done. The board of health and its consultant should have identified the illegal fill, and town counsel should have discovered the permit violation.

"That's why citizen's groups are needed. The system doesn't work without active citizen participation; people have to work on their own behalf. I've leveraged government groups, but I've also been helped by government regulations. You have to look at the facts, study the law, and ram through the process."

Keep a look out. If there's an issue that affects the environment, John McNabb will probably be involved in some way. Even though he doesn't really have the time.

OBITUARIES

William F. Murphy

William F. Murphy, 64, of Cohasset, retired foreman for the MBTA and a Marine veteran, died Aug. 1 at the Mediplex in Weymouth.

Mr. Murphy worked for the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority for 30 years, retiring eight years ago.

Born, raised and educated in Worcester, he lived in Cohasset for the last 25 years.

Mr. Murphy served in the Marines from 1954 to 1956.

He leaves his wife, Marjorie J. (Quirk) Murphy; a son, William F. Murphy Jr. of Cohasset; two daughters, Marjorie T. Wilson of Winchendon and Denise L. Murphy of Cohasset; a brother, James Murphy of Florida; four sisters, Louise Kilmonis of Millbury, Margaret Davis of Norfolk, Cathy Symock of Shrewsbury and Mary LeBlanc of Alabama. He was the father of the late Thomas A. Murphy.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Thursday at St. Anthony's Church, officiated by The Rev. John Mulverhill. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St.

Donations may be made to the Miramar Retreat Center, P.O. Box M, Duxbury 02331, or St. Anthony's Church, 129 South Main St., Cohasset, 02025.

Myron Merrill

Myron "Mac" Merrill of Cohasset, a cook, died June 20.

Mr. Merrill was formerly of Waltham. He was a cook at Hart's Diner.

He leaves a sister, Leona Perrault of Plymouth.

A graveside service was held at the Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

The Brasco and Sons Funeral Home, 773 Moody St., Waltham, handled the arrangements.

Clambake was a hit

On Saturday the Konohasset Lodge hosted a clambake on the MacNeill estate on Jerusalem Road. One hundred and sixty guests enjoyed hamburgers, hot dogs, clam chowder, steamed clams, fried chicken, ribs, lobsters, salad and finally cake! The weather was perfect and the local guests, as well as 25 guests from a New Hampshire Lodge, had a wonderful time. This is an annual event for the Masonic Lodge of Cohasset.

Marina dispute moves to next stage

Owner claims town is trespassing

By Mary Ford
MARINER STAFF

The owner of Cohasset Harbor Marina is going to play hardball with the town after all.

Frustrated over selectmen's lack of a decision to recommend moving the federal anchorage line in Bailey's Creek, Paul Trendowicz demanded that all town moorings be moved out of the creek area that he claims is rightly his.

Selectmen estimate that could involve upwards of 12 moorings.

A heated marathon session on Trendowicz's request to move the federal line which would enable him to expand the marina by doubling the number of slips continued in selectmen's chambers Tuesday.

This followed a similar three-hour long harbor committee meeting Thursday on the same issue (see related story).

The big difference however was that harbor committee voted 7-2 not to recommend the federal anchorage area be moved. In a 4-1 vote — with Diane Sullivan dissenting and over objections from several citizens in the packed meeting room — selectmen opted to let the October special town meeting decide.

But that answer not only disappointed Trendowicz who is under pressure to piggyback onto the federal dredging project slated to begin in September but prompted calls like "jellyfish" from audience members who urged selectmen to take a stand.

"You are elected to make a decision, why don't you tell us how your feel?" said Amory Julian, 14 Parker Ave.

But the businessman and Cohasset resident was apparently prepared for the bad news because he pulled a letter out of his file which he asked be read into the record. In the letter, Trendowicz not only demanded the town terminate issuing mooring permits for boats on Cohasset

Haddad looks back on a hectic first year

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Mark Haddad is the first person ever to hold the title of Cohasset Town Manager. As Cohasset's first town manager, Haddad knew his first year would be a busy one. But he didn't know just how busy it would become.

"It was extremely busy when I first got here," Haddad said. "We had to do the budget, negotiate four union contracts, prepare the warrant for the special town meeting, get ready for the annual town meeting — and it seemed like we had to do them all at the same time. To be honest, there have been some days when I wanted to pull my hair out."

"To be honest, there have been some days when I wanted to pull my hair out."
— Mark Haddad, reflecting on his first year as town manager.

Haddad's second year is shaping up just as busy as his first. The Cohasset Harbor dredging project is scheduled to begin on Sept. 8. Then there is the plan to consolidate the public works department and the town engineering department, the challenge of finding money for buildings identified in the facilities audit, sewer issues, the Little Harbor study, the annual budget and the usual day-to-day operations involved in running the town. Long-term, there is the need to develop a master plan, problems grappling with the MBTA and the proposed restoration of the Greenbush line of the Old Colony Railroad, the ongoing waste water management plan, and further work on the facilities management plan. It's a brutal schedule, but Haddad seeks no sympathy.

Parking is a safety issue at swim center

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Matthew Marr came before the board of selectmen Tuesday night to discuss the parking situation at the swim center on North Main Street.

Marr's home abuts the handicapped parking area and he is a daily eye-witness to what he sees as the deterioration of the site and visitors' unwillingness to heed the block-lettered "Handicapped Parking Only" sign clearly posted there.

Grass that once covered the area leading along the path to the swim center, extending from North Main Street to Barnes Field, has become bare due to last summer's dry spell. The dirt now kicked up by vehicles coming and going was described by more than one person in attendance at the meeting as a "dust bowl."

Marr would like to see the grass replanted so that the dust problem will settle. "Up until last year, we always had grass there but with the dry weather last summer, it's a dust bowl now," he said.

Board member Diane Sullivan agreed, "They're entitled to safety and it is a dust bowl."

Brian Wilkin, 170 North Main St., was also concerned about the parking problem on Friday nights when swim meets are held. At those times, Wilkin maintained, the Little League lots and the lower lot off Sohier are full.

Another North Main Street resident described Pepsi trucks delivering their goods to the center, blocking off the handicapped and emergency access road.

Selectman Tom Callahan suggested using the Brush chipping change

Brush Chipping Day has been changed to Saturday, Aug. 15. Residential brush will be accepted at the recycling transfer facility from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Please no trees over 12" in diameter. Contractors are not allowed.

Animal control number

Cohasset residents may reach the animal control officer, Kathleen Maguire, by calling 383-9119.

Ten minutes for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and are held on alternate Tuesdays.

The next selectmen's meeting is Tuesday, Sept. 1.

Public reading packet available

In an effort to promote communication, the school department provides a public reading packet and make if available to local citizens.

The packet, which is available in the superintendent's office, contains recent correspondence and other documents. There is also an index of documents including items such as teacher contracts and school handbooks, so people will know how to access those.

World's End: preserving nature's balance

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

If you ask The Trustees of Reservations' Tom Foster or Al Yalenezian, they can tell you: maintaining the precarious balance of nature at World's End's 250 acres is no easy task.

Southeast regional director Foster and South Shore and Cape Cod management superintendent Yalenezian know every bit of the land—its four hills and five miles of shoreline, its fields and its thickets, its wildlife needs and its free-standing visitors' "wants."

That's why the two men were so anxious to explain what goes into keeping the land and all who choose to enjoy it comfortable.

"The mowing schedule of World's End has been an issue as long as I can remember," said Yalenezian.

"It's a balancing act," interjected Foster. "You have to leave the wildflowers growing long enough to support wildlife but not allow trees to overtake the area."

Finding that equilibrium is not as easy as it sounds for trees root easily in New England and, given enough time, a meadow can develop into the dawning of a new forest.

Birds are the primary animals that the meadows and thicket supply cover for, although there have been sightings of red foxes on the grounds. "People are real excited about that," said Foster, adding, "It's really not a good thing."

And then there are the occasional rattlesnake scares that turn out to be something else. "One year, a hog nose snake was taken for a rattlesnake and shot by a Hingham police officer called in to handle the situation," said Foster. "Yes, but it was just a `mimic'," explained Yalenezian. "A hog nose will act like a viper, coiling up and flattening its head out." "We have no poisonous snakes here," assured Foster.

Gail Parks, who has greeted visitors at the front gate hut for five years now, can count off a long list of birds that benefit from the overgrowth, aside from snakes. "Hawks, bobolinks, meadowlarks," she recites, not to mention the mute swans and their signets (baby swans), great blue herons, buffleheads (winter sea ducks) and snowy white egrets that reside in the marsh ponds and more open water. A harbor seal was even spotted once by a WGBH film crew.

Because of the abundance of wildlife that depend on warm-weather overgrowth in the fields, Yalenezian and his crew have a sort of rule of thumb approach to their mowing schedule. "We have guidelines on when and how the hayfields and weedy meadows are mowed," he explained. Those specifications are determined by whether or not the birds are fledged (have left the nest).This year, the men started mowing about a week and a half ago, in keeping with their mid-July starting schedule. The grounds won't be fully done until some time in October.

Thicket areas are trimmed down by hand. "The birds love the middle-height growth," explained Yalenezian. "We have a great flock of bluebirds here now."

Heidi Matthews and her son, Austin, 4, of Hull stroll up the western side of World's End on a perfect summer morning.

Other creatures dependent on the thickets to provide cover from predators can thank the management for their thoughtfulness in setting thicket on both sides of the road so that the animal can quickly disappear from one thicket into the next.

"It's a balancing act. You have to leave the wildflowers growing long enough to support wildlife but not allow trees to overtake the area."
— Tom Foster, Trustees of Reservations

As beautiful as the tangle of branches and grass must look to the bluebirds and its other inhabitants, some visitors only see overgrowth.

"It's understandable how someone might think that things are out of control here, but anyone who observes World's End through the year will see the amount of work and management put into it," said Foster. "Not to mention thought," added Yalenezian.

In fact, Paul Lasordo of Hingham was so bothered by the fields of tall grass interspersed with wildflowers and the thickets that he wrote a letter to the Cohasset Mariner in July which was quickly responded to by Yalenezian.

Since hearing the rhyme and reason of World's End's maintenance program, Lasordo feels "100 percent supportive of how the Trustees take care of their park. I think they really preserve the land and the integrity between man and nature. My letter was intended to express concern and to get an answer. To the degree that the Trustees are getting a chance to foster more of an understanding of what they do, everyone comes out a winner."

Lasordo was impressed by the methods the Trustees' crews have come up with to keep the fields maintained while providing for the safety of the wildlife living there. For example, workers begin mowing at the center of each field so that "residents" of the four-legged and winged variety can make a getaway from any direction. "If you start at the outer parameters, the animals will more than likely run toward the center, which is where you're heading with your machinery," explained Yalenezian.

Another kindness to nature is that the only fertilizing done is spot-applications to newly planted or ailing trees. Insect spraying is ruled out entirely.

Aside from the beauty and ecological preservation of the landscape, visitors often cite the safety factor as a draw. Along any of the trails, on the clean waters or resting on the benches, one can see women with their young, boaters, solitary walkers and those with dogs enjoying the expanse of the park.

"One of the comments that we get from time to time is that it's so open and yet people don't feel threatened for their safety," said Foster.

And yet bucolic World's End is not without perilous adventure. Last year, ranger Harry O'Brien set out near closing time to rescue two women he had seen wandering the same orbit for some duration. The women had been circling the same ground while conversing, pausing now and then at the start of the causeway that would have brought them back to the park's exit. After some consideration, the women would set off again for another round in search of the elusive path.

The only discomforts reported by visitors have been easily remedied. Three portable toilets have been installed in the parking area and dogs, once free to roam a little too freely in the opinion of some, are now subject to an enforced leash law. "Those are the only changes you will find here," said Foster.

Yalenezian agreed, adding "World's End should look as it does today 100 years from now—that's our objective."

A World's End history

The peninsula that is World's End measures about 250 acres with five miles of shoreline tracing the Weir River and Hingham harbor, and four low-lying hills covered in open meadow and broken up carriage paths. Each path and hilltop indulges the visitor with a view of river or sea. Planter's Hill offers the best view of the park's hills, providing a 360-degree scope of Hingham Harbor and its islands to the south and east, the Boston skyline to the northwest, Hull and its coastline reaching toward Cape Ann, and the Atlantic Ocean to the east.

Delicate jewel weed blossoms bring radiant color to the many field on World's End reservation.

Formed by glacial activity (much like the drumlins in Hingham, more commonly known as Otis Hill, Great Hill, Prospect Hill, Bradley Hill and the four Turkey Hills), the hills of World's End consist of glacial till that settled on the bedrock underneath, molding a half-egg shaped land formation facing west of north and east of south.

It was landowner John Brewer who hired landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted some time around 1886 to design the roads, land and 163 home lots for a community to build homes on the property. English oaks, hardwood trees and carriage paths emerged from the tree-covered wilderness, but the houses were never raised. The Brewer family instead farmed and kept up the land on their own.

World's End might not have been as we know it today had the New England Electric System and the Boston Edison Electric Co. not chosen Plymouth as the site for their nuclear power plant in 1965. There were also several Boston developers that made offers during the '50s and '60s to build on World's End.

Luckily, in 1967, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council recommended that World's End be acquired by a private land trust with its preservation as open space the top priority.

Hingham's Planning Board and the Conservation Commission of the Town of Hingham endorsed the Council's recommendation.

In 1967, The Trustees of Reservations were able to raise sufficient funds to acquire the property for preservation.

Cohasset Marina dispute moves to next stage

Harbor Marina land but that it revoke mooring permits for boats in Bailey's Creek. He also wants the town reimburse Cohasset Harbor Marina for all money received from boats moored in the creek.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris defended the board's decision to take the issue to town meeting even though the matter appears to be moot in light of Trendowicz's letter.

"You are elected to make a decision, why don't you tell us how your feel?"

— Amory Julian, 14 Parker Ave.

She said the entire town should decide the disposition of property — in this case 25 feet of the federal anchorage area — a position supported by her fellow board members with the exception of Sullivan.

"This board has the responsibility for a decision and should make it," Sullivan said. She said Trendowicz has the right to bring the issue before town meeting if he chooses.

As it stands now, the town will lose about 20 feet of dredging along the marina's docks. The Army Corps of Engineers will leave that area as a buffer because of the encroachment issue with the marina.

Without movement of the federal line, Trendowicz must keep his current boats and slips behind the federal anchorage area which will create a hardship, he said. The marina will be restricted to 12 to 13-foot boats.

"It can't survive with all that sized boats," he said.

The unruly meeting yielded comments on both sides of the issue.

Anthony Ambrose, 30 King [illegible], said the town should work with Trendowicz.

"There is clearly a need for more boat slips and traffic is difficult all over town," he said answering concerns about a potential increase in traffic on Parker Avenue traffic. "But we need to work with Paul, to not work with him and make this happen will only prolong it."

But Paul Pattison, 104 Elm St., said the issue goes much deeper.

"We are talking about taking away our rights and privileges to use our land for a private enterprise," he said. Pattison, who said the town controls the creek, said to negotiate the peoples' rights away is wrong.

"They're not making any more land," he said.

Cohasset Marina expansion proposal timeline

February 1998 — Paul Trendowicz learns the DEP rejects his proposal to dredge the inter-tidal area on the "land-ward" side of his marina which runs his expansion plans aground. The Cohasset Conservation Commission had okayed the plan.

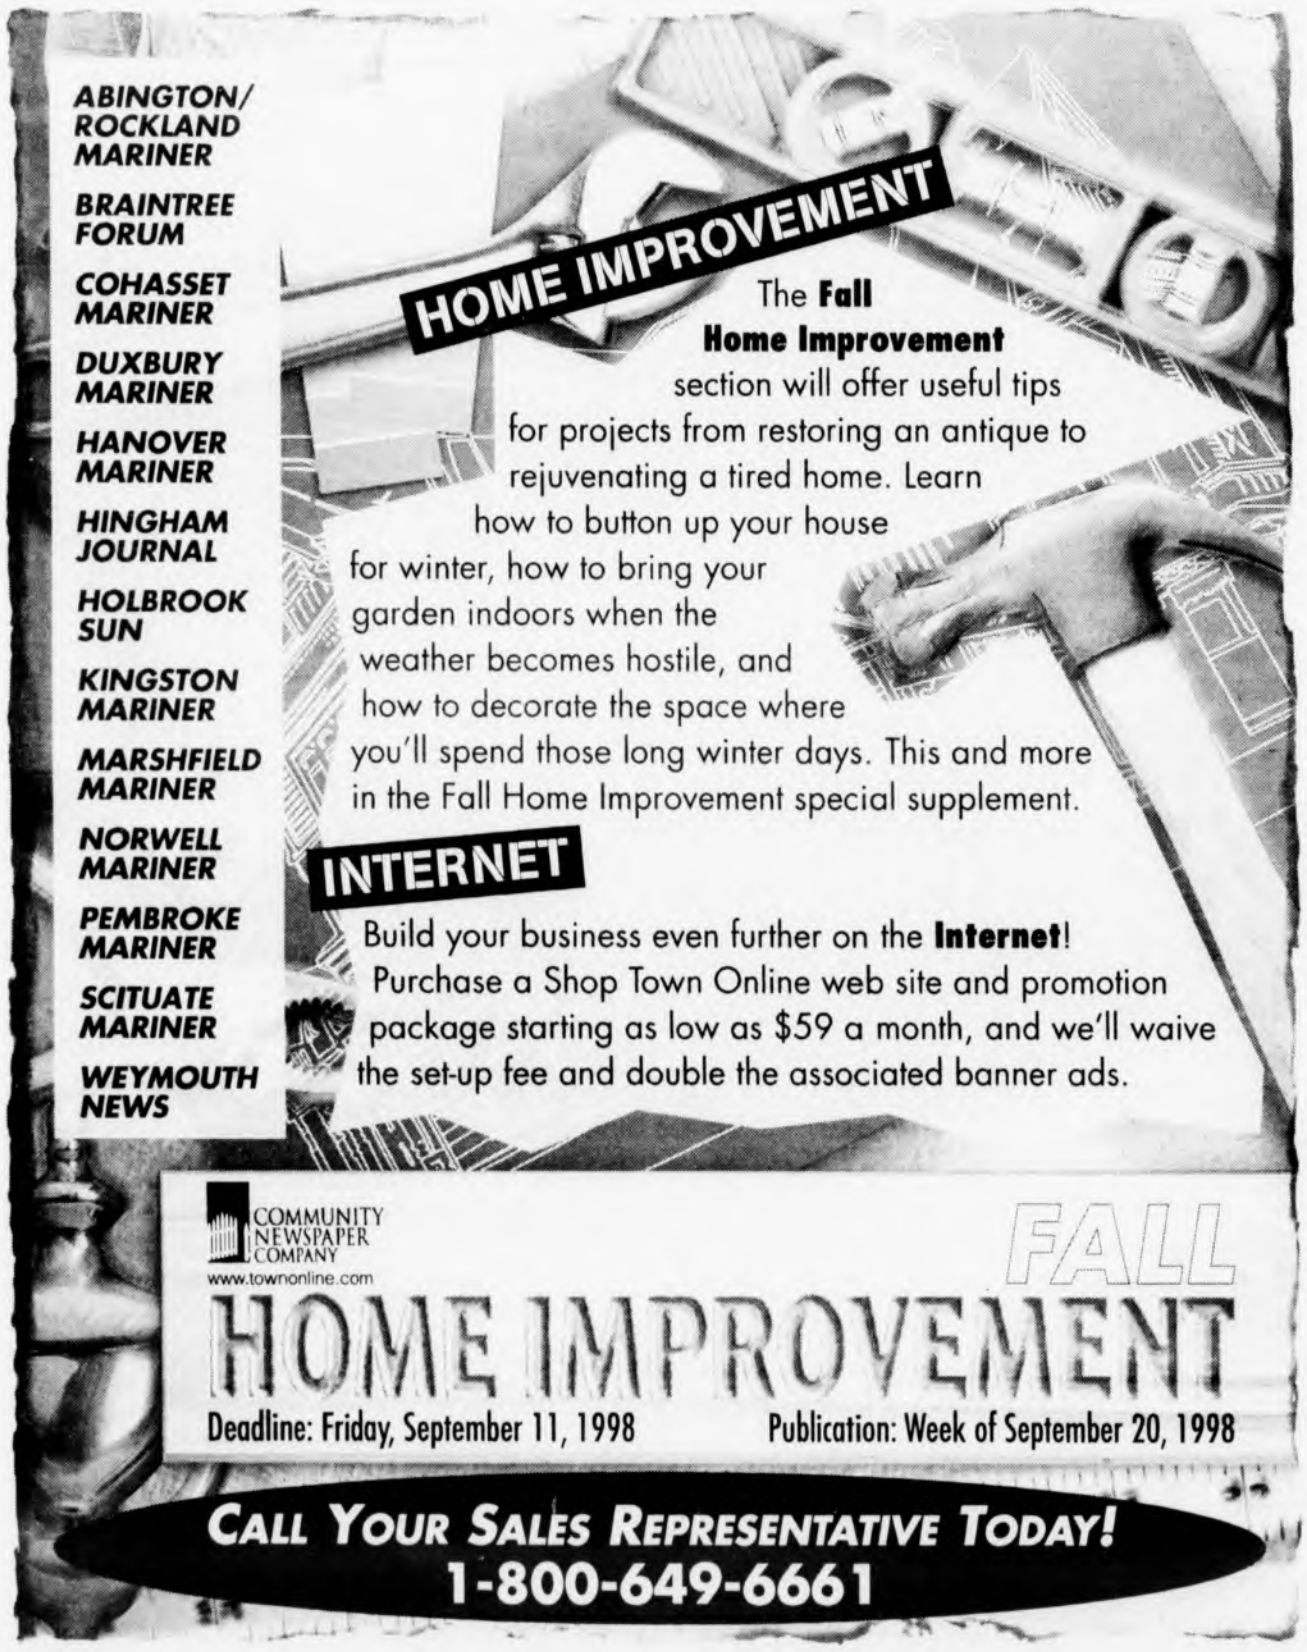
March 1998 —Trendowicz presents a proposal to selectmen seeking to move the federal line of jurisdiction in the harbor by 40 feet so his expansion plans can move ahead and offers to deed the creek bottom to the town in exchange. In a 4-1 vote, with Selectman Diane Sullivan dissenting, selectmen direct Town Manager Mark Haddad to work with town counsel, the harbor master and harbor committee to seek a resolution to the matter.

April 1998 —Selectmen back the harbor committee's recommendation by denying the Marina expansion plans. The denial followed assurances by the Army Corps of Engineers that support to move the federal line would not hold up the dredging project as feared. Selectmen said they share the harbor committee's concerns about loss of town moorings and worries about safety in Bailey's Creek. They ask Trendowicz to come back with his request after the harbor is dredged.

Aug. 6, 1998 — Harbor committee votes not to recommend to selectmen the Marina's revised request to move the federal line by 25 feet. Committee members opt to maintain the status quo in the harbor due to safety concerns and questions about whether the town should relinquish control over the creek bottom to a private entity.

Aug. 11, 1998 – Over objections of a packed room of interested citizens, selectmen vote to send the matter to town meeting but Trendowicz cannot wait until October. He takes the issue to the next stage when he presents a letter to selectmen accusing the town of trespassing on marina land and ordering town moorings out of the part of Bailey's Creek he believes he owns.

Executive session causes a stir at harbor board meeting



The local governmental process involved in the Cohasset Marina expansion proposal was challenged again last week during the joint harbor committee/selectmen's meeting .

Several citizens and the press objected to an executive session which was initially announced to discuss litigation matters. However, selectmen could not cite the specific case. Town counsel said the executive session was to discuss the acquisition of real estate, which is a legitimate reason for a closed meeting, he said. When pressed to name the real estate involved, Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said it was ownership of the creek bottom (see related story).

Russ Bonetti of Parker Avenue told selectmen a recent posting of a selectmen's meeting may be illegal under the Open Meeting Law and he had had discussions with the District Attorney's office about it. The posting said selectmen would meet "in the harbor" at 8 a.m. Saturday, July 25 but did not name a specific location. According to the July 28 selectmen's meeting minutes, three selectmen went for a boat ride to view the area that morning.

McMorris explained selectmen had posted the meeting as a precaution but did not have to post it because the board did not deliberate even though a quorum was present. However, the Open Meeting Law states that town boards must post all meetings involving a quorum 48 hours in advance.

In March, Selectman Diane Sullivan, who is liaison to the harbor committee, vehemently objected that both she and the harbor committee were not in the loop when the lawyer for the marina was permitted to meet with town counsel. She also objected to the fact that Marina owner Paul Trendowicz and his lawyer were a last-minute addition to the March 23 selectmen's meeting, but apparently the harbor committee and harbormaster were not asked to appear, she said.

Harbor committee votes to sink marina plans

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

There was no shortage of opinions on both sides of a proposal by a local businessman to expand his private marina in Cohasset Harbor at a rollicking three-hour-long harbor committee meeting last week.

Paul Trendowicz of Sea Chain Marine, owner of Cohasset Harbor Marina, was back before the harbor committee last Thursday to pitch a revised plan to double the number of boat slips at the Parker Avenue facility from 47 to 96.

Trendowicz seeks the town's support to move the federal line by 25 feet along his docks in Bailey's Creek which would provide more room for his existing operation and enable the marina to expand without encroaching in the federal anchorage area. The expansion into the creek is half the distance he requested in April — a proposal selectmen rejected at that time.

The matter is being raised now because the federal/town $1.34 million dredging project is set to start in September. Trendowicz, who would pay to have his marina area dredged, wants to piggyback onto the town's project.

He has said it would be a hardship for him to exist behind the existing federal anchorage line because he would be restricted to only 12-to-13 feet boats due to lack of room, making his operation not financially viable. It had not been a problem before because dredging was not an issue. He faces fines of about $25,000 a day if his boats and slips drift into the federal anchorage area.

The Department of Environmental Protection and the Army Corps of Engineers told Trendowicz they would not object to the deauthorization of the subject area if the town agrees. The new plan also resurfaced Trendowicz's initial proposal to dredge the inter-tidal area "landward" of the existing docks. The conservation commission approved that plan last year but the DEP rejected it for environmental reasons.

The DEP now says it will agree to a reduced area of inter-tidal dredging if the town goes along with it. So, Trendowicz doesn't need the federal line to be advanced the full 40 feet he initially requested because he can expand on the other side of his docks if the town agrees.

But despite assurances from the harbormaster and pleas from boat owners who fear they will never climb to the top of the 300-name-long town mooring waiting list that the expansion would benefit the town, the harbor committee voted in a majority not to recommend selectmen ask Congress to move the federal line in Bailey's Creek.

Paul Trendowicz said it would be a hardship for him to exist behind the existing federal anchorage line because he would be restricted to only 12-to-13 feet boats due to lack of room, making his operation not financially viable.

Selectmen, who attended the harbor committee meeting, voted on the issue Tuesday (see related story).

Former selectman Peter Pratt, who authored the Congressional act that set the stage for the dredging project, said a master plan for the harbor is needed before the town yields any real estate to a private entity.

"Now is the time to be proactive to try to step back and better manage the most precious resource the town has," Pratt said. "To allow the agenda to be set exclusively by a private user and owner is just wrong."

Muddying the waters is the threat that Trendowicz may play hardball with the town over ownership of the creek bottom.

The matter was the subject of an hour-long executive session which was challenged by the press and several citizens in attendance. After being pressured to do so, Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris identified the real estate to be discussed. Discussion of acquisition of real estate is a legitimate subject for an executive session, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said.

Trendowicz, who bought the former Figueiredo property several years ago, claims he owns to the middle of Bailey's Creek. Swapping the creek bottom for the town's support for moving the federal line would resolve an old land dispute once and for all, Trendowicz has said.

Emotions ran high

Emotions were at a fever pitch in the packed selectmen's meeting room for the harbor committee meeting on a hot August night.

Residents of Parker Avenue are concerned about increased traffic on their narrow street if the marina expands. Spokesmen for the sailing club worry about safety of young sailors.

And still others are anxious about the welfare of swimmers who swim from Government Island to Bassing Beach.

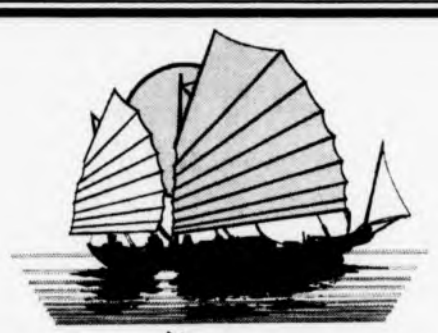
"When the town figures out how to establish a ferry boat and get the kids to run it, then they'll have a safe situation," said Herb Towle, 263 King St., about young swimmers in the creek.

Being able to keep a boat in the harbor was a common refrain from proponents of the expansion. Trendowicz said 80 percent of his existing slips are rented by Cohasset residents and 50 percent of those on his waiting list are from Cohasset.

"The public versus private argument, I don't understand," said William Saltonstall, 271 Jerusalem Road. "We're talking about getting mostly Cohasset residents access to the harbor.

"I, as a boat owner, don't care if it's privately owned or publicly owned."

Chris Julian, 14 Parker Ave., said he hated to see a pristine area of the harbor built up.



"Bailey's Creek is the last undeveloped part of the harbor," he said. "To see it slipped all the way to the corner would change the character of the harbor."

Harbormaster John "Moose" Winters disputed claims the boats back up at the "choke point" in Bailey's Creek where Bassing Beach and Government Island are at their closest point. Winters also said more boats can fit in a harbor on fixed slips as opposed to the free standing moorings which the town uses.

But the harbor committee opted to maintain the status quo.

"I don't think this committee should be in the business of conceding Cohasset useable harbor bottom to private industry," member Domenic Baccari said. "Secondly, we ought to be very concerned with traffic in the narrows."

Lamberts Lane bus issue to be revisited

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

School Committee member Mark DeGiacomo brought the buses on Lamberts Lane issue back to the school committee.

According to DeGiacomo, town manager Mark Haddad had recently met with him about the problem. The two agreed on the feasibility of a meeting at Lamberts Lane some time in the next week or two. A bus might be brought in to test the workability of adding the lane to the bus route. Cliff Mitman, president of the Cohasset Golf Club, and Lamberts Lane residents would also attend.

Only one month ago, it seemed that school committee members were agreed that they had a moral obligation to make the trip to school safer for the children in the Lamberts Lane area, but that they had few alternatives with which to do so.

The school department had decided against a plan to use a smaller bus on Lamberts Lane due to the expense.

Safety issues also ruled out a turnaround at the end of the lane.

The selectmen and the school board had held months of discussions, all boiling down to only two choices. Namely, an agreement might be reached with the Cohasset Golf Club to permit the bus to use the parking lot there for turnaround or the lane could be made into a public street rather than private way.

If the street were accepted as a public way, the town could ask the DPW for an engineering solution to the grade problems but that would be expensive, officials say.

These choices, however, only raised more issues. For one, is Lamberts Lane a private way or a public street, as it seems to be according to information from a previous town clerk? And what about liability issues for the club, were they to allow the bus to use their lot for turnaround?

School board member Mark DeGiacomo has said he doubted that selectmen would proceed further with this issue and so he has pursued the matter on his own. He will return to the committee with an update on what transpired at the Lamberts Lane meeting.

Master's degree programs okayed by school board

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Superintendent Stephen Hart's recommendation that three teachers' requests concerning master's degrees be approved by the school committee was granted at their Aug. 6 meeting.

Ron Ford plans to pursue a master's in educational administration and Torin Sweeney will work toward a master's in guidance. Suzi Turtle, who already holds a master's, wanted her degree approved in order to qualify for a salary scale change.

"Ford and Sweeney will be eligible for some reimbursement, based on the cost of state college courses," explained Hart. The teachers will continue with their day jobs while earning their degree.

Hart explained that he had spent time researching the programs Ford and Sweeney wanted to enter and concluded that both degrees held merit since they were in the field of education.

"I think the reasoning is valid and the additional training will result in a better job done in the classroom," he said.

Hart explained that a careful review of the master's program would show that its training was not the same as that received by Cohasset's already-employed school adjustment counselors.

Parking is a safety issue at swim center gravel pits behind the little league field for additional parking.

In 1985, selectmen voted to limit that area's use for only handicapped parking or emergency access.

Since that time, various boards of selectmen have reconsidered the issue several times but have always stood by that decision.

Town manager Mark Haddad had invited representatives from the Swim Center and Cohasset Little League to attend the selectmen's meeting in order to settle the matter but Swim Center trustees were unable to appear.

On a 9 a.m., Aug. 12 site visit, the Mariner found the lower parking lot off Sohier Street empty. Not so the handicapped parking area outside the Swim Center, where six vehicles without visible handicapped parking signs were stationed. The center's lot was almost full to capacity. Rain was pelting down at 9 a.m., and so the temptation to park there may not be surprising, especially since the police cannot ticket cars parked on private property.

Moreover, the fullness of the lot made backing out the only means of exit, since turning around within the lot was impossible given the number of vehicles there.

On a game night, other cars would also have been parked over the once grassy area running alongside the center's drive, abutters told selectmen. That situation would have necessitated driving a lengthy part of the path in reverse which, on a game night, would be risky business considering children's propensity to run about, they said.

Haddad said that he would take up the issue.

"HMS" Rose visits Hingham Shipyard calendar of events

Sea Chain Marine and Island Alliance will sponsor a visit from "HMS" Rose, which represents the "reberth" of Hingham Shipyard.

Aug. 16, 1-4 p.m., public viewing; Aug. 17, 10 a.m.-4 p.m., day sail for Hull Middle School students; Aug. 18, 10 a.m.-4 p.m., day sail for Hingham Middle School students, children from Harbor Vision and children from Alternatives for Community & Environment; Sat., Aug. 22, 2-5 p.m. public viewing.

The "HMS" Rose is a replica of a mid-eighteenth century Royal Navy frigate which figured in the Colonial and Revolutionary History of the United States. The original "HMS" Rose was built in Hull, England in 1757 to fight in the Seven Years War. The ship was responsible for patrolling the coast and operating as a scout ship for the fleet.

Today's "HMS" Rose was built in Lunenburg, Nova Scotia in 1970 by Newport Historian, John Fitzhugh Millar, using original construction drawings. In 1991, the "HMS" Rose was certified as America's first Class A size Sailing School Vessel by the U.S. Coast Guard, making her the largest Sailing School Vessel in the United States. The "HMS" Rose continues her educational mission today.

Latest news from Cohasset Girl Scouts

For the past eight years the Girl Scout program in Cohasset has been growing. From a low of 80 girls, last year Girl Scouts registered 145 girls. The program in these eight years has expanded from basically a brownies only group (1st through 3rd grade) to Daisies to Seniors (kindergartners through high school) and from 7 to 13 troops.

As with any expanding program, the Cohasset Girl Scouts need people with a variety of skills. Leaders are currently needed for Daisies (Kindergartners), and Brownies, (1st and 3rd grade). Special skill volunteers (craft support, singing skills, camping skills and program level advisors) are always welcome.

For people desiring to become involved for a limited period, a fundraiser is needed (fall-two months). The fall campaign contributions go into Capitol development for Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council.

Girl Scouts alumnae are also sought. Each alumna has a wealth of knowledge and ideas that can not be duplicated. Organizers hope to tap into this wisdom to enhance the current Girl Scout Year for both girls and leaders. Girl Scout alumna do not have to be restricted to just Cohasset or the Boston area, we would like to open this invitation to any former Girl Scout.

Girl Scout registration will be held the week of Sept. 13. Look for flyers. Girls from kindergarten to high school are welcome. For more information, call Terry James at 383-9762 or Mary McElroy at 383-0505.

NEW GRANDPARENTS!

If you see George and Judy Fortin walking around on pins and needles this week, it is for a good reason. They are about to become grandparents and are so excited, they can barely think of anything else. We'll let you know the good news as soon as it is available, in the meantime, hang in there, George and Judy, it certainly is well worth the wait. Good luck and here's to a healthy, happy baby!

LOOKING GRAND

Bruce and Claire Williams were around town last week, looking grand as usual. They brought Mrs. Williams (a lovely woman, one many of you remember as a true lady and friend). All is well with them, they were here for a wedding and to see their niece off to California. She and her husband, Jim Wirth, are on their way to new job opportunities, and we wish them well in their new life. Keep in touch, Maureen and Jim!

BUSY AS EVER

Keith and Sue Megathlin were also in town last week. Sue's mom had surgery recently, so they stopped by for a visit after spending lots of time with her. They are enjoying their summer, spending lots of time at their summer home in Vinal Haven and more time with all their grandchildren. Kit is as busy as ever, but manages to get in a few rounds of golf and a swim now and then. They both are busy, happy people; nice to report, isn't it?

APPLAUSE FOR GARDEN CLUB

Hats off to the Cohasset Garden Club, they gave a gift of $5,000 to the Trustees of Reservations for landscaping at Turkey Hill (that's the property that we and Hingham, the Hingham Land Conservation Trust, the Cohasset Conservation Trust, the State of Massachusetts and some individual donors all got together to purchase)! We all know how com-

WARMING UP TO GOLF

You rarely see a professional golfer at a televised event performing stretching exercises and warm-ups prior to teeing off, although perhaps this would not be such a bad idea. The pros may make golf look easy, but the game can be very hard on the back. Each year, thousands of players visit emergency rooms with golf-related injuries. Many of these could be prevented with a 15-minute warm-up before each round, including five minutes of brisk walking to warm up muscles, followed by a few simple stretches to help loosen back, shoulder, forearm, and wrist muscles. To take things a step further, consider the benefits regular chiropractic care can provide in preventing injury and treating any problems that might occur.

Do you play golf? Maybe your game could benefit by visiting your chiropractor. At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, we are currently accepting new patients. We provide state-of-the-art chiropractic care in a warm and caring environment. Let us help you. Call us at 545-7388 to schedule an appointment. The sensible reaction to even mild pains should be a visit to our office. Chiropractic not only restores health, it builds health. We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor. I offer presentations on such important topics as "Raising a Healthy Drug-Free Family," "Back Safety in the Workplace," "Stress Reduction," and "Meeting the Healthcare Crisis Head-on." Call to find out more.

P.S. Research indicates that a progressive strength and flexibility program for golfers can increase club head speed.

COHASSET RESIDENTS CAMP COUNSELORS AT YMCA

Amanda Montgomery and Chris Griffin of Cohasset are camp counselors at the YMCA this summer.

The South Shore YMCA's Camp Discovery is having another great summer with more than 300 children from all over the South Shore attending. Camp Discovery, located on Mill Street directly off Route 53 in Hanover, offers children ranging in age from 3 to 15 daily activities including team sports, games, archery, arts and crafts, nature lessons and much more. More than 50 YMCA staff and counselors are on hand to lead the activities.

Residents from 10 South Shore towns will serve as counselors this summer. This includes Amanda Montgomery and Chris Griffin of Cohasset. Staff ranges from mature high school and college students to adults who have camping or recreational experience. All staff participates in a comprehensive orientation program, which includes the YMCA Character Development Program emphasizing the four basic core values of caring, honesty, respect and responsibility.

For more information, call June Blair at (617) 479-8500, Ext. 109.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy birthday greeting to Roly St. Clair-Barrie, who just turned nine years old. He had a wonderful party with all of his friends, and a great birthday. Have a great year, Roly!

REALLY GREAT PIZZA

We see that RGP Really Great Pizza is all set to open as this goes to press — it is located right downtown, in the former Zinnias' Cafe spot. It sounds delightful, you can have a different kind of pizza for breakfast, lunch, dinner or dessert. Keep an eye out for the grand opening, then go on in and give it a try.

A TRUE FRIEND

Bonnie (Edmonds) Ritter was in Cohasset recently; she flew in from Texas to attend her cousin Jenna's wedding. Bonnie certainly is a breath of fresh air; she has a wonderful sense of humor and an up-beat, positive attitude. She is the first one to give you a hug, has an ever-present smile, is a true friend! It is always a pleasure to have Bonnie in our midst, come again soon for a longer visit!

CLASS OF '68

The Cohasset High School Class of 1968 held its 30th reunion last weekend, under the able direction of Steve Sinopoli (Steve worked on it for more than a year). From all reports it was a huge success, Steve reached almost every member of his class! He has promised to give us all of the details once he has them all compiled; we are really looking forward to hearing them! We do know one thing, the class was deeply gratified to Steve for all of the time and effort he put in to make it such a huge success!

VOLUNTEERING

We are proud of Melinda Cheel, a Class of 1999 interdepartmental computer systems informations and arts major at Union College. Melinda has spent the past year volunteering in the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program in Schenectady. Melinda, a resident of 14 Margin Ct., is a 1994 graduate of Cohasset High School.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

A lot of hot air

It's August in Cohasset, so that must be the reason. When other towns have quieted down during the dog days of summer — Cohasset likes to keep the juices flowing.

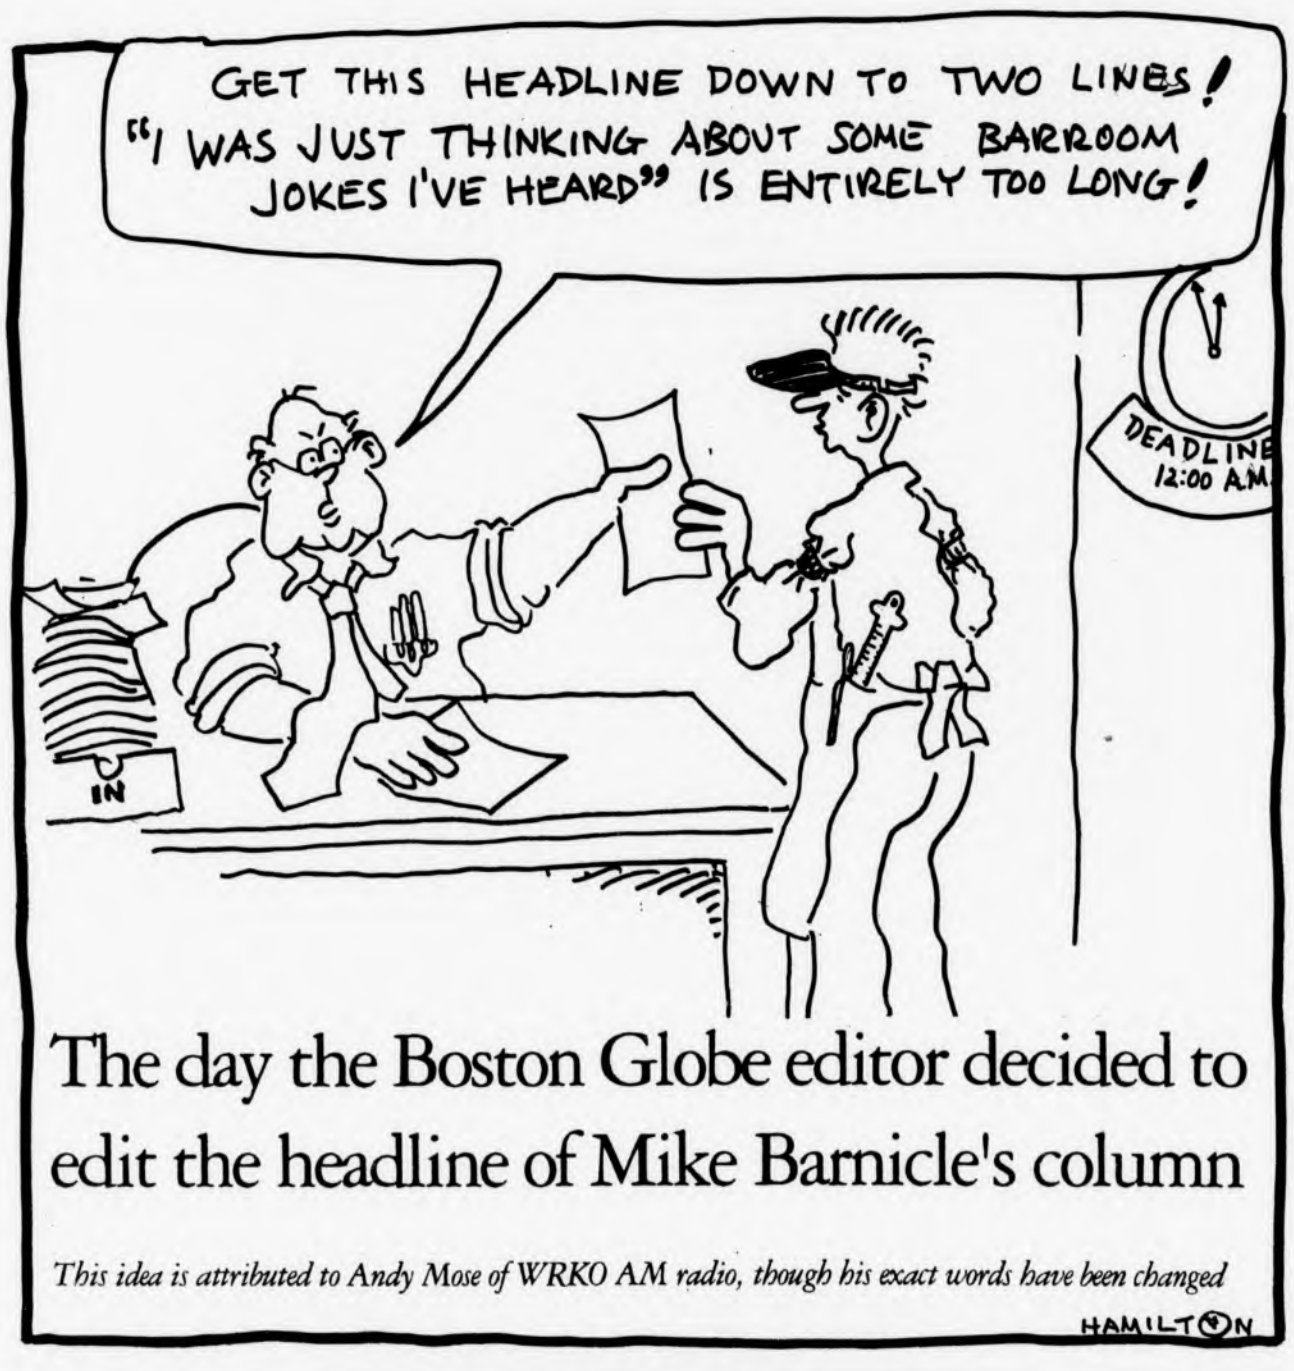
How else can the fiery sessions on the water main crisis of several years back, the heated special town meeting on the new school two summers ago or this week's rollicking back-to-back marathon meetings on a marina expansion proposal be explained? As we recall, they all occurred when the temperature and the humidity reached intolerable levels sending tempers flaring.

Selectmen got beaten up pretty badly Tuesday night when a majority of the board opted not to make a tough decision on whether or not to move the federal anchorage area in Bailey's Creek. They referred it to town meeting instead.

As several citizens in attendance demanded, then why were we all there?

It would have been much easier on everyone if selectmen just announced their decision — which they had apparently talked over among themselves — at the beginning of the meeting and gotten on with other business before the town.

After all, selectmen had just held a joint meeting with the harbor committee Thursday when the issue was debated ad nauseam. Then the entire scenario was replayed Tuesday evening to a board which already knew where it was going.



Too bad a majority of selectmen looked like "jelly fish" as one resident remarked. In the end, their weak-kneed effort to skirt resolving the issue once and for all was moot. Marina owner Paul Trendowicz did not jump at the town meeting bait. He needs to piggyback onto the federal dredging project now — October is too late. So despite the selectmen's effort to keep him dangling — they still ended up with a terse letter from Mr. Trendowicz who is now going to play hardball with the town over the ownership of the creek bottom.

Through all of this, we have to admire Selectman Diane Sullivan. She chose to go down swinging. Her motion not to recommend moving the federal anchorage line — if passed — would have yielded the same result. But she went on record opposing the project before the vote — while the others chimed in with their personal viewpoints afterward.

Too bad selectmen didn't stick by their decision in April when they asked Mr. Trendowicz to come back with an expansion proposal next year after the harbor is dredged.

That would certainly have saved a lot of hot air.

Town Hall auditorium acoustics

TO THE EDITOR:

Mention was made of the poor acoustics in the auditorium at the July 28 selectmen's meeting. One of the selectmen remarked that it was good enough for Humphrey Bogart. (What is now the Music Circus began in our town hall).

Well, yes, the acoustics aren't too bad when there are enough people to absorb the reverberating sound waves bouncing from the bare ceiling, floor and walls. But it is unbearable for smaller meetings with fewer bodies, because the sound waves bouncing back and forth cause one to hear a mixture of echos of sounds each of which originated a different number of milliseconds ago. It is helpful if the speaker talks quietly so that there is less sound energy to dissipate in several bounces across the room through the air. When a speaker gets passionately loud and assertive, the reverberations are increased and we are spared from understanding what was said.

The only cure is the addition of sound absorbing material to walls and/or ceiling, such as one or two inches thick high density acoustical fiberglass covered with fabric. (Such ceiling treatment transformed Bancroft Hall from acoustically unbearable to near perfect). The sound energy is converted to a tiny quantity of heat energy as the sound waves get lost in the interstices of the absorbing material; the sound from an entire fractious meeting on sewers wouldn't heat up a teaspoon of water, despite the watts input to the loudspeakers and the fury level of the participants. There is no sound system that can offset the lack of absorbtivity in the room, no matter how sophisticated and no matter how many loudspeakers are distributed around the room, so selectmen shouldn't cling to false hope of an easy out.

We are fortunate that the walls and ceiling aren't modern hard plasterboard; the old-fashioned lath and plaster was less reflective of sound waves. Perhaps it hardens with time so the old South Shore Players wouldn't sound so good now as they did.

Statistics support train

TO THE EDITOR,

Ms. Buckley's article was very disheartening to someone who commutes daily between the South Shore and Boston. The efforts of Ms. Buckley and her anti-train contemporaries have reduced a safe, clean, affordable and efficient mode of transportation into a dirty and deadly trip. As a daily commuter from the South Shore into Boston since 1982, I have tried every available mode of transportation, and few can compare to the ride on the New Old Colony Commuter Rail.

Is the train dirty? As a regular patron of the Commuter Boat, I often find myself gasping for fresh air to avoid the direct diesel fumes which pollute the air and ocean on every trip. Based on experience, emissions from a diesel locomotive have far less of a direct impact on the commuter than does a semi-truck, bus, or commuter boat.

It the train efficient? As far as operating on schedule, neither the P & B bus, nor the Red Line, nor the Boat can compare to the timeliness of the Commuter Rail on a trip by trip basis. The Commuter Rail is consistent and often on schedule.

Is the train deadly? According to the 1997 National Transportation Statistics, by USDOT Bureau of Transportation Statistics, the following fatalities were reported for each respective mode of transportation for the year 1995: automobile = 37,221 (nearly 50 percent at speeds less than 55 mph); Recreational Boating = 836; Transit (Motor Bus, Heavy Rail, Light Rail, Trolley Bus, Ferry Boat, Commuter Rail and Vanpool) = 274. In addition, regarding Ms. Buckley's reference to the poor engineering and planning and their relationship to safety at the highway/rail crossings, according to 1997 NTS, even through populations have increased along with the number of motor vehicles on highways, the number of fatalities at highway/rail crossings has been reduced from 1,610 in 1965 to 579 in 1995. The Old Colony route may date back to the Civil War, but the grade crossing protection does not.

Regrettably, accidents happen every day. However, some accidents are considerably more avoidable than others. One can be guaranteed to avoid an accident with a train by staying off the tracks. Unfortunately, there is no guaranteed solution to avoiding a car accident.

Based on the statistics, the solution to avoiding real tragedies, is to increase transit service to the South Shore to move thousands of commuters in and out of Boston and its surrounding communities safely and efficiently. Extending the Red Line to the Weymouth/Hingham line at Derby Street would only address a fraction of the demand, along with providing less than adequate service. People in North Weymouth, most of Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield are well served by a Red Line transit service near Route 3 that will make several stops throughout Quincy and Dorchester before arriving in Boston.

How many more lives will be lost in auto accidents during the time spent debating alternatives to a project that is feasible and funded? Restoration of the Greenbush service offers a clean, safe and efficient solution to the South Shore's dire need for improved transportation now and into the future. Your shameless exploitation of a tragic avoidable accident to promote your campaign is very sad.

Bradley's gun stance challenged

TO THE EDITOR:

Garrett Bradley has publicly questioned Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray's vote against the Gun Safety Bill in local papers suggesting that she is not concerned with the safety of children. My profession involves law enforcement sales and I am in contact with law enforcement personnel from all levels. I recently had lunch with a senior agent from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and, like every law enforcement official I have talked with about this bill, he was against it.

He told me that legal gun owners are not the people they are concerned with and that this legislation, and almost all like it, is aimed at law abiding folks, not criminals. Politicians, the guys he works for, know very little about the issues they face in the street. More often than not they react emotionally with ineffective, unenforceable laws. Police know what has to be done to lower crime, he explained. The murder rate in Boston is declining because the police have increasingly called on his bureau to arrest repeat offenders where they are prosecuted under much tougher federal laws. Under federal statute, anyone with a prior felony conviction caught with a gun, gun part or even a single bullet, becomes a guest of the federal prison system for 15 years. He said that the police have gotten very tired of bringing "misunderstood youths" before the Massachusetts judges only to have them released back onto the street.

Mr. Bradley claims to have read all 82 pages of the Gun Safety Bill. If this is true, he knows that his short letter doesn't begin to explain it or the reason a legislator might vote against it. For the record, more than one-third of the House members did vote against it. Many more would have but it is well-known that legislators are expected to follow party lines, especially toward bills that the Speaker of the House wants passed.

There are more than 1 million licenses to carry firearms (pistol permits) and more than 1.2 million Firearms Identification Cards issued in Massachusetts and we have some of the toughest gun and licensing laws in the country. Now, with this poorly written law, we have vague, confusing legislation aimed at law-abiding gun owners, not criminals. Our workable system will be replaced by a complicated, multi-tiered system based on confusing definitions. All licenses must be renewed next year regardless of when they were issued. That's 2.2 million renewals our police will have to deal with in one year. Of course, this does create a nifty new revenue stream of $55 million in fees every four years. Add to this drop tests for guns (seven times on concrete) that will only render them unsalable, 900 degree temperature tests (???), requirements for locking devices technology has yet to invent, and hundreds of other poorly-worded, contradictory restrictions, and you have the "Gun Owners Harassment Bill of 1998." By the way, criminals don't have licenses.

The safety of our children requires educational programs like the Eddie Eagle Gun Safety Course offered free of charge to schools. We need sensible safety regulations and personal responsibility of gun owners through educational programs.

Register to vote

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or election day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

The last day to register to vote and change party enrollment for the State Primary Sept. 15 is Wednesday, Aug. 26. The Town Clerk's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mail-in registration forms are available from the Town Clerk's office, Cohasset Post Office and Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before Aug. 26.

Haddad looks back on a hectic year

where you work," Haddad said.

"It's a very demanding job and we've had our good points and our bad points over the past 12 months, but I think there will have been more good than bad. Based on the way things are going now, I would hold this job forever if the town would have me."

Clearly, Haddad loves what he does. Since he was a teenager, Haddad has been interested in municipal government. He points out that he was the only student in Andover High School who knew the name of the town administrator. By the time he turned 18, he was hanging out at town meeting participating in the democratic process.

"I love the open form of town meeting government," Haddad said. "I'm a big fan of that. People deserve to be heard."

Haddad has parlayed that love of town government into a career that has spanned 14 years, including stints in other towns as executive secretary and town administrator. Now, at the end of his first year as the town's chief administrator, Haddad is able to look back on events with the advantage of 20-20 hindsight.

"I've been really pleased with the support I've received from the town department heads and the town boards, especially the board of selectmen," Haddad said. "They've been outstanding, and the selectmen have really taken a hands-off approach. They've let me be the town manager and allowed me to run the day-to-day operations."

Before the selectmen selected Haddad, it was not clear at all whether the new form of government would work. Some of the selectmen initially opposed the citizen's petition asking to create a town manager form of government. The selectmen felt the proposal should have been studied more thoroughly, but the voters disagreed and approved the proposal. For the most part, the town manager form of government seems to have worked well, Haddad said.

"I think the day-to-day operations of the town government have really picked up the pace," Haddad said. "Before, if someone had an issue, they had to contact the selectmen's office, get on the agenda, wait for a meeting, and possibly return more than once to answer questions and address concerns. Now, if there's an issue, I can pick up the telephone, call a department head, discuss the issue, make a decision and off we go."

Also, Haddad said he believes in an open-door policy to encourage department heads and residents alike to come to him with problems and concerns.

"People can come in with their concerns and we can make mutual decisions. In the final analysis, it's my call," Haddad said "But I don't like to be heavy-handed. I'll work with the person so they can understand where I'm coming from."

As an example, he cites the time some residents from Jerusalem Road called to complain about a street light that had been burned out for months. The residents contacted Eastern Edison on several occasions, but got no help. Haddad used his position as town manager to call the electric company and have the bulb replaced in one day.

"We're able to do things quicker than people are used to," Haddad said. "I think we're more responsive to the taxpayers' concerns."

Haddad is quick to give a lot of credit to department heads and other municipal workers in town. He said the streamlined service at town is a team effort involving the secretaries, support staff and department heads.

Gaining the support and cooperation of town department heads has been one of Haddad's primary goals since coming to Cohasset. Department heads no longer need to spend time coming out to weekly selectmen's meetings to give reports. Instead, they can talk to Haddad who reports back to selectmen, which is far more efficient, he said.

The first real test of Haddad's ability to work with other department heads came when he had to choose a new library director. Haddad said some of the library trustees were skeptical of his power as the new appointing authority in town. However, Haddad assured the trustees that they were the experts on library directors and he would feel confident appointing whomever they chose. The trustees chose Janet Husband and Haddad appointed her. Working with the school committee, the only autonomous board in town, on the budget proved to be a surmountable challenge. Haddad didn't give the school committee all the money it wanted, but he ended up approving more than he envisioned.

"Working together cooperatively, and I want to stress cooperatively, makes this process work great," Haddad said. "We are all here to work for the benefit of the taxpayers and residents of this town."

Of course, it hasn't been all smooth sailing. In one case, town meeting rejected Haddad's recommendation to divert funds from fire hydrant fees. But he has no problem with that decision, deferring to town meeting's authority as the final word on local matters.

And while he couldn't think of any event over the last 12 months that surprised him, he did express some disappointment over the sewer commissioners' decision to sue the town over who has the authority to award sewer contracts.

"Never before have I seen one town board suing another," Haddad said. "We've had close calls in other communities, but we were able to sit own and work it out. But I've never seen this before. If the lawsuit resolves the matter, great. We're spending the town's money on legal fees. It is definitely costing us money."

Haddad acknowledged that there are no easy answers to the town's waste water management problem, which is one of the biggest challenges facing the town. He was critical of one other aspect waste water management: using limited sewer capacity to control growth in town. Some critics of the sewer commissioners have argued that they are trying to limit growth with limited sewering in town. Haddad said the right way to control growth is through zoning with the development of a comprehensive master plan. That plan is high on Haddad's agenda.

Now that the Haddad family has moved to the South Shore (Scituate), there appears to be no turning back. Haddad said his wife loves the South Shore so much that she has declared he will have to drag her to another area if he changes jobs. And Haddad seems confident that he will not want to change jobs for a long time; he's made a long-term commitment to Cohasset in his own mind. Meanwhile, Haddad and his wife are discussing the possibility of another long-term commitment: a sibling for their one child, 17-month old Philip.

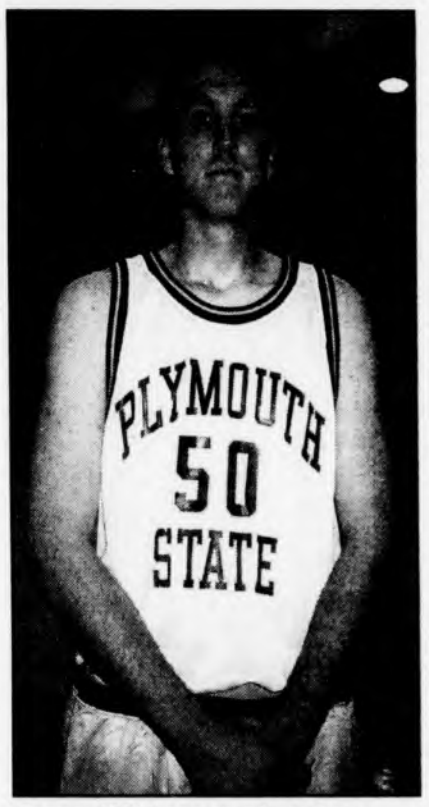
Bishop hopes for expanded role at Plymouth State College

By Jim O'Sullivan
CORRESPONDENT



It's not too often that a college freshman finds himself on the 12-man roster of a championship caliber team, let alone as a contributing member of that team.

But Cohasset's Ryan Bishop, a 6'8" redhead with an easy smile and a knack for defensive rebounding, finds himself in just such a spot.

Bishop graduated from Cohasset High School in 1997 after a three-year varsity career which saw him rake in two South Sectional titles, two South Shore League flags and SSL All-Star honors. He walked away from his high school career with a phenomenal 58-14 record.

"Bish," third in a trio of basketball playing brothers and the fourth and final brother to play sports at CHS, was not only an essential player on those three radically different teams, but also a leader here, particularly in his final two seasons. However, even as a sophomore, Ryan could be a voice of reason on a team always brimming with emotion and sometimes strife. It couldn't have been easy for the team's youngest player, and one of only two rookies, to stand up and say his piece when he disagreed with a teammate.

Bishop was the consummate teammate, a genuine captain, despite the fact that he never wore the title for a season. One of this reporter's fondest memories is of a playoff game three years ago, in Bishop's junior season. Matched against a then-undefeated Scituate team, the Skippers, guided by the coaching of Ron Ford and Mark Hall, and led by superstar Jared Hardwick, dismantled the Sailors through guile and heart.

Former CHS hoop standout Ryan Bishop is now running the court for Plymouth State.

At one pivotal moment late in the intense second half, when players' legs were lead and oxygen hard to find in the packed gym, a loose ball bounded around near midcourt. Bish launched his 80-inch frame onto the hardwood, snapping up the ball and, in effect, the game. It ranks among my favorite moments as a fan and a writer, and occurred during a game which was among the best I've seen and still ranks among Ford and Hall's most cherished victories.

When asked about the play recently, typical fashion, Bish just smiled and replied, "It's the only way to play the game."

Indeed it is, and Bishop's game has taken him north to Plymouth State College, where he will vie for a starting role next year. The Panthers are a team packed with talent, but Bishop's hustle and ignorance of knowing when to quit will endear him to coaches wherever he plays.

Asked if he had anything to say about Bishop, Ford smiled at the thought of a player in whom he'd invested an incredible amount of emotion, time and effort over a six-year span. The relationship between the two was interesting to watch; the 6'8" high school basketball player and the 5'7" (give or take an inch. . .mostly take) disciplinarian. In the end, it was obvious that each had bettered the other in their respective roles.

"Bishop was a very, very talented player for us. He was consistent, and extremely talented."

Consistent, talented, never-say-die, competitive, lunchpail, charismatic, underrated. All these words, and more, could describe the way Bish plays hoops and what he brings to a team. Told by Coach Ford for years that he was a mere six inches away from being an NBA lottery pick, Bishop figures he'll make a run at it anyway, and probably play some pretty good basketball along the road.

Blue shark tops the scales at Heritage Day fishing tourney

THE FISH STORY

MARK TRASK

Small schools of pogies riffles across the oily-smooth surface in the predawn light. The urge was serious to throttle back the Whaler and set to snagging in the shadow of the ghostly lighthouse. But Jim kept the throttle pinned and zoomed north to Boston Harbor and his date, helping inner-city kids learn the joys of harvesting fish from the sea. Peter saw the same schools and made haste for the shop to rig up his newly repaired surfcasting rod. The Jackson clan deployed their tube and worm rigs, some fishing commercial, all fishing and having fun. All connecting with a horde of heavy bass.

The warm weedy water of Lily Pond was the site of Jon Connell's recent fishing trip. Jon's shiners proved too much for a fat 5 pound, four ounce largemouth bass. A stream of anglers have followed Jon's lead in recent days, some having similar luck of their own. Barry popped in the other day to pickup his hunting license. A good reminder to those who want to get their antlerless application in to the Division. Time is getting short. Doing any fishing Barry, I teased? Yea he said. We both laughed. Barry fished spring trout.

Matt Cunningham made a trip south from Cohasset to Peggotty Beach in Scituate with a bucketful of tinker mackerel. He was quite pleased with the 24 pound, 6 ounce bass that stretched 42 and 1/2 inches on the scale. Reports of a resurgence of bass slamming tubes and chunks on the rocks from Hardings Ledge to the Bug Light pier in Duxbury Bay seem to indicate the usual summer slack period is history.

Jamie Jackson was the first to weigh a bass in the Beachcomber Tournament and made it stick to take the first weekly prize. Jamie was tubing around Chest Lodge and the bite was on. The big bass weighed in at 28 pounds, 12 ounces and measured 44 and 1/2 inches. Talk about throwing down the gauntlet in the boat division. Prizes are awarded each week in the boat and shore divisions. Souvenir T-shirts are presented to each angler entering the tournament.

At press time the winner of Scituate Heritage Days Shark Tournament was reported to be a 309 pound blue shark. More details will follow.

Catch one that is hard to carry!

Easter Seals Marathon turns 15

Softball fun will go around the clock

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

Fifteen years ago it was a way for eight local teenagers to stay up all night and have a little fun.

Four hundred people and nearly $50,000 in donations to the Easter Seals Fund later, the annual softball marathon in Duxbury has become an official tradition.

"Fifteen years ago I had no idea that I'd still be doing this today," said Marshfield selectman Jim Cantwell as he prepared to strap on the turf shoes on more time. "Every year people from all around are asking me when the game is going to be. It's become a tradition."

The first pitch will be thrown from the mound at Train Field in Duxbury at 9 a.m. on Saturday, August 22. From there more than 100 people from all around the South Shore will show their skills on the diamond around the clock until the last player standing turns out the lights at 9 a.m. on Sunday.

All money raised from this charity event will go to the Easter Seals Society of Massachusetts to support such programs as stroke therapy, wheelchair donations, recreational services and in-house care. Kerri Gerety, an Easter Seal client, will be on hand to throw out the first pitch of the game.

Included with all the fun of trying to function in a coordinated manner while working on little or no sleep is the fact that the players are all out there for a good cause. With each player challenged to bring $50 in donations with them to the game it is a surety that the event will break the $50,000 in overall donations this year.

"Not only is this a great way to see friends that you may only get to see once a year, you can't beat the Easter Seals as a cause to play for," said Cantwell. "Along the way we've had the chance to meet some of the people who have been helped by the organization, which really has shown the great work that they do."

The Easter Seal group is a direct service organization committed to providing world class, quality programs and services to help people with disabilities and their family live life with quality, dignity and independence.

Like the rest of us, Cantwell is not afraid to admit that he is not as young as he used to be. He takes that into consideration when you are taking on an athletic feat of this magnitude.

"You learn to pace yourself," said Cantwell, who himself learned that lesson a little too late. A few years back he went sliding into a base and came back up with a one-way ticket to the emergency room for some stitches and other repair work to his leg.

"I've got the knee brace so I'm ready to get to work," said Cantwell. "You have a pretty good idea that you are going to be in a little pain when you're through with the game, but it's a great time for a great cause.

"The important thing is to make sure you stretch and take it easy on yourself. It's a long game and you are going to have more than enough chances to be a hero."

Over the years participation has nearly tripled as close to 100 people are expected to take part this year. The large numbers allow people to pick and choose their spots to play and conserve energy for the later innings.

"The day and the evening shifts are usually pretty full through the night. When you come into the early morning hours, that's when you start to see the real troopers come through," said Cantwell.

The average person usually plays in a three-to-four hours shift, but even to this day there are those ironmen who go all 24 hours.

This year the Boston Red Sox are donating game tickets and New Balance is offering sneakers to some of the top performers. As well, more than 30 businesses and organizations offer a variety of products each year to try and make the day go as smoothly as possible.

For more information on the softball marathon or if you want to register to play or become a sponsor, please contact Jim Cantwell at 837-5407, Dan Bardon at 837-6337 or John Hokanson, 934-6185.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Hingham Bay Junior Regatta, July 23 and 24

Racing coach Amy Logue was very happy with the performance of the six crews that raced in their first regatta of the year in the Hingham Bay Junior Regatta. Competing in the Turnabout Red Fleet of 31 boats:

Betsy Reynolds and Mike Haajar placed 10th overall including one 5th place finish. Rachel Doyle and Elisa Jerome placed 13th overall including one 12th place finish.

Phil Strazzulla & John Dewaal placed 24th overall including one 4th place finish. Julie Shea and Kelly Hurley finished 30th overall.

In the 420 fleet of 30 boats, the crew of Robin Cunningham and Lane Forrer placed 21st overall with two finishes in the top 20 boats.

Congratulations to all these sailors on a great first regatta of the season. All of the crews will continue to prepare for the Mass Bay Junior Regatta, a Junior Olympics event, that will be held on Aug. 17-19 at the Hull Yacht Club.

Team Racing

Aug. 5

Last week, the Sailing Club had its first team race of the year in the Club 420's against the Hingham Yacht Club. Unfortunately for Cohasset, Hingham won the "Best of 3" races format with two quick wins. The Cohasset team skippers Sean Chase, Robin Cunningham and Kate Henderson all sailed well with the help of their junior sailor crews, but placed 4, 5 and 6 in the first race and 3, 5 and 6 in the second race.

Aug. 7

On Friday, the Sailing Club team traveled to the Lincoln Sailing Center in Hingham Harbor to race 420's against a team that the Club has dominated during the last two seasons. This year it was Lincoln's turn, however, as they beat Cohasset in 2 hard fought races. The Cohasset skippers Sean Chase, Robin Cunningham and Eric Libby jumped out to an early lead, but suffered equipment problems and an unexpected encounter with a sand bar that allowed Lincoln to win the deciding second race.

Volunteers are needed for gym-raising

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Adrienne MacCarthy and Mary Goodwin provided the idea, the Osgood's PSO and the larger town PSO along with donations from town residents and businesses provided the funding; now all it needs is a village to raise it.

"It" is the new pine green, burgundy and cream-colored playground that children attending the opening day of the new Osgood School this Sept. 2 can release their back-to-school energy on.

So far, 15 Cohasseters have come forward for the 7 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., Aug. 22 assemblage of the play area. Fifteen more volunteers are needed.

"We can use anybody, really," said MacCarthy. "Basically, it's assembly work. Not a lot of hammering and sawing. We'll probably put teams together-one putting posts into holes and another hoisting up the platform; that sort of thing."

MacCarthy hopes that others will sign on to help raise the structure, perhaps even offering their services tag-team style, with one spouse working through the morning and early afternoon hours and the other covering the last hours of the day.

The following day, too, will be busy and volunteers will be needed to help cement the newly posted structure in place.

Refreshments, snacks and food will be provided, assured MacCarthy, even if she has to provide it herself. That probably won't be necessary. Already, Cohasset's Atlantic Bagel has offered to donate 15 sandwiches for lunch and MacCarthy is hopeful that other local eateries will get in the spirit of things, too.

MacCarthy and Goodwin, both members of the school facilities committee, got involved when, according to Goodwin, it became apparent that there were not going to be moneys for a play structure in the new school construction budget.

Some time last April, the two women approached the PSOs to find out how much they could get for a new playground and how much more they'd need to raise.

"It just kind of took off from there," said MacCarthy. Flyers were sent home with Osgood students. Fellow fund-raisers Lucia Flibotte and Susan Galligan literally walked into shops and explained the situation.

The net tally of four months' effort, drawn from the PSO's t-shirt sale and book fair, local business and private contributions and Tom O'Brien Nissan's donation of a "mega-rock" for climbing, was enough to purchase the $23,563 playground.

"From what I hear, the amount we raised in such a small period of time is quite a feat," said MacCarthy.

The aluminum and plastic structure will stand over wood fibar, a material that looks like regular wood chips, except these cost $10,000 for the 100-square-foot playground area.

That's because these chips purportedly don't break down like ordinary wood chips, have a five-year-life before needing to be refreshed, don't attract bugs and will compact with use from 12 inches deep to nine.

Should a child fall, the fibar will offer a resilient cushioning, especially since there will be an additional rubber padding below the fibar by the three slides and six-swings of the gym where it's needed most.

Another benefit of the chips is that it allows wheelchair and stroller access, meeting ADA approval. The playground area also has a transfer platform for wheelchairs.

MacCarthy is very happy about the new playground. "It's been truly amazing that our families and friends have pulled together to make this thing happen in such a short period of time so that it can be ready for the kids when they come together for the first time. That was the goal we set for ourselves in April when we started this whole thing," she said.

The many swings and slides, most coming off a five- and six-foot deck, can be added to at a later date with attachable equipment made by the same manufacturer. Should more funds be needed for that addition, MacCarthy will get the Osgood students involved in fund-raising. But for now, MacCarthy is just excited that the project is near completion.

"I can't wait to play on it, which is what I'll be doing at dusk when no one else can see me," she joked.

If you are interested in helping assemble the new playground, call Adrienne MacCarthy at (781) 383-1028.

Cohasset High School 30th reunion

The Cohasset High School Class of 1968 will hold its 30th reunion Saturday, Aug. 29, at the Cohasset Lightkeeper's House from 6 to 10 p.m.. The cost is $50 per couple or $30 per person, payable to Cathy Davis, 52 Linden Dr., Cohasset, 02025.

Organizers are trying to locate the following graduates and would appreciate help: Sally Bohmer, Charlie (Biff) Donovan, James Feran, Bob Flanagan, Denise Grant, Alison Hatheway, Margie Hubbard, Jim Hurley, David LeDoux, Sue McIntyre, John McNeil, Ann Spinzola and Karen Walsh.

If you have knowledge about these persons or any 1968 graduate, call (781) 383-2570 and leave a message with address and phone number.

Chef Ambrose cooks up Community Center benefit

A subcommittee of the South Shore Community Center Board of Directors raised more than $13,000 to apply to much needed capital improvements as well as continued debt reduction for the center. Two fund-raisers, headed up by Trish Hart and Andrea Kinneally from the board, made for an exciting evening. First was an elegant dinner party held July 14 at the Lightkeeper's Cottage. The dinner party raised $5,000 and was attended by 85 people. Second was a raffle drawing for three nights at the Wauwinet House on Nantucket. More than 400 $25 tickets were sold to take a chance on this dream getaway, raising $8,000 for the center.

The dinner was prepared by chef Anthony Ambrose and his wife Dorene, three-year residents of Cohasset and owners of the restaurant Ambrosia on Huntington Avenue in Boston. The meal included freshly caught Cohasset striped bass, Australian racks of lamb, and carefully paired fine wines. Ambrose began the dinner with freshly caught striped bass sushi and sashimi. This was then followed by a first course of grilled striped bass served with native corn, fava beans and a warm Indonesian vinaigrette.

All fish were donated by Cohasset residents Peter Flaherty and Paul Hart.

Ambrose followed with an entree of hand-selected Australian rack of lamb with a potato nori terrine and a mint-miso glaze. The lamb was donated by Joe Kinneally, Cohasset resident and co-owner of T.F. Kinneally Meats of Boston. The finale to the dinner were individual pints of Chef Ambrose's recently launched selection of chamomile tea sorbets. Interesting flavors, such as peach lavender and chocolate nutmeg, provided a cool conclusion. Accompanying each course were specially selected wines by David Browne, a Hingham resident, from Commonwealth Wine and Spirits.

Paul and Trish Hart, who own the Lantana Function Facility in Randolph, donated all the linens, glassware, flatware and serving utensils. Generous contributions were also made by Town and Country Florist of Randolph and Stop & Shop of Cohasset.

"We owe a great thanks to Tony and his wife Dorene for not only their generosity in donating their time and energy into making the evening a success, but also for their creativity and expertise in creating an exquisite dinner and truly special summertime celebration," said center board president Matt Galligan.

The South Shore Community Center is a non-profit organization that provides educational programs for all age groups. It is home of the Community Center Nursery School and Cohasset's Council on Aging. It is supported by funds from membership dues, program fees and other outside fund-raising. For more information on the center and its fall program, call (781) 383-0088.

Anthony Ambrose talks about preparation of the evening's meal at the elegant dinner party benefit.

LIBRARY CORNER

Storyteller at library Aug. 20

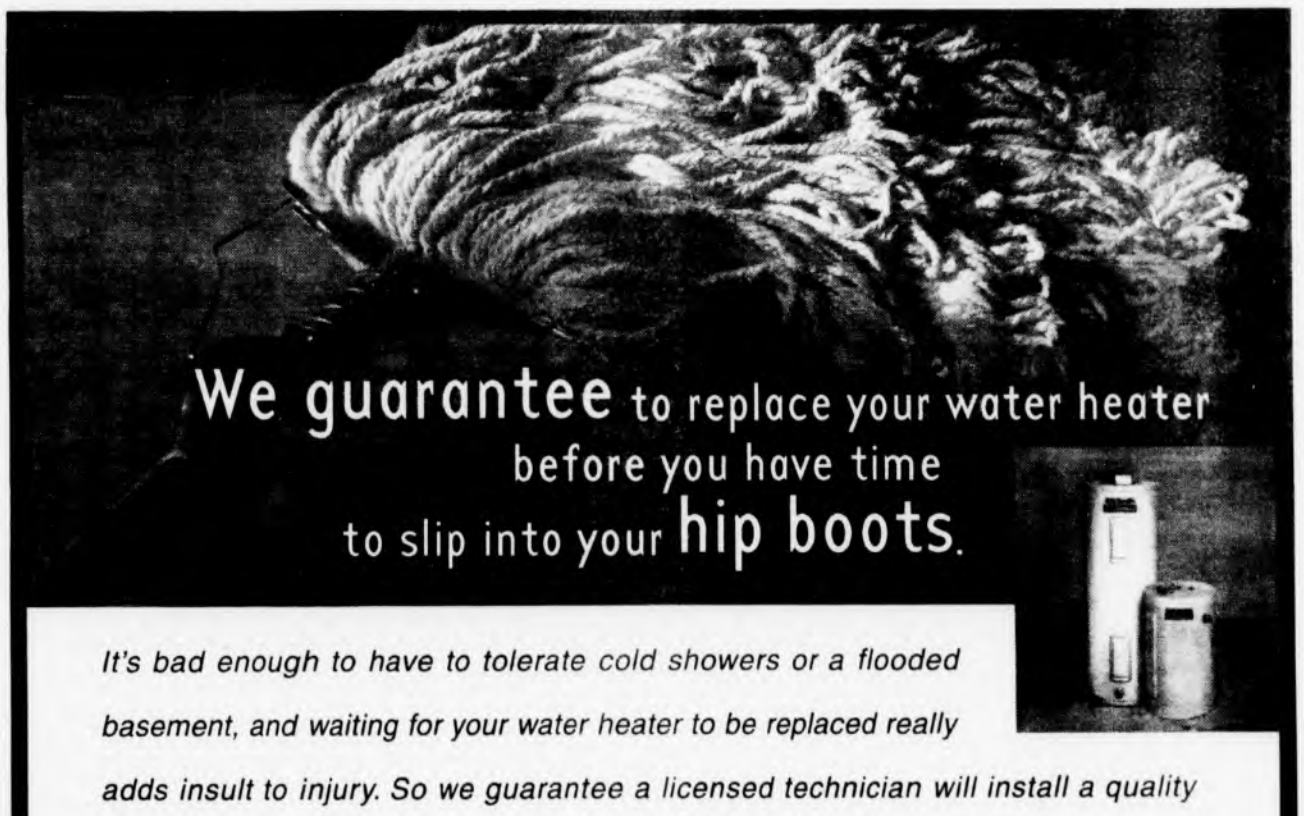
Alicia Quintano will perform "The Mysterious Stranger and Other Stories," a program of stories and songs for children in grades K to 4 and their families at Paul Pratt Memorial Library Thursday, Aug. 20, at 7 p.m.

Hear exciting and mysterious tales drawn from cultures as far away as Africa, Ireland and Japan. Wizards and magical beasts come alive as audience and storyteller join together in listening and telling the tales.

The event is supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Local Cultural Council, a local agency supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

An "itinerant storyteller par excellence" (Woodstock Times-NY), Alicia Quintano has traveled to 38 states performing in libraries, elementary schools, universities, theaters, at festivals and on the radio.

Alicia trained as an actress with the Barter Theatre in Abingdon, Va. She toured in children's theatre, and was theatre director at the Aaron Copland Music and Arts Program for children in New York state.



Her storytelling appearances include the Three Apples Storytelling Festival, Gloucester Stage Company, First Night Boston, the United Nations Women's Guild and family storytelling symposiums and concerts in Massachusetts and Alaska.

Don't miss Alicia Quintano at Paul Pratt Memorial Library Aug. 20. For information, call (781) 383-1348.

School board likes fund-raising proposal

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

An outlined proposal to establish an alternative funding subcommittee was submitted by Patricia Martin to fellow school committee members during their Aug. 9 meeting.

Martin's stated charge and goal, as detailed in her pink handout is "to identify and, with approval from the Cohasset School Committee, tap into potential funding sources which could provide additional moneys for Cohasset school programs."

The objectives stated include maintaining a clear line of communication between the Cohasset School Committee and the subcommittee; identifying sources for funding and the ramifications of obtaining funds through those sources; raising funds through approaching foundations, writing grants, soliciting corporations, developing fee-generating programs, exploring partnerships, offering community-wide special events and general fund-raising; heading each funding source with one person who would be assisted in their goal by the subcommittee; and working with the office of the Superintendent and Business Manager to help manage funds raised while also keeping appropriate records.

"I think you did a great job on this. I'm all for it. If you only raise $2,000, it's an extra $2,000—but we should make it a workable group of people from the school."
— Chairman Rick Shea

Martin's "no-cost" idea would provide opportunities for volunteerism for those not already involved with the PSOs in Cohasset.

At the very least, Martin would like to see the already existing school fund-raising groups explore the new options mentioned in her proposal for a new alternative funding sub-committee.

Martin wants the work done in stages, with the subcommittee exploring sources and the ramifications involved, moving forward only after reporting back to an amenable school committee.

School committee members responded favorably to Martin's plan

"I think you did a great job on this," said chairman Rick Shea to Martin. "I'm all for it. If you only raise $2,000, it's an extra $2,000—but we should make it a workable group of people from the school."

Because the alternative funding sub-committee is still only a proposal, Martin has not yet discussed the matter with the PSO formally.

Committee member Mark DeGiacomo was concerned about how the PSO might feel about a change from without. "They are indep[illegible]nt groups doing their own thing. I'm curious how they might feel about this," he said.

Martin said that the PSO might become idea people with a lead person pulling it all together.

DeGiacomo also questioned whether the sub-committee would be under the supervision of the school committee or the new superintendent.

All agreed to wait on the matter until the new superintendent comes on board in mid-September.

School lunch bid is accepted

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The United Kingdom-based Compass Group's Chartwells division submitted the lowest—and sole—bid to provide school lunch program services.

Chartwells is the same food vendor that serviced Cohasset schools last year. The companies within the group provide food service in a variety of settings in Germany, the UK, Holland, France, and the United States.

School superintendent Stephen Hart introduced the bid for approval at the Aug. 6 school committee meeting.

"In terms of the per-year cost, there will be an $8,000 administrative fee; an $11,500 management fee to run the whole program; and then there is the additional cost of food and labor," said Hart.

The contract is a renewable one which was negotiated by town manager Mark Haddad and town accountant Michael Buckley, explained Hart.

It is anticipated that more children will be buying lunches just because of the novelty of buying food from the new kitchen at the Osgood school.

That's a good thing, since food vendors do not profit from their sales but the school department's they work for do. Increased spending on lunches will mean that the profit from those sales can be turned over to the school. Already, a $4,000 profit is projected for next year.

The privilege permitted seniors, long accustomed to leaving the school premises for lunch, may be reconsidered due to the gains to be made from their percentage of lunches purchased.

Hart would like to see a return to the breakfast scheduling that used to be available for students.

"Lunches will cost $1.70 to $1.80 per meal and will maintain nutritional guidelines," said Hart.

Reduced-cost lunches will be made available to those students who qualify. A form will be sent home with income guidelines for those children who may be eligible for the program.

Chartwell's three-year contract is renewable.

The school committee is considering looking into other communities, such as Abington, which runs its own food service program.

The committee agreed to accept Chartwell's bid.

Towns to seek new report on Greenbush

More study on environment wanted

By Carol Britton Meyer
STAFF WRITER

At a round table discussion last week, three South Shore communities with varying views on the MBTA's proposed restoration of the Greenbush rail line, which would run from Scituate to Braintree, finally agreed on something.

Representatives from Hingham, Scituate and Cohasset comprise a tri-town committee which has come up with some common concerns among the three towns.

They say a new environmental report needs to be written in light of mutual concerns about air quality, safety, traffic and noise and vibration impacts, citing serious flaws in the MBTA's study.

"The purpose of this meeting is to try to come together on what appears to be some serious misinformation over the past couple of years," said Scituate Selectman Joseph Norton.

Tech Environmental Associates was commissioned by Cohasset to produce a report, which resulted in the consultants questioning the MBTA's method of calculating noise impact by averaging it over a 24-hour period as well as its information regarding air pollution from diesel train engines. The consultants also said noise and vibration mitigation proposed by the transit authority is not adequate.

An EPA report was recently withdrawn because it contained faulty information based on the number of train trips into Boston would occur should Greenbush become a reality.

Thomas Gruber, chairman of Cohasset's railroad mitigation committee, agreed to write a letter to state Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Coxe with Alexander Macmillan, Hingham's Greenbush coordinator, asking her to require a new environmental report.

The letter is expected to be ready for consideration by other members of the joint committee by Wednesday, Aug. 26, the date of the tri-town committee's next meeting, which will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Hingham Town Hall. Once members agree to the wording of the letter, it will be turned over to the selectmen in each town for action.

This is the first time Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate have come together to air their common concerns to the MBTA.

"We need to point out that new information has surfaced since the project was first scoped in 1992," Macmillan said. "The MBTA's draft and final impact statements need to be approved, and (the transit authority) wants to rush in and get (Coxe's) approval of the final one and then say they'll fix things later."

"The purpose of this meeting is to try to come together on what appears to be some serious misinformation over the past couple of years."
- Scituate Selectman Joseph Norton.

Gruber agreed, stating, "Each town has different war stories to tell regarding what they're dissatisfied with, but some issues most of us seem dissatisfied with."

The committee is also considering writing individual letters to Gov. Paul Cellucci and the Army Co[illegible] Engineers, the lead federal [illegible] reviewing the Greenbush pro[illegible]

"The question is, Can my co[illegible] which are now deep-rooted, be fixed?" Norton asked. "One thing we can all agree on is that none of the three towns can live with the project as it's now on the table. It would be a disaster, and unacceptable for all three towns."

While Hingham Selectman Martin Crane agrees the letter should be written to Coxe, he emphasized that it's premature to discuss mitigation before there has been "an honest, fair study" of the Greenbush proposal.

"Even the Army Corps of Engineers has sent the MBTA back to look at the alternatives to rail restoration, air quality and ridership," he said, stating that the development of Hingham Shipyard, which includes a plan for enhanced boat transportation; a proposed connector road from Route 3 to Route 18 through the South Weymouth Naval Air Station; and the possibility of faster commuter boats from Scituate reflect the area's changing transportation scenario.

"These equal a flexible method of transportation which is not so environmentally hazardous," he said. "Is Greenbush worth it?"

The letter, however, will neither oppose nor support the Greenbush project.

"But it does say we need more information," Crane said. "Each town can look at the information to make our own decisions in the future."

Macmillan also pointed out that a proposal to include additional stations at Quincy and the Boston Globe could make the Greenbush commute at least six minutes longer.

Martin Corry, a member of Cohasset's mitigation committee, is also a lobbyist on Beacon Hill.

"These three communities are coming together for the first time, not to say yes or no to the train, but to voice their concerns," he said, stating more legislators would show an interest in the Greenbush issue if they "had a clue of the cost when all is said and done and the air quality issues."

Gruber pointed out that all three towns reached similar conclusions separately.

"We've chosen to agree and need to get the maximum clout by fighting the battle together," he said. "The issues are serious enough that our three towns joined together to represent the severity of our claims."

Scituate Selectman Susan Phippen and Cohasset Selectman Diane Sullivan were also present at the meeting.

"The MBTA had a cooperative approach at the beginning, but it got to the point where things soured dramatically when we wouldn't give away the store (so to speak)," she said.

Creating a vision for the harbor

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Jim Shipsky has a vision for Cohasset Harbor and the village. Shipsky is the architect appointed by the Village Revitalization Task Force to conduct a planning study of the village/harbor area using a $5,000 Department of Environmental Management Coastal Access Grant. A large part of Shipsky's vision is obtaining as much information as possible from residents about what they would like the town to do with the village and harbor areas of town.

Shipsky has some of his own ideas about what kind of improvements might improve the village and the harbor. But it is the residents of Cohasset— through elected and appointed officials, public hearings and discussion— who must ultimately develop a vision for the revitalization of the village and harbor. To that end, a survey seeking public input on the planning study is included in this week's Mariner (see page 11).

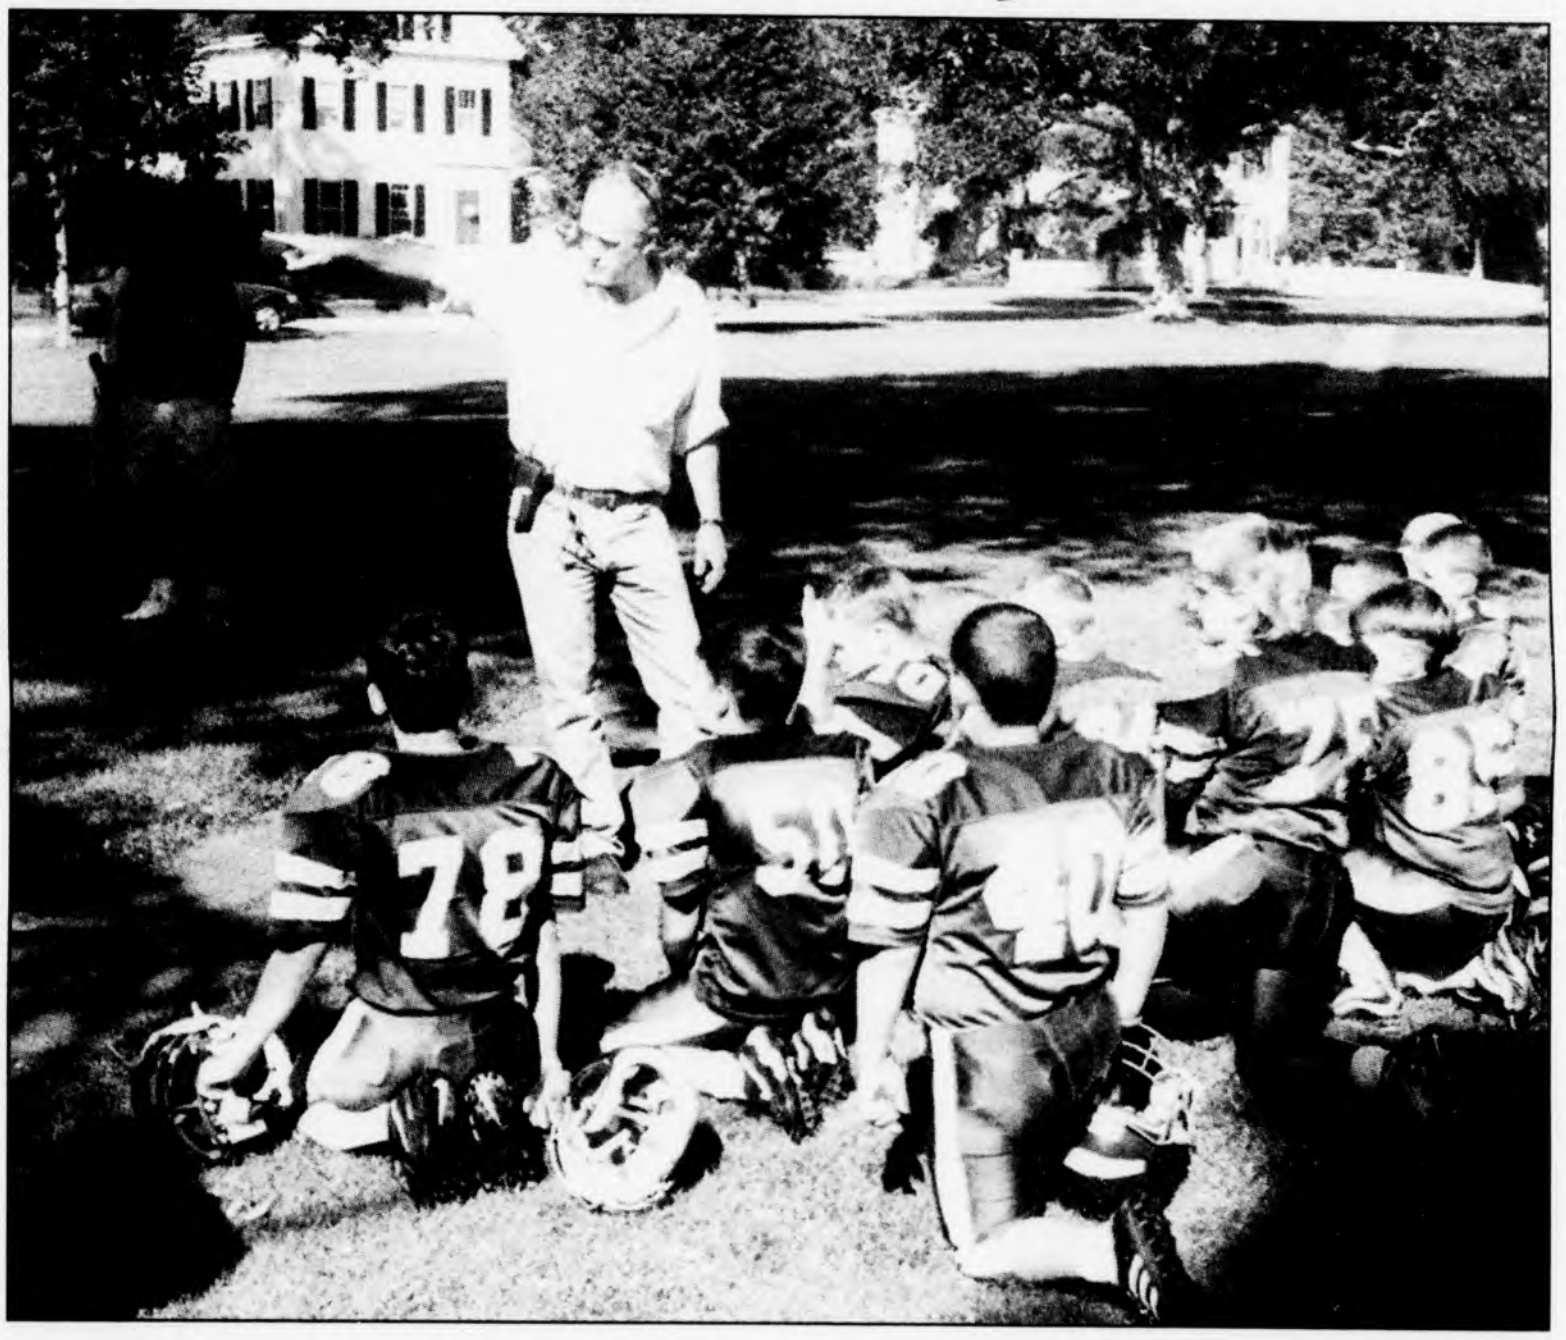
Alcohol training a must

License holders have to comply

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER



A new policy requiring all liquor license holders in Cohasset to put their employees through TIPS or any other state-certified alcohol training program is in place subject to town counsel's approval. License holders will have until Jan. 1 – when their licenses come up for renewal – to comply.

Following the sale of alcohol to a minor at a local convenience store in June, Police Chief Brian Noonan called for Cohasset's Drug & Alcohol Committee to create a program to prevent illegal alcohol sales. But selectmen took matters into their own hands last week when they approved the new policy.

The resulting policy will obligate all current

Sharks go Hollywood

Assistant director Myles Johnstone indicates the spot for the youth football players to go during a commercial being filmed on Cohasset Common Wednesday morning.

Youth football team stars in TV commercial

By David McKee
STAFF WRITER

Move over Drew Bledsoe. Get out of the way Brett Favre. And step aside Troy Aikman because the Scituate/Cohasset Sharks Youth Football "C" team is stealing your commercial thunder.

On Wednesday morning the Sharks put their football uniforms and acting talent on display in Cohasset Common as part of a commercial for American Airlines.

And while most football players have to have a long and distinguished career on the gridiron before they start popping up on commercials, the Sharks are now famous before their sports careers even start.

"The production company was looking for a slice of Americana and they wanted to have youth football team as part of their commercial," said Scituate's Cinda Donovan, a representative of the Tighe and Doyle Casting Agency of Boston. "They originally were going to shoot a team in a park in Concord but a dead body was found there and they wanted to come up with another place. They remembered Cohasset from a Maxwell House commercial they shot and gave us a call."

Donovan, who used to be a cheerleading coach for the Sharks, got the call on Tuesday about the commercial from the production company of Lovinger Cohen of Boston and rounded up 15 members of the Sharks "C" team for Wednesday's shoot in Cohasset.

The filming began at 9 a.m. and lasted for 90 minutes. Wearing their navy blue uniforms and holding their helmets in hand, the eight-year-old players were photographed walking in front of the historic First Parish Church in Cohasset Common.

The commercial should air nationally in several months and the Sharks will be seen for only a few seconds in the spot. However, each player was paid for their time and will receive residual payments every time it runs, according to Donovan. Most of the players will donate all money received towards the Scituate/Cohasset Youth football program, Donovan said.

"It all came together pretty fast and I thought the players did a great job," Donovan said. "Now all we can do is wait to see how much they use in the spot."

Scituate's David Pinkham, 8, was one of the stars of the commercial.

"It was pretty cool," he said. "My dad told me about it last night and I was pretty excited to do it."

Pinkham enjoyed his taste of Hollywood and wouldn't mind filming a few more commercials if the opportunity presented itself.

"I liked it but I still like football more," he said.

The Sharks who were in the commercial included: Danny Judge, Mike Judge, Dominic Spinzola, John Collins, Gary Crowley, Kyle Crowley, Blaine O'Brien, Brian Poh, Greg Lawrence, Ted Giacomozzi, Alexander Hunt, Joshua Thibodeau, Michael Steele, David Pinkham and Kevin Lewis.

No parking signs sought

Jack L. Noble, 80 Summer St., wrote to Town Manager Mark Haddad seeking help in getting a "No Parking" or a "Resident Parking Only" sign in front of his property.

Noble said cars, which are parked on the sidewalk in front of his home, present a safety issue as well as a constant annoyance.

He said cars from the American Legion hall and condos next door are adding to the problem.

"Try pulling into our driveway with a truck or van on both sides," Noble wrote. "We have almost been in serious accidents from being blinded due to the obstruction."

Haddad sent Noble's letter to Police Chief Brian Noonan, DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield and to the traffic committee for comment.

Sandy Beach tickets

Selectmen plan to discuss parking fines at Sandy Beach at their Sept. 1 meeting. Selectman Diane Sullivan raised the issue last week. She said non-residents may view the $15 price of a parking ticket at Sandy Beach as a pretty cheap day. She suggested the fine be increased to $25.

According to police records, police issued 205 parking tickets at Sandy Beach last month for a total of $3,075.

Bryant steps down from conservation

Selectmen accepted with deep regret the resignation of John Bryant, 251 Forest Ave., from the conservation commission last week. They said Bryant served more than 30 years on the board. In addition to a letter thanking Bryant, they will seek a resolution at October's special town meeting recognizing his service to the town.

No parking at school access

Selectmen authorized installation of a sign prohibiting parking and drop offs at the new school's emergency access road off Old Pasture Road.

Selectman Merle Brown, a member of the traffic committee, said the issue was raised in a letter to the traffic committee from a concerned Old Pasture Road resident. The resident worries that cars will line up along the quiet residential street to either drop off or pick up pupils at the new school.

The sign will say something to the effect of "no standing or stopping/police take notice."

Public access to the new school, which is slated to open in September, is off Sohier Street at the Deer Hill School entrance.

Town counsel raises rates

Town Manager Mark Haddad said effective June 30, Deutsch William[illegible] the Boston law firm Cohasset uses[illegible] town counsel, is raising its rates from $120 to $140 an hour to reflect actual costs. The firm's $4,000 a month retainer will remain the same.

Selectmen asked that in the future town counsel let them know well before June 30 if a rate hike is planned. Selectman Tom Callahan, who is a lawyer, said rate agreements are "mutual things" and are open to negotiation. Selectman Chairman Ronnie McMorris said the firm was well worth the money.

"They are well worth the $140 (an hour) we pay them," she said.

Special town meeting date

Selectmen anticipate the annual Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Oct. 26. They will confirm the date at their Sept. 1 meeting.

"This should give us plenty of time to plan and prepare the warrant," Town Manager Mark Haddad said.

Register to vote

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or election day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

The last day to register,vote and change party enrollment for the State Primary Sept. 15 is Wednesday, Aug. 26. The Town Clerk's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mail-in registration forms are available from the Town Clerk's office, Cohasset Post Office and Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before Aug. 26.

Biographer pens life of Rev. Peter Hobart

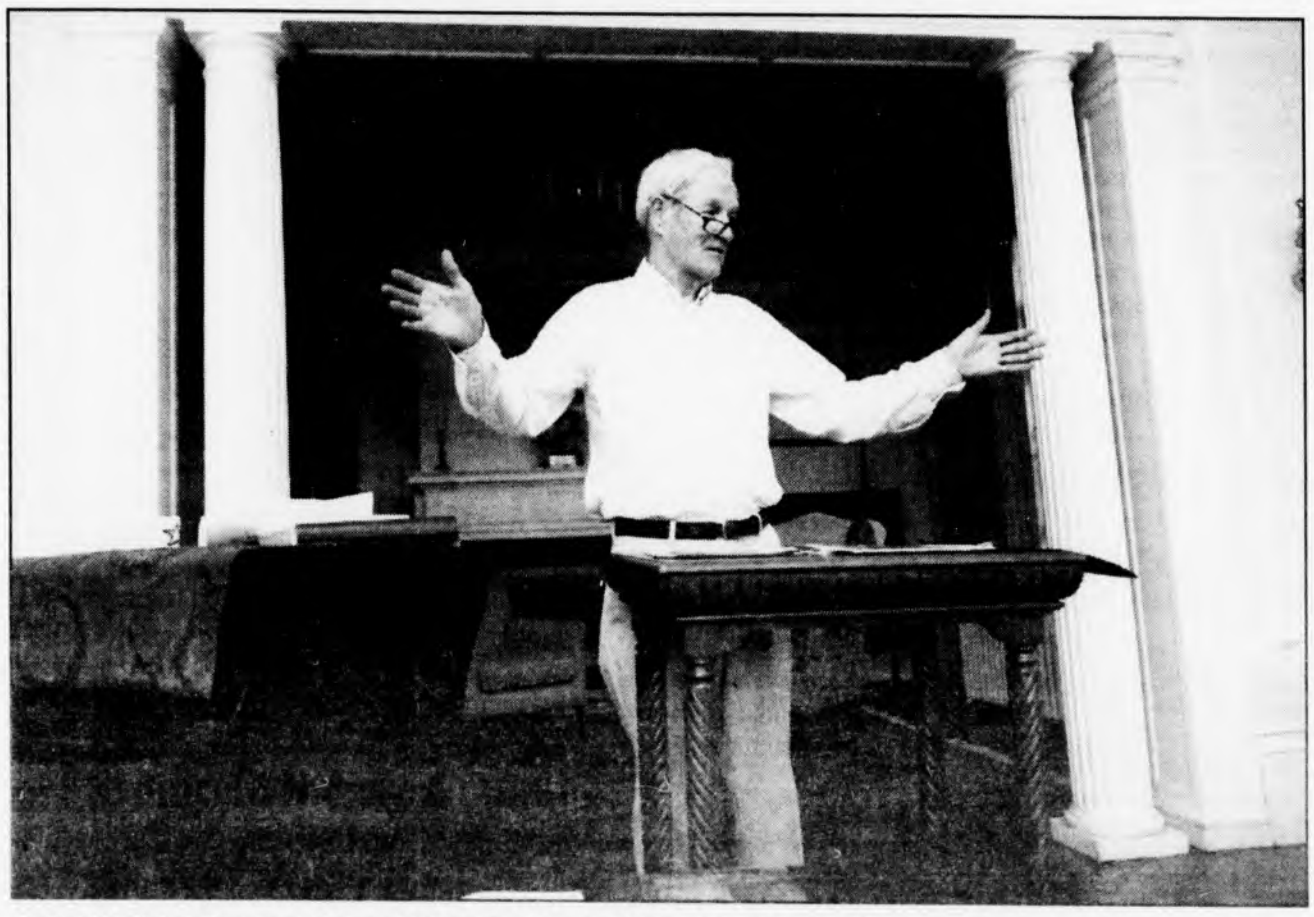
By Carol Britton Meyer
STAFF WRITER

Edward F. Ripley decided a decade ago that a book should be written about his distant relative, Peter Hobart, who founded the Town of Hingham which included what is now Cohasset.

Ripley, now a resident of Philadelphia, grew up in Cohasset and has spent summers here since he was a child.

The investment advisor-turned-author made the decision to remedy the fact that there was no biography yet written about Hobart, who was also the founder and first minister of First Parish Old Ship Church in Hingham Square.

"I was determined one should be written, because Hobart is one of the most misunderstood figures (in history)," Ripley said.



While he was accused of being brash and argumentative, Hobart was also a hard-working, religious man dedicated to his parish as well as a wonderful parent, according to Ripley.

Ten years and 250 pages after he decided to write Hobart's biography, "Shepherd in the Wilderness: Peter Hobart 1604-1679" is finished, and Ripley is currently seeking a publisher.

"Hobart was dearly beloved by his parish — a real shepherd to his flock," the author said.

The biography will contain illustrations and maps of Hingham as well as photographs.

"While I was writing the book, I got to feel I really knew and liked Peter Hobart enormously," said Ripley. "Now that I've completed it, I have a sense of sadness, like losing one's best friend."

Author Ed Ripley discusses his new book at the First Parish House in Hingham Square

Leaving England for Hingham

Hobart, a Puritan, brought his parish of 29 other families in large single-mast open boats to Hingham (at that time named "Bare Cove") from Hingham, England, in 1635 to escape persecution of their religious faith, Ripley told a gathering in the Old Ship Church Parish House on Main Street last Thursday. Those in attendance included members of The Friends of Peter Hobart, an informal group which has met at various places in town to talk about Ripley's manuscript.

"The Friends of Peter Hobart was established as an interest group in what Ed was doing," said Eugene Chamberlain, a member of Hingham Historical Society. "Such a book had never been written before, and it's a keystone of what Puritan life was like in the United States. Hobart was a leader of the men of his parish and was a man of great intelligence."

Ripley explained how Hobart's parish members came to Hingham from a "tight" Elizabethan society.

"No social climbing was allowed, so someone who had one acre of land in England had one acre in Hingham," he said.

That social structure existed for more than a century.

Today, Ripley finds the people of Hingham, England to be very friendly and "very interested in what we do in Hingham, Massachusetts."

He has also found a very strong interest in the Hobart family all over the country.

One family member has 30,000 "Hobarts" listed in a data bank, and another is continuously adding names to the Hobart family tree.

In writing the biography, Ripley felt the need to "clarify the nature of the Puritans — people who were often ridiculed."

According to the author, Puritans became unpopular in England when they tried to restructure the government and were often stereotyped. But they were also known for other, gentler qualities.

"Puritans led a simple farming life, and worked very hard," Ripley said. "And they loved their children."

Hobart had 18 offspring by two wives, the first of whom died.

"Puritans considered children a gift from God and looked after them very carefully," said Ripley. "Yankees came from a frugal Puritan heritage, but one known for its charitable contributions."

In fact, Harvard University was founded by the Puritans.

Eventually, though, the Puritan lifestyle became "too heavy to maintain," according to Ripley, but not before Hingham produced generations of children who eventually spread Puritanism throughout the country.

"It was an old-fashioned, decent life the Puritans led," said Ripley.

Yet Hobart's life didn't lack excitement.

"Hobart was dearly beloved by his parish — a real shepherd to his flock."
— Edward F. Ripley, author

Governor Winthrop challenged

In 1645, according to Ripley, the town of Hingham, perhaps spurred on by Peter Hobart himself, decided Governor Winthrop had overstepped his authority under Boston's charter and should be impeached.

The Hingham Militia, along with Hobart, sailed to Boston to confront the Governor, who accused them of rebellion — considered a crime punishable by death.

At that time, Hobart and the Town of Hingham conceded that the government was being imposed on the people and was not being conducted properly. The controversy actually closed down the seat of power in Boston for three months.

"For the sake of their sense of democracy, Hobart (and the others) went to Boston," Ripley said.

In the end, the house of representatives agreed with Hobart and Hingham's militiamen, but they were nevertheless fined heavily for opposing the governor, although it was a lesser charge than that of "rebellion," Ripley said.

"A study of the matter indicates those fines were never paid," he stated. "But as a result of (that visit to Boston), the government became more democratic. Hobart stayed out of politics from then on, but the governor prevented him from preaching in Cambridge because of his antagonistic attitude towards the government."

The task of writing a book about Hobart proved difficult, yet rewarding. Needing a sense of how he preached and lived, Ripley searched New England for papers and letters written by Hobart, but to no avail.

So when Ripley came across Hobart's 1671-'73 sermon book at the Massachusetts Historical Society, he knew he'd found what he'd been long searching for. It was then that he could actually learn what Hobart preached, talked about and stood for. However, Ripley had one major hurdle to overcome before he could put the sermons to good use.

"I couldn't read the text," he said.

The letters were only 1/8-inch tall, because paper was scarce at the time he wrote the sermons.

It was the late Rev. Dr. C. Edward Egan of New York who finally came to his rescue.

Egan spent the last five years of his life transcribing the sermons, which are heavy in their use of Biblical passages, into readable form. He enlarged the sermon pages to a height of six feet and projected them on a wall, which made the sermons legible and showed off the curlicued lettering.

"Dr. Egan called it the greatest work of his life," said Ripley, who read the sermons over and over again.

'A man far different'

"Peter Hobart was far different from what historians thought," he stated." "Finding the sermons also kept historians from thumbing their noses at me for speculative work."

In reading them, Ripley found Hobart had an unusual way of preaching. He also came across one which talked about the nature of God, which Ripley said contrasts well with other sermons on that subject at that time.

The writings also verified what Hobart stood for, including freedom. Ripley was the last person, other than museum personnel, to handle the sermons now that they're on tape.

Kenneth Read-Brown, minister of Old Ship Church today, feels the sermons are important because they tell something about the times and conflicts between local towns and the "government."

"We are the sons and daughters of our forbears, and that (struggle) is a familiar one even today," he said.

Governor Winthrop called Hobart a bold man who spoke his mind and was averse to the government of that time.

"We can judge for ourselves if this says anything about how Hingham is battling the train," Read-Brown said. "This is sort of a contemporary replay!"

Read-Brown called Ripley's book "a remarkable project."

"It's a resource we can look back on for generations," he stated. "The work is a great gift not only for parishioners but for Hingham as a town, because it gives us a sense of rootedness. It provides another piece of the puzzle as to who we were and who we are today."

Ripley is satisfied with the results of his labor and glad the book has been well-received so far.

"Peter Hobart is such a colorful figure, I didn't want his history to die, but be preserved," he said. "He and the Town of Hingham were one of the earliest groups (in support of) democracy in America as well as inclusiveness. They promoted acceptance of each other and united to win the Revolutionary War."

Book adds to Old Ship's rich history

By Carol Britton Meyer
STAFF WRITER

Old Ship Church was erected in 1691 and is the oldest church structure in the United States to have been used continuously for public worship. Samuel Lincoln, an original American ancestor of Abraham Lincoln, worshipped at Old Ship Church regularly.

The church is open for tours during the summer months.

While Peter Hobart, Old Ship's first minister, died before the church was constructed, Kenneth Read-Brown, the church's current pastor, thinks the building was likely in the planning stages at that time.

Edward F. Ripley's biography on Hobart, which has just been completed, adds a personal touch to the already-rich history of the church, where town meetings were held until the late 1700s.

A question Read-Brown has pondered is what facet of Puritanism, which was the faith Hobart adhered to, gave rise to the unitarian-universalist beliefs the church stands for today.

"I think it's the strong desire and commitment to understand and live according to our beliefs," he said. "We want to 'get it right.' We all share that commitment, which, of course, we don't have a monopoly on."

Ripley feels admirers of Old Ship Church will gain a better understanding of its unique edifice from his biography, entitled "Shepherd in the Wilderness: Peter Hobart 1604-1679."

The biography has involved historians, doctors of theology, Hobart family members, scholars, historical societies, including Hingham Historical Society, and others who contributed to the project.

The book contains information about Hobart's life in England before he came to Hingham and offers a portrayal of Puritanism as well as the story of his ancestors.

Hobart played an important role in the Massachusetts Bay Colony and was highly though tof by many residents of "Hingham Plantation." Under Hobart's leadership, Hingham Plantation developed more liberal religious and civil policies, which became controversial to the Colony. Eventually, however, the Colony leadership gave in to Hingham's position of less exclusiveness in both the Puritan church and the government.

Among Hobart's parish were local Native Americans, who attended worship services. Other Puritan churches also welcomed the Native Americans into their churches. Hobart's brother, Joshua, also accorded protection and respect to the Indians in Hingham as captain of the militia.

Michael Zuckerman, professor of history at the University of Pennsylvania, called the Hobart biography a book written "in the grand old manner of the great 19th-century town histories. . . . It is readable, and in its moments that matter it rises to heights of eloquence."

Puritans, while considered grim and joyless people by their enemies in their native England, proved to be faithful partners, lovers of children and individuals whose extended families kept an eye out for each other and enjoyed fellowship.

plied Shipsky with rough ideas of the kinds of improvements they would like to see in the village and harbor areas. Those ideas include increased accessibility to the coastline, improvements to the economic climate of the two areas, increased parking, better pedestrian access, better connections between the village and the harbor, and better streetscapes.

But Shipsky wanted more information from members of the task force. Immediately after the task force appointed him, Shipsky asked each member to write out their personal visions for the harbor and village. The committee members came back with such suggestions as establishing more shops in the village or adding walkways and restaurants. Betsy Millard wanted to see some casual seafood dining rooms. Shipsky liked the suggestions, but will ask the committee members to do the exercise again.

"I will ask them to dig deeper," Shipsky said. "A couple of seafood restaurants won't do it. I think we can do more with Cohasset, and I would like to see people offering their best and most creative ideas. I think the harbor is really important. There aren't that many beautiful harbors on the planet."

As an example of the kind of creativity he is seeking, Shipsky offered the example of the cliffwalk in Newport, Rhode Island. The cliffwalk is a walled path that runs along the Newport coast behind the massive, privately owned mansions that overlook the Atlantic Ocean.

"Cohasset could have a mini-version of the cliffwalk," Shipsky said. "It just blows me away that the cliffwalk goes through the private property of some of the most elegant mansions on earth."

Shipsky wants people to think not only about ways to improve buildings and roads, but of ways to improve what he calls the "spaces between buildings", areas where people can walk in privacy and enjoy the beauty of the harbor.

"Think of Cohasset Common— it's a well-defined empty space defined by the homes around it," Shipsky said. "I don't think the symbolic significance of this space and its Colonial houses registers on people consciously.

"The common has three main symbolic aspects. Three churches make up the spiritual significance of the common. Then there is the flagpole, with its massive base anchored to the earth and a massive pole that ends in a gold ball that reaches to the heavens. There is also government symbolism represented by town hall. These are powerful physical symbols and the common is the setting for a number of community events, from the fine arts festival to the harborfest," Shipsky added.

"I think the harbor is really important. There aren't that many beautiful harbors on the planet."
— Jim Shipsky, architect

Shipsky suggested that the harbor should be revitalized in a way that mirrors the symbolic presences in the common. One way to do that could be to create another large open space along the harbor, a more suitable setting for the harborfest.

"I also have a vision of a boardwalk that could accommodate around 500 people, maybe an 8-10 foot wide structure running from Mill River Marine to the Charthouse. I've never seen the blessing of the fishing fleet, but that is a deeply spiritual event that people could watch."

The current configuration of the harbor makes it hard to do anything beyond dropping a boat in the water, or going to Kimball's for dinner, or paying a visit to the Lightkeeper's House.

Shipsky wants people to come up with suggestions for the harbor that are deeply meaningful. He suggested that part of the harbor could somehow reflect Cohasset's past as a schooner-building center.

"Cohasset was a substantial shipbuilding center in the 1800s when 200-300 schooners 60-100 feet long were built," Shipsky said. "I believe there is a 60-80 foot sunken schooner in front of Hagerty's that has been left there to rot. It's conceivable people might want to see a reproduction of one of those schooners in the harbor.

But public involvement is key to making a vision of a revitalized harbor and village a reality. Shipsky pointed out that what he's doing comes under the heading of town planning. In the past, the town has commissioned planning reports, but missed opportunities to implement the suggestions in those documents.

"The Hidell report urged the town to purchase undeveloped portions of Pleasant Beach, but it didn't and two private residences went in," Shipsky said. "The Benjamin Report urged the purchase of the property that is now Cohasset Harbor Marina. What we're doing now is town planning and it deals with the spaces between buildings. In the past, the town hasn't looked at those spaces and ended up with a utility poles, mazes of overhead wires, and chain-link fences."

Part of Shipsky's personal vision would be to restore the harbor to its original state, possibly including historical recreations if that is what people desire. But people need to make their opinions known, and the survey is a good place to start, Shipsky said.

"I want to make sure as a planner that I don't come up with proposals the public doesn't want," Shipsky said. "I did the St. Stephen's sidewalk proposal and was surprised at some of the opposition. In that case, we did not submit the proposal for public input because of the tight deadline to acquire funding. I urge people to be as creative as possible with a proviso that their suggestions are appropriate to the waterfront."

Clam flats open but fee issue still floundering

By Alice C. Coyle
STAFF WRITER

Following a two-month closure due to heavy rains and high fecal coliform counts, Bassing Beach was re-opened for clamming again last week. While clammers from all over the South Shore are again enjoying the bounty of the Scituate beds, a long-time dispute over resident versus non-resident clamming fees remains stuck in the mud.

Re-opened to recreational diggers in 1994 following a nearly 20-year closure, Bassing Beach is the only local bed clean enough for year-round clamming. Located in the southern section of Cohasset Harbor, Bassing Beach is the only game in town for Cohasseters who have been unable to clam at Little's Harbor and Whale Meadow — just across the channel — since their closure following the Blizzard of '78.

But while Scituate residents pay $20 per year to dig up to eight quarts of mollusks per week, and senior residents over 62 can clam for free, non-residents — including Cohasseters — are charged $50 for the same permit. A year ago officials in both towns were close to reaching an accord to level the field on fees, but negotiations stopped after only one meeting.

"We were working with Scituate," said Cohasset Selectman Merle Brown. "(Scituate Selectman) Joe Norton supported it and then the meetings just stopped." Brown noted that Cohasset's police and harbormaster patrol the beach borders Cohasset harbor.

Spearheading the effort at the time was then acting town administrator for Cohasset, Ed McCann. McCann, a Scituate resident, hoped to get Cohasset clammers the same permit rate its neighbors pay. "I'm a strong advocate for inter-town sharing and the regionalization of services," said McCann. "Why not work out something where everybody wins?"

McCann said he recalled some "uneasiness" on some Scituate board members part about lowering the fees and increasing greatly the numbers who dig at Bassing Beach. "There were some concerns about over-digging," he said. "But there are regulations in place to control that."

Norton said some unresolved questions and others that went unasked, stalled talks on clamming permit fees. A temporary closure of the beds not long after the discussion lead the issue to "die a natural death," Norton said. "But that's not to say it can't be opened up again," he added.

While no specific rate was discussed in the meeting, Scituate Selectman Richard Lane said he was amenable to setting a lower rate for Cohasset clammers if certain concessions were made by Cohasset. Chief among Lane's concerns was getting Scituate senior citizens a break on parking in Cohasset for a couple hours on either side of low tide. By parking in Cohasset's Government Island near the Harbormaster's office or on Parker Avenue, Lane said older clammers could avoid the half-mile walk to Bassing Beach through the woods and marsh off Wood Island Road in Scituate.

Scituate Selectman Richard Lane said he was amenable to setting a lower rate for Cohasset clammers if certain concessions were made by Cohasset.

Despite the failure to reach an agreement, both Lane and Norton said they would be willing re-visit the fee issue.

"I'd be willing to re-open the discussion in a heart beat," said Lane.

"You can't talk regionalization on the one hand and then not allow things like this to happen," Norton added. McCann said talks about reducing fees in return for the services Cohasset provides — including patrolling the beach and transporting state environmental officials to the flats for testing — should resume.

But other town officials have expressed concerns that if Scituate lowers the rate for Cohasset, the same will have to be done for a dozen other South Shore communities whose residents buy permits to dig at the Scituate flats.

As it is now, the two-month closure and the high fee to clam at Bassing Beach has cut down on the number of Cohasset permit holders digging, said Cohasset Harbormaster Jon "Moose" Winters. According to Scituate Town Clerk Barbara Maffucci,, during 1997, 23 Cohasset residents had permits to dig clams at Bassing Beach — bringing in $1,150 for the town of Scituate. As of August 1998, only nine Cohasseters have picked up permits.

Still, Scituate's Shellfish Constable Joe Stazdes says when Bassing Beach is open, the flats are packed on Sundays. Clamming is allowed only on Thursdays and Sundays and the harvesting is limited to softshell clams that are at least two inches or larger. Diggers must use a clamming rake, no shovels or pitch forks are permitted and should cover their holes to protect baby clams to small to harvest, but a welcome treat for seagulls, Strazdes said.

Along with his assistant constables, Strazdes keeps an eye on the beach, and makes sure clammers have permits and only dig their limit. A summer Sunday brings more than 100 clammers to the flats.

"It's a social thing," said occasional clammer Jerry Janofsky, a software engineer from Scituate, who stopped into the town clerk's office Tuesday to pick up a permit. Janofsky, who also enjoys boating and fishing said he likes to go clamming with friends and family.

"We have guests coming in this weekend. And the clams always seem to taste fresher when you dig them yourself."

Alcohol training a must

establishments that serve or sell alcohol or allow customers to bring their own alcohol (BYOBs) to have their employees certified through an appropriate program, preferably TIPS.

The news has come as a surprise to Curtis Liquors' Andy Hailer. "Somebody came in and mentioned it — Ed Brennock, I think," said Hailer, referring to the local TIPS trainer.

"We have our own 'training' program here where our cashiers make all customers under 40 years of age show their driver's license. We really enforce that. We've had to turn people away. ABCC has been dressing 18-year-olds up in business suits and they look 35 to me. When you have summer help, you can't have something slip by like that — it's a sting," said Hailer.

Many thought the idea a good one, such as Denise Bismore, co-owner of the Silver Spoon. Though in the dark about the upcoming licensing change —"I haven't heard about it yet. I'll have to go to town hall to find out more."— Bismore thought that "the program is a good idea and I can't see how we would not benefit by it."

Even Papa Gino's will undergo training. "I didn't know about this, but I think it's actually a very good idea. The kids working here don't serve the alcoholic beverages — just the managers. Actually, we don't sell a whole lot of it anyway. That's always a plus," said general manager Ed Meighan.

"If liquor license holders have been reading the paper, they know this is happening. They have about four months to get the training."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

The new policy was set at the Aug. 13 selectmen's meeting as a result of a public hearing last month. The July hearing addressed the sale of alcohol to a minor by an employee at Cohasset Food Mart in Jonathan Livingston Seagull Square on June 20, for which the store was issued a formal warning.

Other conditions of the new policy include that employees must be recertified every three years and establishments must submit employee rosters to selectmen with certification dates and other pertinent information.

The proposed policy is expected to be reviewed and okayed by town counsel Paul DeRensis, according to town manager Mark Haddad.

"I think it's plenty of advance warning for certification," said Haddad. "If liquor license holders have been reading the paper, they know this is happening. They have about four months to get the training."

Last week, Ed Brennock, who will teach the TIPS courses, spoke about the program at the selectmen's meeting and expressed concerns about getting enough people together for training classes. The training sessions require role playing on alcohol-selling and service issues and so groups of at least five to six members are needed.

Selectmen said because all license holders will be required to comply they don't expect participation to be a problem.

Absentee ballots available for State Primary

Absentee ballots for the State Primary, Sept. 15, are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime Monday, Sept. 14. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls are open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs which prevent voting at the polls on election day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, fax or hand-delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, which ballot is requested, Democrat, Republican or Reform Party, where the ballot is to be mailed and the signature of the applicant. A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absent voter, sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand-deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Sept. 15 to be counted.

Cohasset will use the Accu-Vote optical scan system. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the oval to the right of your choice, follow directions as to the number of candidates for each office, and to vote for a person whose name is not printed on the ballot, write the candidate's name on the line and completely fill in the oval.

Injured seagull gets a second chance

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Don't let the multiple digits fool you.

This seagull is anything but a number.

Although it's identified as "A980814-943" at the New England Wildlife Center, the staffers there are as committed to its recovery as they have been to the past 942 birds treated at the teaching hospital so far this year.

"It was the third gull surgery we had Friday," said clinic director Matthew Laing.

The luck of the herring gull started to change when a motorist thought he'd hit the bird outside the Pilgrim Skating Arena in south Hingham last Thursday afternoon.

But the gull, which was later discovered to have been injured by a pellet from a pellet gun, proved to be elusive to the police and workers at the rink.

The next afternoon, however, some young campers there were seen teasing the injured bird in the back parking lot, propelling rink management to take action.

"I hate to see any animal in pain," said Blanche Taylor, Pilgrim Arena treasurer.

So she sent day-shift supervisor Steve Tache of Quincy and rink worker Tony Tompson of Scituate, who were directed to wear gloves, to the rescue.

Capturing the gull required a good dose of strategy and determination, however.

"It kept running around," said Tony, 14. "We got it into a corner of the parking lot, put the box over it and then slipped another piece of cardboard under the box.

"Then we taped that piece onto the box, flipped it over and punched air holes in the box," he said.

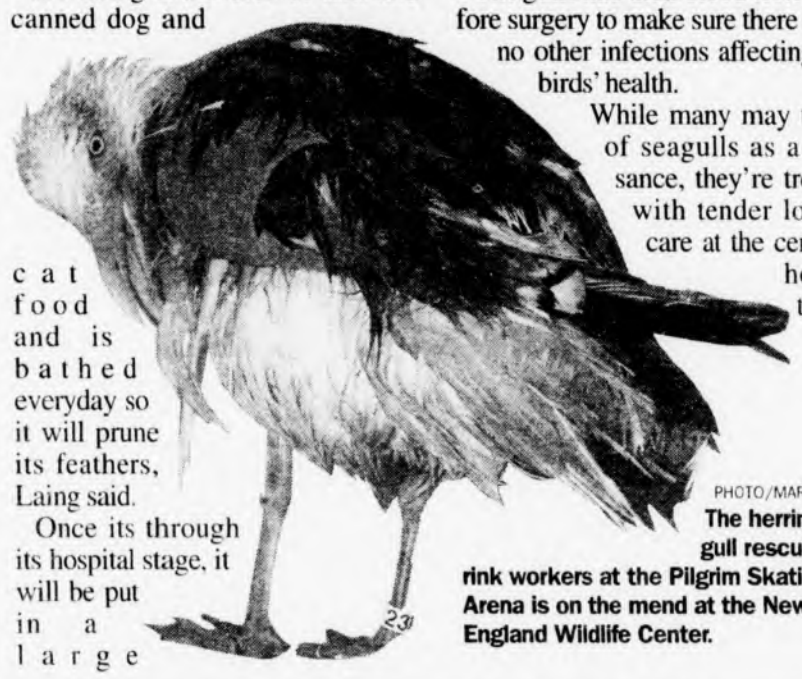
Then they transported it to the wildlife center hospital behind the Hingham Credit Union off Fort Hill Street where the gull — with its repaired wing now bandaged — is doing fine.

"All animals have a purpose out there and gulls are part of the clean-up crew."
— Matthew Laing, clinic director

Laing explained the herring gull — which is one of eight different species of gulls in the state — will be recovering at the clinic for three to four weeks.

It's being fed a diet of fish and canned dog and cat food and is bathed everyday so it will prune its feathers, Laing said.

Once its through its hospital stage, it will be put in a large aviary and after it's flying and doing well, the gull will be released back into the wild.



It's impossible to tell the age of the gull but from its wing coloring, it's at least three, Laing said. Seagulls have a life expectancy of 30 years, so it could be three or 25, he said.

Another gull brought in last Friday was entangled in kite string which was cutting circulation off to its wings and the other gull delivered that day suffered a broken wing after being hit by a car.

But the herring gull's injury was the most disturbing because it was deliberate, Laing said.

The gulls had their blood tested before surgery to make sure there were no other infections affecting the birds' health.

While many may think of seagulls as a nuisance, they're treated with tender loving care at the center's hospital.

The herring gull rescued by rink workers at the Pilgrim Skating Arena is on the mend at the New England Wildlife Center.

"I think of gulls as a successful species which is able to adapt to our environment," Laing said.

The wildlife center treats between 3,000 to 5,000 animals a year including about 2,000 birds. As a public service, the center answers more than 20,000 phone calls a year about wildlife, habitats and public health. Sick, injured or orphaned wild animals can be brought to the hospital seven days a week, 365 days a year from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on weekends.

For more information, call the center office at 781-749-1248.

TWENTIETH CHS REUNION

I wonder if anyone in the Class of CHS 1978 is still as fond of me as they used to be — I aged them all 10 years with the stroke of my typewriter! Steve Sinopoli did run a wonderful reunion; it was attended by a huge portion of his class, and he has promised to send photos and information — got that all right! Just messed up with the year of graduation! Sorry, all of you (I should have paid attention to my CHS personal typing teacher, Miss Nelson). We are looking forward to receiving all of your news on the big event!

SPORTS PRACTICES START

Attention to all of you in the sports of soccer, football and field hockey — your first practice will be Friday, Aug. 28. Soccer players will be at Milliken Field, football will be at the back field (Lillard), and field hockey will be on the front field. Here's hoping the heat wave that normally comes during these practices stays away this year (for your sake, not ours!).

ST. JOSEPH VILLA FUND-RAISER

The fund-raiser the Sisters at St. Joseph Villa held at the South Shore Music Circus recently, was deemed a huge success by all who participated in making the event happen. The Sisters even had the pleasure of Anna Maria Alberghetti and John Raitt's company at their pre-show dinner, which thrilled everyone. See for yourself as you check out the photo of Sister Barbara and the stars at the event, see the huge smile on Sister Barbara? That tells it all!

ACADEMIC HONORS

Congratulations to Corinna Noering who made the honors list at Groton School in Groton, Mass., obtaining an average of 90 in all of her courses! Corinna is the daughter of Richard and Sabina Noering of Cohasset, who must be very proud of her indeed.

BRYN MAWR GRADUATE

Anne Lindgren, a 1994 Cohasset High graduate, daughter of Fran and Charlie Lindgren, received a bachelor of arts degree from Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pa. She graduated cum laude with honors in her major, biology. Anne has a position as a research assistant at Thomas Jefferson University in Philadelphia.

UMASS/AMHERST GRADS

We received news from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst regarding Cohasset students who graduated this spring — we congratulate Ellen G. Kielmeyer of 231 King St., Adam M. McNamara of 470 King St., Tyler J. Spiers of 100 Pond St., Rebecca Tosca of 101 Pleasant St., and Asha N. Williams of 203 South Main St. Here's to bright futures for all of you, and lots of congratulations from all of us!

HONORARY DOCTORATE

Here's another newsworthy item! Neal Finnegan, president and chief executive officer of both USTrust, a $3.8 billion banking company headquartered in Boston, and UST Corp., its parent holding company, received an honorary doctorate of commercial science from Northeastern University at the school's June 1998 commencement exercises at the Fleet Center in Boston. A 1961 Northeastern graduate and chairman of the Northeastern Board of Trustees, Finnegan has more than 30 years of experience in the banking industry. He is chairman of the board of directors for the Massachusetts Community and Banking Council and a member of the board for the Metropolitan Boston Housing Partnership and the Massachusetts Business Roundtable. He also serves as a trustee of Catholic Charities; the Massachusetts Multiple Sclerosis Society, St. Mary's Women and Infants Center and WGBH. Mr. Finnegan is a native of Dorchester and the father of four children. He currently resides in Cohasset, and we are pleased and proud to have him!

It's time for blueberries!

MAY I PRESENT

SALLYANN CHATTERTON

Have you seen the wonderful looking wild blueberries that are out now? Oh, are they yummy! When you buy them, look for a dark blue color with a soft powder bloom. This bloom is a natural protective waxy coating. The berries should be plump and fresh looking and fairly uniform in size. Once you find the perfect box, consider making this wonderful blueberry cake, given to me by a friend several years ago. I guarantee that every time you make it, you will wish that you had made two, that's how fast it will disappear!! Here it is ...

Leah's blueberry cake

3 cups flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
2/3 cup milk
1 cup butter, creamed
2 cups sugar
4 eggs, separated
2 tsp. vanilla
1 pint blueberries

Cream together the butter and sugar. Add beaten egg yolks and vanilla. Beat until light and fluffy. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt. Add alternately with milk to the sugar and egg mixture. Beat 2 minutes.

Whip egg whites until stiff and fold in. Pour two-thirds of the batter into a greased 9x11x2 inch pan, sprinkle blueberries over this, then cover with the remaining batter. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes — you will love it!

Creature comforts

'All things bright and beautiful,
All creatures great and small,
All things wise and wonderful.
The Lord God made them all.'

— Cecil Frances Alexander

It's a place even where old, injured seagulls feel welcomed. The New England Wildlife Center and clinic off Fort Hill Street in Hingham doesn't discriminate among the wild creatures it provides safe harbor for.

Hurt or orphaned animals wrapped in blankets or placed in taped-up boxes are often delivered by concerned citizens who all have one thing in common — a respect for wildlife.

As clinic director Matthew Laing says animal lovers aren't particular.

"Those who really care are not selective — but others who find animals a nuisance won't help and say it's just too bad (for the animal)."

While we like to believe most of us fall into the first category — it's our environment poses dangers for many of our furry and featured friends.

Kite string, fishing line, plastic, glass, pesticides and traffic can all be hazards.

Thanks to the wildlife center many stories of unlucky animals injured by the by-products of civilization have happy endings.

The herring gull rescued from Hingham's Pilgrim Skating Arena parking lot last week is one of the fortunate ones.

Its wing — hurt by a pellet shot from a pellet gun — is on the mend thanks to concerned workers at the rink and the veterinarians at the center. The pellet was compressing a nerve and the gull's wing would not have been repairable if the injured bird had gone without help much longer. Now after a few weeks of recuperation including some time in a large aviary, the herring gull will be returned to the wild.

The experts at the wildlife center urge caution however when helping wounded wildlife.

Even a seagull, which has a strong beak, should be approached carefully.

Injured or orphaned mammals may be infected with rabies, so it's imperative to call the animal control officer at 383-9119, Cohasset police at 383-1212 or the wildlife center at 749-1248 before attempting any rescue.

The center, which is non-profit, doesn't have the funding to do a lot of rescues but is happy to help out once the animal is gathered up and brought in.

Providing veterinary care for needy wildlife is not all the center does. It also hosts camp programs, provides nature and science education, apprenticeships and provides public health and habitat intervention to help wildlife and people better coexist.

What's really nice is the 15-year-old wildlife teaching hospital is in our own backyard.

That's surely something both our wild creatures and those who love them can be thankful for.

Selectmen avoided their responsibility

TO THE EDITOR:

My wife and I attended last week's meeting of the Cohasset selectmen called to consider whether to recommend the petition of Mr. Paul Trendowitz to move the Federal Navigation line in Bailey's Creek at Cohasset Harbor to permit an expansion of his Cohasset Marina in the creek.

After discussion lasting nearly two hours, we were dismayed when the selectmen voted to send the issue to Cohasset Town Meeting in the fall, citing the fact that it was too controversial to deal with. As a former Town Moderator and one who is intimately familiar with Town Meeting procedures, I know, and the Selectmen should know, that asking Town Meeting to vote on this issue may well produce anything but a fair representative result. The meeting could have a relative handful of voters on hand to deal with the issue, or the meeting could also be packed for a vote on this one issue. Either scenario could produce a lopsided, unbalanced result.

We elected our Selectmen to be our representatives and to make decisions for us, both easy and difficult, on all kinds of issues. It is a disservice to the town when the selectmen avoid their responsibility to vote on a critical issue, as they did last week.

Some years ago, I had the good fortune to serve for a time in the Massachusetts Senate. Occasionally, when we debated a very controversial bill, a member would move to send the bill to the State Supreme Judicial Court for an advisory opinion. If the Senate adopted the member's motion, the bill went off to the High Court, thus enabling members temporarily to put off voting on the controversial issue at stake.

What happened at the Selectmen's meeting the other night was analogous to my Senate experience. The Selectmen owed the many people who attended that night, including Mr. Trendowitz, a decision on the Cohasset Marina proposal, which incidentally my wife and I strongly oppose. At the very least, board members should have indicated their position on the issue. Only one of the five selectmen present stated a clear, unequivocal position on the issue.

We certainly hope that the selectmen will make their position known on this matter well in advance of the fall Town Meeting.

Sidewalk proposal is puzzling

Mr. Dean Rizzo, Chairman
Village Task Force Committee

DEAR MR. RIZZO:

I'm writing because I'm puzzled. Puzzled by a proposed sidewalk.

I think that any move to spruce up the village, to entice people to come into the village and spend money, to make people curious as to what's here is a plus. Let the person who's curious know where Cohasset Village is and then when he/she gets here have an attractive, interesting village where they'll stroll, shop, eat and see and feel the history of Cohasset.

I'm puzzled because I really don't see any point to the proposed sidewalk on Elm Street which will merge with the S. Main Street sidewalk. Right now there is an existing sidewalk (6-1/2 to 7' wide) from S. Main Street toward the harbor. Along S. Main Street is where the problem exists — where the ledge will be removed. If this sidewalk problem is to be corrected, then let's do it. Remove the ledge and concrete connected to the old Police Station along S. Main Street and provide a 6 to 7' sidewalk from Elm Street to Robert E. Jason Road.

This new sidewalk would merge nicely with the Elm Street sidewalk as it now exists. It would "lead" people from the village to the harbor and back which is what we want. We want them to shop and enjoy their stay in Cohasset. Who knows, they might come back.

Hamilton T. Tewksbury

In the article, Mr. Hart said that he was replacing a couple of 1987 buses in need of extensive repair. We did replace one 1987 bus with a new one in May. The leased buses will replace a 1987 and a 1989. Our oldest bus, which becomes the non-route spare bus, will then be a 1994, not a 1989, as was reported.

The cost of a new bus is approximately $50,000, not $100,000, as was stated in the article. Also with a purchase, you have a good trade-in value at the end of five years instead of being left with nothing as you do with a lease.

There was no pressing need to get two new buses at this time to have them on the road by September. The matter was "scheduled" to be brought up at the October town meeting for the next bus purchase. At this time the lease money will be coming directly from the school budget in the expectation that the town meeting will reimburse their budget in the fall. This is a clear intent of circumventing the process and presenting a done deal to the taxpayers.

We do not know if extensive repairs were needed for any of the buses. There were no visible rot or major rust problems in either of the 1987 and 1989 buses. How can one tell that leasing will be a predictable expense over five years because we will still have to pay for broken windows, ripped seats, stolen equipment, slashed tires, etc., etc., etc. The school department does not keep any records to indicate the cost per bus for maintenance and how can they state "that older buses require a lot of maintenance?" There could be a severe maintenance problem with a newer bus after the end of the warranty.

The discussion of acquiring buses has been before the advisory board, of which I am a member, and the capital budget committee. These two committees agreed that the schools should spread out the acquisitions so that the town would not be stuck again, as we are now, with buses all getting old within a year or so of each other. We were trying to alleviate a similar problem in the future. Instead the school committee will be putting us in a worse position by putting five new buses on the road in an 18-month period. The school committee decided, without proper investigation, to circumvent the logical and reasonable recommendations of the financial advisors of the town.

Volunteer efforts appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Massachusetts Department of Social Services would like to thank Katherine Stanton of Cohasset for her efforts in gathering suitcases for the foster children living in her region. The project was born out of a special month-long benefit entitled "Suitcases for Kids." Katherine, a volunteer case reviewer for the department, heard about these efforts in the Boston area and decided to take things into her own hands and start a spin-off of the program in her area.

With the help of Cohasset Mariner columnist, Sally Ann Chatterton, Katherine was able to raise public awareness and the residents of Cohasset really came through. Many suitcases were collected on behalf of the Commonwealth's most vulnerable children. What's more, Katherine was able to call on her friends who helped her deliver the suitcases to four area offices: Plymouth, Coastal, Park Street and Morton Street.

There are currently 10,000 children in foster care in Massachusetts. Often the children enter care with very few belongings and certainly not anything to carry them in. The "Suitcases for Kids" promotion not only served to raise public awareness around the plight of foster children, but will provide kids with something of their very own. Furthermore, this is an example of how individuals can give of their time, in various ways, to help make a positive impact in the life of a child.

Thank you to all the people who were involved in this project and gave so generously to help us build a better future for the children and families the department serves.

Linda K. Carlisle, Commissioner

PLUMBING MUSINGS
by Philip Von Iderstein M.P. #8829
KISS
One fall we landed a large contract that required we hire union help to do the labor. The job was located a few towns away and I was selected to be a foreman on the job to look out for the companies' interests. I was at that time unfamiliar with the union and the men who were sent over to do the work. I decided that a meeting with the men was in order so we could get to know each other. They could also learn what was expected of them and the time schedule that was set up for the different stages of the work. The meeting went well and I learned that many of the men were capable and figured the contract would go well. They asked a few questions and then I asked a few questions, and I was pleased with their responses. As the meeting was nearing its completion one of the men seated in the rear of the room got up from his chair and walked toward the front. He stated that he had something to say. I looked up and saw him standing there. He was enormous. He was well over six feet tall and monstrously large through the chest and shoulders. He also had arms and hands larger than I had ever seen. He reached the front of the room and put out his hand as if to shake. I put out my hand too. As he squeezed my hand he put his other hand behind my head and grabbed me. I felt like I was in a pipe vice. He then stuck his tongue in my ear. I couldn't get away, the man was as strong as an ox. The rest of the men were in hysterics. I laughed too when he finally let me go. I guess he did this to all the foremen just to keep them in their place. I was relieved. I thought he was going to kill me. He turned out to be a tremendous worker and a knowledgeable plumber. I never could look him in the eye. One oddity about him was he was desperately afraid of heights. I guess we all have our Achilles heel.

Hedlund backs Malone for governor

By Robert L. Hedlund
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As you know, I was the lone vote against the $700 million tax package signed last week by the Governor. I voted against the package because I believe that we, as a Legislature, should and could have done more for the hardworking taxpayers of this Commonwealth. Honoring a promise of a decade ago, we should have rolled back the income tax rate to 5%. Rather than increasing the cap on our rainy day fund to an extravagant $1.4 billion, more of the State's surplus tax revenues should have been returned to their rightful owners; the taxpayers. We could have done better.

As our governor, Joe Malone would not have settled for such a meager slice of the pie for taxpayers. And legislators, certain as to Joe's unwavering commitment to the taxpayers, would not have sent so stingy a package to him to sign. Joe Malone I am confident, would have fought for and won a better deal for us all. Joe Malone shares my commitment to unburdening the taxpayers…to fiscal responsibility…and my commitment to a leaner and more responsive government.

In his eight years as our state treasurer, he has shown himself to be a man of big ideas…a man with the political will and perseverance to fight for his vision. He made the Treasurer's office a show piece of state government…a model of efficiency and creativity. During his watch, our pension performance has gone from the worst in the nation to the best. State Bond ratings have increased. Office staff has been slashed by 60%. By refusing his taxpayer-leased car and returning $15,000 pay raise, Joe Malone has practiced the principles he preaches. Rather than defending the past, Joe Malone is defending the future. He will continue to do as our Governor and I am pleased…to support my friend Joe Malone, his vision, his activism and his candidacy.

State Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, poses with state Treasurer and gubernatorial candidate Joe Malone at the Lincoln statue in Hingham where Hedlund announced he would back Malone for governor.

Reception to honor Lt. Gov. Candidate Swift

New York Congressman Amo Houghton will be special guest at a Cohasset reception to honor Lt. Gov. Candidate Jane Swift Sunday, Aug. 23, 5 to 7 p.m., at the home of Polly Logan, 121 Nichols Rd., Cohasset.

Logan noted that in 1990 Swift became the youngest woman ever elected to the Massachusetts Senate and rose to the rank of assistant minority leader, again the youngest woman in Senate history to serve in either party's leadership. In 1996 Swift ran in the First Congressional District and finished closer than any other Republican Congressional Candidate in the state. Gov. Weld appointed her director of regional airport development of the Massachusetts Port Authority and in December 1977 she served as director of the Massachusetts Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation. Now 33, Swift lives in North Adams with her husband, Charles Hunt. They are expecting a child in late October.

Since 1987 Congressman Amo Houghton has served as the representative of New York's 31st Congressional District, which covers parts of 10 counties from Lake Erie along the Pennsylvania border, to the Finger Lakes. He is the seventh ranking Republican on the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, and serves on its Trade and Health Subcommittees. He also is a member of the International Relations Committee and vice chairman of its Subcommittee on Africa. Houghton is the only former CEO of a Fortune 500 firm to serve in the House.

For reservations, call or mail checks to Polly Logan, 121 Nichols Rd., Cohasset, 02025, (781) 383-0031.

Cutler won't take contributions from lobbyists

Democratic State Representative candidate Josh Cutler announced today, that his campaign would not accept contributions from lobbyists. He is the only candidate in the race to make such a pledge.

"Lobbyists have been overly influential in politics for too long," Cutler said. "As the only candidate in this race not to accept contributions from them, I hope to set a good example for politicians throughout the state."

Cutler has long been a strong advocate for campaign finance reform. In addition to being the first candidate in the history of the state to disclose financial reports on the Internet, Cutler has worked with the Clean Elections organization to put a campaign finance reform measure on the ballot in November.

For more information on the Cutler Campaign, call 741-9889 or visit the campaign website at www.jcutler.com.

Cutler endorsed by environmental organizations

The Massachusetts League of Environmental Voters (MLEV) and New England Environmental Voters (NEEV) have voted to endorse Democratic State Representative candidate Josh Cutler.

"We are pleased to make this endorsement," said Marsha Westropp, co-chair of the MLEV board. "Mr. Cutler has demonstrated his strong commitment to the environment through his leadership in securing passage of Land Bank legislation and commitment to work for environmental legislation if elected, particularly the updated bottle bill."

MLEV and NEEV are non-profit organizations dedicated to improving environmental quality through electoral political action. MLEV and NEEV seek to achieve this goal by increasing the public's awareness of the positions taken on environmental issues by Massachusetts' public officials and candidates for office.

Cutler is a Democratic candidate for state representative for Hingham, Hull and Cohasset. He is running to bring a pro-active voice on issues like health care reform, education and environmental protection. For more information on the Cutler Campaign, call 741-9889 or visit our web site at www.jcutler.com.

Bradley summer coffee hours

Assistant District Attorney and state Rep. candidate Garrett Bradley is continuing to take his campaign directly to the voters of the Third Plymouth District through a series of coffees during the summer. Bradley will be talking with voters about important issues such as the education of our children, the reduction of taxes and the prevention of crime in our neighborhoods at the following coffees:

Aug. 20, 7:30 p.m., Rick and Lynn Linehan, 7 Harvest Lane, Hingham; Aug. 21, 6 p.m., David Raftery and Barbara Webster, 1 Point Allerton Ave., Hull; Aug. 23, 6 p.m., Mr. and Mrs. William Homel, 25 Helen St., Hull.

More greening planned at swim center

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The parking accessed off North Main Street in front of the swim center will undergo repairs once the season ends in a few weeks.

The area in front of the swim center will be reloamed and reseeded in answer to complaints that the once-grassy lot has become a "dust bowl." Access to the center from North Main Street will be shut off for good after the season, Town Manager Mark Haddad said.

Swim center abutter, Matthew Marr, was among those who brought concerns before the board of selectmen last week. He and others complained about the deterioration of the swim center and Little League field land, parking by non-handicapped motorists in the handicapped-only lot and the general dangerousness of the parking situation.

The heavy use of the swim-center's upper parking lot, combined with parking along the Little League field, created a danger. Vehicles exiting the swim center's lot could only drive in reverse through the gates and past the Little League field's impromptu parking area. The risk to children running out from behind a parked car as a vehicle exited was clear.

Once the proposed changes have been put in place, those who require handicapped-access parking will park their vehicles behind the swim center. That area can be accessed around the side of the Little League field by Hugh Morgan's concession stand. This area will also accommodate parking overflow for the swim center and Little League, when needed, Haddad said. A gate will be installed in the swim center fence and an area will be hot-topped to facilitate handicap access.

In a related matter, L. Stephanie Hernan, a member of the swim club's board of managers, wrote to selectmen to respond to an accusation that the center has been dumping chemicals which have killed Sumac surrounding the site. Herman explained that a local landscaper cut down all the Sumac and other hazardous plants surrounding the facility for the safety of center visitors.

Groups reach accord on Little Harbor Study

Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Changes to the Little Harbor Study draft that were not approved by the sewer commission were eliminated this week after several meetings on the proposal.

Sewer commissioners were adamantly opposed to the new information added because they were not consulted and say it was added at the last minute. All the sides discussing plans for the study came to agreement and are now ready to move forward with plans to seek the Request for Proposals for the water quality study.

A panel comprised of three town boards presided over a public meeting last Wednesday night at town hall, held as a means of receiving input from the 60 or so residents who attended the session. Members of the Board of Health, Sewer Commission, Selectmen and health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik listened to audience feedback on the RFP prepared for the state Department of Environmental Protection.

The Request was written with all three boards' approval and asks that a water quality study of the Inner Little Harbor and Little Harbor be done in order to assess wastewater management options in the Nichols Road area and areas near Little Harbor.

For the most part, the proposal was met by a calm audience. Mitzi Railsback, 184 Atlantic Ave., wanted to know if Title 5 would still hold. "Until there is an accepted plan by the state, Title 5 will stand," answered board of health member Kevin Ulmer. "It (the study) should take a year and six months to complete."

Charlie Buckley, 20 Jerusalem Lane, wanted to know who would decide what actions to take based on the evaluation of the study. Guild responded, "The scientific results will go to the town and then to the state. Later, both will discuss what steps to take."

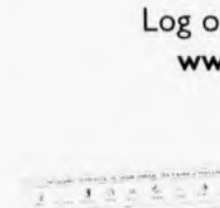
Questions from residents were sometimes answered with a referral to the proposal. The hour-long meeting ended without any note of discord.

Guild, for one, was pleased about attendees' reaction to the proposal.

"We had no adverse criticism. It was blessedly about the most uneventful meeting I'd attended in the last two years!" he said. "Sure, they just wanted to get it straightened out so that they understood what would be done in this project and they agreed that this was the right approach. I assume we're all in agreement here.

"We should be able to get bids below the $45,000 appropriated by the town meeting," he said. "If we don't get bids below that, we're in trouble but that's unlikely. The scope of work should be doable at that cost."

"We have taken it and forwarded it to DEP for approval," said town manager Mark Haddad. "Once DEP gives the approval, I will advertise . Everyone's agreed, all three boards are signed on it and I'm just waiting to hear back from the DEP."



Ten minutes for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and are held on alternate Tuesdays.

The next selectmen's meeting is Tuesday, Sept. 1.

DPW could take over sewer and water departments

Selectmen to tackle Haddad's report

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Town manager Mark Haddad has delivered a report to selectmen recommending that the DPW merge with the water and sewer departments for better efficiency and lower costs. The report recommends eliminating the elected sewer and water departments in favor of boards appointed by the selectmen.

The report is the latest step in an ongoing effort by the town to consolidate public works functions performed by other town boards or departments. The consolidation began in 1995 when the town combined the elected highway surveyor position with the appointed tree, park and cemetery superintendent's job into one DPW superintendent, a position currently held by Harold Litchfield. Haddad's report recommends that the town hire a professional engineer to oversee an expanded public works department that includes the water and sewer departments after Litchfield retires.

The report will now be reviewed by selectmen. If approved, town meeting would have to approve the changes and the state legislature would have to authorize changing the sewer and water departments from elected to appointed boards. In his report, Haddad states that the sewer department should remain unchanged until all current projects are completed, at which time sewer projects would fall under the DPW's jurisdiction with the sewer commissioners serving as advisors. Haddad states that the sewer department would "cease to exist as an operational agency" if his recommendations are approved.

The water commissioner's functions would change very little because of previously successful efforts to make it a self-supporting agency. Private contractors would continue to run the day-to-day water delivery and maintenance.

Haddad interviewed all the members of the water commission to get their input for the report. However, according to an appendix in the report, Haddad did not interview any of the members of the sewer commission, speaking only with private consultant Dan Coughlin from the sewer commission's engineering consulting firm, Tutela Engineering. Haddad could not be reached to comment on why he was unable to speak with the sewer commissioners.

However, at least one member of the sewer commission, Chairman Ted Guild, was unhappy with the plan to eliminate the elected sewer commission.

"I haven't seen the report, but I think it is ill-advised to change to an appointed sewer commission," Guild said. "It takes away the right of the people to choose their sewer commissioners."

In his report, Haddad states that one of the most important areas that would be improved by a consolidated DPW would be engineering and building maintenance. Currently, the town does not have engineering or building maintenance departments.

"Currently, when certain engineering work is needed, the town has been extremely fortunate to have the services of the Norfolk County Engineering Department," Haddad said. "While this service is greatly appreciated by the town, it is not always available in a timely manner.

If approved, town meeting would have to approve the changes and the state legislature would have to authorize changing the sewer and water departments from elected to appointed boards.

"Another area is the review of subdivisions and site plans, monitoring subdivision work and the design and inspection of streets. The planning board charges developers a fee that is used to hire the appropriate technical expertise for the board," he added.

Hiring a town engineer will not completely eliminate the need to hire outside firms, Haddad said. But it will improve past situations in which paid consultants and contractors have had difficulty locating plans, or maps of the town's sewer system.

Haddad said the town has not done nearly enough to address building maintenance, except at some of the school buildings. He cited a lack of preventive maintenance at any of the town buildings as a serious problem in the present and for the future.

To accomplish these goals, Haddad is recommending that the town hire an engineer for $50,000 per year. Although this would add an extra salary to the DPW, the new engineer would be able to learn about the town's needs from Litchfield.

Haddad is also recommending a supervisor to oversee a building maintenance department. The new maintenance department would need three full-time workers, which would cost the town an additional $32,000. Haddad points out the need for a comprehensive maintenance department because of the facilities audit which found that the town needs to perform $15 million in work over the next decade.

The school department conducts its own building maintenance, but Haddad will ask school officials to consider a unified approach to save money.

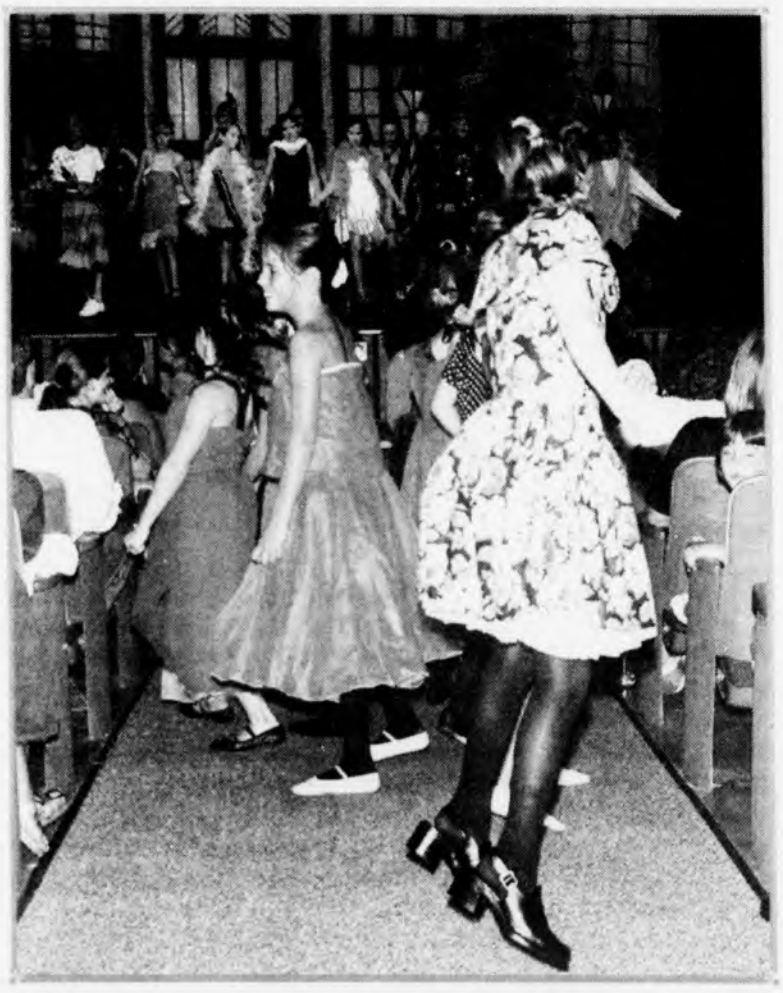
'Anastasia' captivates one and all



"Anastasia" performed by the Children's Drama Workshop at Cohasset High last week delighted the audience with a talented group of young actors and dancers. Clockwise: Angela Micciche, 12, of Marshfield, makes a lovely queen. A creative set provides the backdrop to this scene featuring Anastasia (portrayed by Caroline Carr, second from right). Aaron Moir, 5, enjoys a snack while he watches the play on stage at the high school. "Anastasia" was full of surprises including the aisles filling with dancers and actors. Skaters ride popularity wave of women's hockey

By Joe Reardon
CORRESPONDENT

Jackie Goines first heard about an all-girls hockey league out of Pilgrim Arena in Hingham this past February. Intrigued by the prospects of playing in the league, the 14-year-old Goines, who will enter her freshman year at Cohasset High School this fall, joined the Commonwealth Hockey Conference.

The experience has been nothing but positive for the right-winger. Before joining the CHC, Goines's hockey options were limited to playing on local ponds and lakes in pick-up games with the boys. Now, she can display her talents and improve her game further in a league specifically designed to do just that.

"It has been wicked fun," said Goines. The girls are nice and the coaches are really helpful."

The goal of the two-year-old CHC program is to introduce girls to organized hockey and develop their skills in an enjoyable, stress-free environment. Programs are held in the summer, fall and spring for ages 10-18. The players practice on Tuesday nights and play in non-contact games on Sundays.

"Girls have been interested in hockey all along," said CHC President Susan Cunniff. "They just weren't invited to play before. Boys and girls play hockey together when they're young because there's not a big physical difference. There's no hitting in boys hockey until they're 11 years old. But many girls later become more comfortable playing hockey together and there's never any checking in girls hockey.

Cohasset's Anna Roche, (#5 in the dark shirt), is one of many young ladies who have grabbed on to the growing popularity of women's hockey.

"The girls really bond and I've never seen happier kids. The talent level here is very good, too. It really emphasizes stickhandling and skating skills without getting physical."

Goines's activities have hardly been limited to donning skates and taking to the ice. She is a member of the field hockey, basketball and track teams at the high school. Goines eventually would like to see girls hockey added to the array of sports programs at CHS. Girls can try out for the boys squad, but she believes there is a big intimidation factor that goes along with playing with and against boys.

"I really hope the school starts a team so the girls wouldn't be so intimidated in trying Goines said. I do think you'd have to go around and talk to the kids. it's not just a sport for guys."

Goines believes she has become a more disciplined player and approaches each practice with more intensity than she has in the past. That characteristic, she is sure, will carry over when she begins field hockey practice during the last week of August.

Goines' friend and teammate, 13-year-old Anna Roche, has been playing field hockey since the age of 9. She moved from England to Cohasset three years ago and was persuaded to join the CHC team by Goines.

"I talked to Jackie about it," said Roche, whose athletic goal this fall is to make the varsity field hockey team at Notre Dame Academy in Hingham. She said she was joining the league and I went to one of the practices

The boys of summer

They were born in a small town, but that didn't stop this group of 8-year-old Cohasset Little League All-Stars from compiling an impressive 6-3-1 record this summer in the Friendship League.

Spending their summer playing against other young men drawn from a talent pool considerably larger than their own, the Cohasset eight-year-old Little League All-Stars still completed one of their best seasons on record.

The summer traveling baseball team ended the year in the Friendship League at 6-3-1 while going up against towns such as Braintree, Quincy, Needham, Walpole and Whitman.

"You could see that this age group was going to be special even a few years ago," said head coach Mark DeGiacomo, a vice-president with the Cohasset Youth Baseball League. "You could see right away that these kids really enjoy being around one another and playing the game of baseball."

Because of the small town atmosphere of Cohasset DeGiacomo said the Little League all-stars face the same dilemma as the players they admire at the high school level. There are some good athletes in

11-year-olds win District 8 Little League Championships

After a stellar pitching performance by Chris Barber on Tuesday night (8/11), resulting in Cohasset beating a resilient Braintree American team thereby qualifying them, on Thursday night Aug. 13, at the Sharon Little League Baseball Complex.

The Cohasset Little League (11-year-old division), captured the District 8 Summer League Championship by defeating their perennial arch rivals from Whitman by deceiving score of 19-8.

Lead by the unflappable 6 solid inning pitching of "ace" hurler Teddie Straughn, Cohasset secured a shaky 2-1 spread after the first inning and nervously maintained until the fourth inning when stimulated by the lead off hit and subsequent multiple stolen bases by Crandon Leahy and the equally timely supportive hitting of Teddie Straughn, Jon Grimm, D.J. Silvia and Mark Lewis (2 Home Runs in 3 games!) The Cohasset Cubs began to distance themselves from their able and always-capable-of-battling-back opponent. Earlier in the game, the trio of Teddy Straughn, D.J. Silvia and Willie "Red Shoes" Maich executed a perfect 1-3-5 inning ending double play to seemingly stick the pin in Whitman's chances to pull this one out.

By the end of the top half of the fifth, the visiting Cohasset team had, what they thought (as did their fans!), A comfortable 8 run lead (11-3), but Whitman, in their typical never-say-die fashion, assisted by a few misplays by the otherwise stable Cohasset defense, tried to again complete what has proven to be their but unlike Goines, had never played any hockey in the past. She played and worked very hard in the final three weeks of the spring program and is now halfway through the summer session.

Since joining the league, Roche's game has improved in leaps and bounds. The greatest strides have come with her skating and stickhandling, and is pleased with her game play as a member of the Avalanche squad. Goines is a member of the same squad.

"It's a teaching league and I like how everyone is a beginner," she said.

The CHC is a perfect vehicle for Roche to be introduced to the game.

"Our beginners only need to know how to stand on skates," said Cunniff. "Some are figure skaters and others have just been roller balding. Many of our girls have grown up watching their brothers play hockey."

Although field hockey is still her favorite sport, Roche has every intention of playing in the fall session as well. The conditioning aspect of hockey will make her that much stronger and give Roche added endurance, a definite edge in a sport where running is a big key to success.

Roche is also a member of the Cohasset Swim Team and she has already seen the added conditioning benefits hockey has made while in the pool. Roche's endurance has never been better. The proof is in the results. She has improved her times in all three of her events, the butterfly, backstroke and freestyle.

"I'm usually in good shape from swimming," said Roche, "But I'm in even better shape now."

Sixteen-year-old Caitlin Donovan played in the CHC during the summer of 97 and was a member of this past winters CHS boys hockey team. Donovan grew up playing with all boys including her four brothers, Adam, Brian, Greg and Mark.

Donovan, who'll be a junior this fall, enjoyed her CHC experience and met a lot of nice people. Donovan has been playing hockey longer than both Goines and Roche combined and was a member of the South Shore Seahawks and South Shore Hornets.

She admitted, however, she enjoyed the change of practicing and playing with other girls. Donovan agrees that women's hockey is here to stay.

"Women's hockey has been around for a while," she said. "It's just now being noticed."

Like Roche in field hockey, the added conditioning of hockey made a difference in Donavon performance on the lacrosse field. She played for the high school team and recently garnered a gold medal in the scholastic division of the Bay State Games.

Donovan hopes to continue playing hockey through her college years. The experience and knowledge she gained through the CHC will have been a big reason why.

Hockey league looking for ladies

The Duxbury Youth Hockey Association is extending an invitation to girls living in South Shore communities who would like to play in the Girls Hockey Program. Over the past four years Duxbury has developed an outstanding girls program which has been recognized as one of the leading organizations in Massachusetts.

Duxbury participates in the New England Girls Hockey league which is affiliated with the nationally recognized Assabet Valley girls hockey association. If the number of registrants warrants it, Duxbury will field three girls teams in this league. League play will offer competition in two divisions, 13-and-over and 12-and-under. Girls interested in playing in the 12-and-under team need not be experienced players. A tryout for skills determination will be scheduled to occur in September.

Interested players should contact Mike Duffy, Girls Program Director at (781) 934-5280 for more information. There will be a registration on Tuesday, Aug. 20 at the Duxbury Library (Merry Room) from 7-9 p.m.

Hockey skills competition

One On One Multimedia Productions is hosting a hockey skills competition Aug. 23, at the Bridgewater Ice Rink in Bridgewater.

This competition will be similar in format to the pros on TV, with all the glitz and glamour. The kids will have a lot of fun and be able to show off their stuff.

Dave Shea, announcer for the Boston Bruins, will be the master of ceremonies and there will be many celebrities, coaches, scouts, recruiters and other hockey VIPs on hand.

One On One Multimedia Productions specializes in Broadcast Quality Digital Video Productions to highlight your athlete or team, so there will be plenty of video to offer to the parents, hopefully at no charge.

This will be used as a fund-raising opportunity for the individual programs so they will be donating back to the organization in which that player participates.

Sponsorships are available for the program book, and again, an opportunity to raise more funds for the organizations by acquiring sponsors is tremendous.

All levels are invited including Town, Metro, NECDL and Junior.

Events will include fastest skater, best skater, best stickhandler, most accurate shot, best slapshot and best goalie.

Trophies for first, second, third places. Players will compete at their skill level.

town, but sometimes not enough to compete as a team with some of the larger towns around the South Shore.

As well, the pool is further depleted by other sports such as lacrosse and soccer that are going on at the same time as the baseball season.

"You saw some of the kids playing two or even three sports during the season, but they seem to have a real connection with baseball," said DeGiacomo. "We'll be keeping an eye on this group in the next few years. They are a great bunch of kids and talented as well."

DeGiacomo also praised the parents and family members that were with the team all season.

"There was not one single problem all season," he said. "They come out and supported the team at home and traveled with us as well and were respectful at all times. You couldn't have asked for a better support system than what we had this summer.

"They were great representatives of the town of Cohasset."

"hallmark" over the years, a thrilling come-from-behind victory.

Although they truly had Cohasset on-the-ropes, after a 5 full, Cohasset was holding on by 3 runs (11-8) with Whitman's meat-of-the-order due up in their half of the sixth.

This is where the Cohasset team truly earned their title, Champions! With the late summer night visibility diminishing rapidly and the Cohasset fans beginning to feel that eternal Red Sox phobia, "wait until next year," to a player, the hitting prowess of these talented young men exploded.

Batting around the entire 11 man roster, their bats were unstoppable. Singles, doubles, triples…they came after Whitman with everything in their arsenal. It was as if they had saved this exhibition of baseball for exactly this opportunity. They simply ripped the heart and soul out of the talented Whitman team.

Matt Casey, Jimmy DeGiacomo, Billy Carbone and Matty Baroudi and Evan Sacks couldn't be denied.

By the time the onslaught was completed, 13 men had batted and 8 crushing runs had crossed the plate leaving Whitman in a never to crawl out of deficit of 19-8. In spite of Whitman's best coming to bat in the bottom of the sixth, again behind Straughns's tireless fast ball, the boys-of-summer did something that happens all to infrequently for any Cohasset team…they finished as THE BEST!

This was truly a summer season to behold. These young men, who having been playing together since they were 5, had an overall district record of 8-4 in one of the most balanced leagues in years. They had plenty of opportunity to throw the towel in, but they have obviously learned something from their brief Little League careers and that is PRIDE.

They collectively took their playing positions, took their turn at bat and when it was appropriate, took their turn on the bench.

Cohasset Sailing Club results

Mass Bay Junior Regatta Aug. 17-19

Racing coach Amy Logue reports that 18 junior sailors from the Sailing Club will join more than 250 racers in the annual Mass Bay Junior Regatta this week hosted by the Hull Yacht Club. Competition will be intense for the Cohasset crews as they race in fleets of up to 100 boats in this Junior Olympic event.

The six crews racing for CSC in the Turnabout fleet are:

1. Phil Strazzulla and Drew Musto
2. Rachel Doyle and Elisa Ninde-Jerome
3. Justin Runey and Kristen Creighton
4. Greg O'Connell and Tome Anderson
5. Betsey Reynolds and Julie Shea
6. Martha Henderson and Mike Haajar

Two CSC boats are racing in the 420 Fleet crewed by the teams of Robin Cunningham and Lane Forrer, Ben Peterson and Eric Libby. Competing for the first time in the single-hand Laser fleet will be boats sailed by Kate Henderson and Sean Chase. Watch for the race results in next week's Mariner.

Cohasset Swim Team comes home with the silver

Shortly after nine a.m. on Saturday, Aug. 15, at the Natatorium at Wheaton College, the whistle blew, and the first of 64 Championship swim races was off t[illegible]locks! The Cohasset Swim Team coaches, Allison Hughes and Greg Bilton, could be seen pacing the side of the Olympic pool as their prodigies swam for gold in each of the varied events, starting with the medley relays. Cohasset's winning style was evident as the Boy's 8 and Under took a silver in the first event of the day, followed by the Girl's 8 and Under getting the gold, with a team of Emma Hernan, Abby Markert, Sally Meehan and Allysa Campbell. Next, the Boy's and Girl's 10 and Under Teams took the bronze in their medleys, against swim teams from all over the South Shore.

During the summer weeks, the teams practice and compete, culminating in this wonderful Championship event represented by eight different teams. Here in Cohasset, the 40 competitors who represented their entire summer Team of 182 swimmers, were chosen for this end-of-season event strictly by their individual stroke times. As Allison said just before announcing the representatives at the Awards Nigh Banquet, "with such a wonderful team, this is the hardest thing I have to do all season." Cohasset can be very proud of each and every Swim Team member who helped achieve both personal and Team success at Meets all Summer long.

The day progressed with many exciting races, from the Boy's 12 and Under Medley Relay taking the Gold, followed by the Girl's team taking a third position. The Boy's 17 and Under proceeded to really make a splash by almost lapping their closest competitor as they took a first place. The Girl's 17 and Under did exceedingly well, shy of two of their top competitors, by swimming hard to a sixth place finish.

After the Medley Relays, the event continued with individual stroke races and the Individual medley races for the older age groups. Highlighting the first place winners, we have Alex Berg's exciting first place win in the Boy's 14 and Under IM with a time of 1:06.42, and Greg Bilton's 17 and Under IM time for first of 56.38 seconds. The Boy's 8 and Under 25 yard Freestyle race was won by Cohasset's Alexander Hunt. Parker Berg easily brought home the Gold in his Boy's 10 and Under Freestyle race. Robbie Lehr did an excellent job in the Boy's 14 and Under Freestyle with a first place time of 27.06. As expected, Greg Bilton showed his winning style in the Boy's 17 and Under Freestyle with a time of 22.33.

In the Butterfly races, taking first place for Cohasset was Sally Meehan in the Girl's 8 and Under Butterfly, showing the capacity crowd a beautiful stroke. Moving on to the individual Breast Stroke races, finishing first for Cohasset was David Crowley-Buck with a time of 33.71 in the Boy's 14 and Under race.

The next events were the individual Backstroke races, led by Alexander Hunt taking the gold in the Boy's 12 and Under race. Kayvon Tehranian added to his team's gold in the Boy's 12 and Under Backstroke with a time of 38.43, followed by Alex Berg winning the Boy's 14 and Under with a time of 31.41. Greg Bilton, once again, showed his winning style in the Boy's 17 and under with a time of 27.22.

The always-exciting Free Relay events proved to be a fabulous showing for the Cohasset Boy's Teams starting with a second place for the 8 and Under team, and followed by the Boy's 10 and Under, Boy's 12 and Under, and the Boys 17 and Under all taking gold home for Cohasset! All of the girl's relay teams can be very proud of their fine work, with a second place in the Girl's 8 and Under. Followed by another silver for the Girl's 10 and Under, and a bronze for the Girl's 12 and Under Team.

Hat's off to all of the competitor's and their coaches. You all make us proud.

Cohasset's coaches work wonders in a short 7 week session, culminating in this fine display of good sportsmanship, athletics and team spirit. The year-round Marshfield Mask Team won the event over Cohasset by a mere 65 points, giving us the Silver to take home, with a promise of another great season next summer and plenty of good competition from the Cohasset Swim Team!

Tips to consider during your pregnancy

By Esther Csapo Rastegari, RN, EdM
CORRESPONDENT

Whether you've recently learned you were pregnant, or whether you are well along on this journey, here is some information to help your pregnancy run more smoothly.

I'm basically healthy. Can I skip some of the prenatal visits?

Early, regular prenatal visits serve several important functions. At every visit your blood pressure, weight and urine should be checked. By establishing a baseline for your blood pressure (BP) early on in the pregnancy, your obstetrician, certified nurse-midwife (CNM), or nurse practitioner can monitor any increases in your BP that would indicate the development of a condition called PIH, or pregnancy induced hypertension.

A woman should gain about 25 to 30 pounds during the course of the pregnancy, unless special circumstances indicate otherwise. Less than 5 of these pounds are gained during the first 12 of the 40 weeks of pregnancy. This is not a time for weight loss, as the developing fetus is in need of adequate nourishment. Also, the process of losing weight can create substances called ketones, which can be harmful to the baby's development. Rapid weight gain can be a sign of fluid retention or edema.

Urine should be checked at every visit for evidence of protein (preeclampsia/PIH) or glucose (diabetes). At the first prenatal visit, and again around sixteen weeks, urine should be cultured for bacteria which would indicate a urinary tract infection (UTI). Women with a history of UTIs may be monitored more closely.

Researchers in Boston and Atlanta report that pregnant women are at greater risk of pyelonephritis, an inflammation of the kidneys, if the UTI goes undetected. It can be treated with antibiotics that are considered safe for use in pregnancy. Untreated UTIs are associated with low birth weight babies, premature labor, PIH, and infection of the sac of amniotic fluid surrounding the baby (amnionitis). Screening is important, since some UTIs exist without symptoms. Contact your healthcare provider with any pain with urination, increased sense of urgency, decreased urine output, blood in urine, fever, or flank pain.

I'm confused about the terms, due date, EDC and EDD.

These terms all mean the same thing — the estimated arrival date of your baby. EDC represents estimated date of confinement, a term from the past. EDD refers to estimated date of delivery. Your healthcare provider may use a wheel calibrated to determine the EDD, based on the first day of your last menstrual period (LMP). To [illegible] yourself: take your LMP, let's say July 20. Subtract 3 months = April 20. Add 7 days = April 27. This is your due date. Estimated is the key word here. These calculations assume a 28-day cycle as a base, since ovulation usually occurs 14 days before your next period. But many women have irregular cycles, or cycles 30+ days apart. In addition, several factors come into play in the triggering of the onset of labor. Therefore, delivery two weeks before or after your EDD is considered within normal range.

Is it safe to exercise during pregnancy?

Numerous studies, including recent research at MacNeal Hospital in Illinois, have found that moderate exercise such as walking and swimming is not only safe during pregnancy, but can lead to a greater sense of well-being and shortened labor time.

Avoid, however, sports with the potential for trauma to the abdomen, falls, or high-impact. It is especially important to keep well hydrated and to avoid increasing the internal body temperature (this includes avoiding hot tubs and saunas), as there is evidence to suggest the risk of birth defects if the fetus has been exposed to increased temperatures. (The March of Dimes has information online about "Fitness for Two" at http://babynet.ddwi.com/tlc/pregnancy/fit42is.html ; 1-800-367-6630)

As the pregnancy advances, your center of gravity will shift, and you may need to make some accommodations in how you exercise. Also, the pregnant body produces a substance called relaxin, which makes the pelvic joints more mobile. This is important during the delivery process. But, it could lead to a fall during exercise. And certainly, don't push through the pain. Pain is your body's signal to you to STOP and assess the problem.

Pregnancy websites. At www.pregnancytoday.com there is a recall posted for Evenflo "On My Way" car seat/carriers # 207 and # 492, which have a problem with the handle, which according to Evenflo is not a safety problem when strapped as a car seat, but only if held in the lap. It can, however, lead to the baby's falling out of the carrier. You can call Evenflo at 1-800-203-2138 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for a repair kit, or learn more at their website: www.evenflo.com. Carnation has a lot of information online at www.carnationbaby.com, or you can subscribe to their free magazine at 1-800-carnation.

Her Way.

Jennifer Way and her husband Bob wanted to plan the birth of their fourth child, Stephen, down to the last detail. And Cathy Offutt, CNM, a South Shore Hospital certified nurse midwife, delivered. "With Cathy's help, I felt like we were always in control," said Jennifer.

In fact, certified nurse midwives deliver nearly one-third of all babies born at South Shore Hospital, providing professional, personalized care during pregnancy, labor, and birth. They're backed by comprehensive education and support services; a medically advanced, comfortable birthing environment; and 24-hour coverage by pediatric specialists — resources that make South Shore Hospital the region's most popular maternity center among midwives, obstetrician/gynecologists, family practitioners, and their patients.

"South Shore Hospital midwives care for you emotionally as well as physically," Jennifer said.

Accident on South Main Street

A West Roxbury woman was cited for failure to grant the right of way at an intersection following a three-car accident last week.

At just after 2 p.m., Aug. 10, Mary Clougherty, 66, was on her way to a wake at the funeral home at the corner of Summer and S. Main streets, police said.

As she exited Spring Street, she struck a car driven by Robert Gamarossa, 44, of Marshfield who was traveling north on South Main Street, Safety Officer Richard Yocum said. Gamarossa was cited for speeding, Yocum said.

He explained that after Clougherty's car struck the one driven by Gamarossa, it spun around striking a third vehicle which had stopped at the stop sign on Summer Street.

Donald H. Osterberg, trustee of Ledgewood Realty Trust u/d/t dated 10/22/97 registered with Norfolk Registry District of Land court as document No. 773973 as noted on certificate of title No. 150494 and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended

GREETING:

David H. Delprete

Claiming to be the holder of a mortgage covering real property situated in lot 29 Ledgewood Drive, Cohasset, County of Norfolk, Massachusetts given by Donald H. Osterborg trustee of Ledgewood Realty Trust u/d/t dated October 22, 1997 and registered with the Norfolk County Registry District of the Land Court as Doc. 773973 as noted on certificate of title No. 150494 to David M. Delprete dated October 22, 1997 and registered with Norfolk Registry District of the Land Court as document No. 773975 as noted on certificate of title 150494 has filed with said court a bill in equity for authority to foreclose said mortgage in the manner following: by entry to foreclose and by exercise of power of sale set forth in said mortgage.

If you are entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended, and you object to such foreclosure, you or your attorney should file a written appearance and answer in said court at Dedham on or before September 22, 1998 or you may be forever barred from claiming that such foreclosure is invalid under said act.

Witness, ROBERT A. MULLIGAN, Esquire, Chief Justice of our Superior Court, the 7th day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ninety eight.

OBITUARIES

George Horsefield

George Horsefield, longtime resident of Cohasset, died Sunday, Aug. 9 [illegible] his home on Jerusalem Road.

He was born Aug. 2, 1910, in the Readville section of Hyde Park.

Mr. Horsefield was a veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps.

He moved to Cohasset in 1950 with his wife Idella S. Hewes.

At a time when men in the neighborhood put on their suits and walked to the center of town to catch the train to Boston, Mr. Horsefield got into his Triumph TR3 sports car and commuted to Swift and Company where he worked for 42 years, supervising refrigeration.

Known fondly as "Uncle George," he was a keen observer of nature and often quipped that he saw... "a lot of animals which are a lot smarter than some of the people I see." In his last 15 years, he adopted a number of Doberman pincers which became his devoted companions.

Mr. Horsefield leaves his niece Martha Horsefield and a nephew, Thomas Horsefield, both of Abington.

A memorial service will be held at 1 p.m., Monday, Aug. 24 at Bancroft Hall at the Lightkeeper's Residence. Donations in Mr. Horsefield's memory may be made to New England Baptist Hospital, 125 Parker Hill Ave., Boston, 02120.-

Leo M. Kelly

Leo M. Kelly, 73, of Cohasset, the vice president and general counsel for E.G. & G. of Wellesley, died Monday, Aug. 17, at Southwood Nursing Facility.

Mr. Kelly worked for 33 years at E.G. & G., retiring in 1990. In his retirement, he worked as a volunteer mediator in Dedham District Court.

He was born in Boston. He lived in Quincy for 15 years before moving to Cohasset in 1977.

Mr. Kelly graduated from Boston College High School in 1942, Boston College in 1949 with a bachelor's degree in physics and Boston College Law School in 1961.

He served in the Army Air Force during World War II. He was discharged in 1944.

Mr. Kelly served as the general counsel, director and clerk of Quincy Youth Hockey.

He was a member of the Hatherly Country Club in Scituate and the Cohasset Tennis Club.

Mr. Kelly was a member of the Massachusetts Bar Association, the American Bar Association and the American Society of Corporate Secretaries since 1978.

He leaves his wife, Helen M. (Clune) Kelly; two sons, Daniel J. Kelly of Plymouth and John V. Kelly of Holden; a daughter, Maureen H. Tilton of Plymouth; two brothers, the Rev. Thomas J.C. Kelly S.J. of B.C. High School and John P. Kelly of Arlington; seven grandsons; and many nephews and nieces. He was the father of the late Leo M. Kelly Jr. and Kathleen M. Kelly and the brother of the late James Kelly of Weymouth.

The funeral will take place from the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset Center, Thursday, Aug. 20, at 9 a.m. A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Interment will be in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations in Mr. Kelly's memory may be made to the American Cancer Society, South Region, 1115 West Chestnut St., Brockton 02401 or the American Diabetes Association, 190 N. Main St., Natick 01760.

Cohasset High School 30th reunion

The Cohasset High School Class of 1968 will hold its 30th reunion Saturday, Aug. 29, at the Cohasset Lightkeeper's House from 6 to 10 p.m.. The cost is $50 per couple or $30 per person, payable to Cathy Davis, 52 Linden Dr., Cohasset, 02025.

Organizers are trying to locate the following graduates and would appreciate help: Sally Bohmer, Charlie (Biff) Donovan, James Feran, Bob Flanagan, Denise Grant, Alison Hatheway, Margie Hubbard, Jim Hurley, David LeDoux, Sue McIntyre, John McNeil, Ann Spinzola and Karen Walsh.

If you have knowledge about these persons or any 1968 graduate, call (781) 383-2570 and leave a message with address and phone number.

Get ready for Osgood move

Dates for unpacking the new school have been changed. The new dates are the weekend of Aug. 29 and 30 and the following Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 31 and Sept. 1.

Babysitting will be provided at Deer Hill Monday and Tuesday, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., for a nominal fee of $5. Call Sarah Markert at 383-6124 or Cassandra Rioux at 383-2856 to sign up.

New classes at Community Center

South Shore Community Center is offering a wide range of courses, starting in September, for all ages. Residents from all towns are welcome. Among the offerings for September will be dance classes for preschoolers, youth and adults, computer classes for children and adults, gym dandy program for tots, music for the very young, d t ing, cooking classes, garden home design, bowling, pre-school playgroups and special events. Classes begin the week of Sept. 14 and continue throughout the school year. Call the center for brochure at (781) 383-0088.

LIBRARY CORNER

Up and coming at the library

Storyteller Alicia Quintano will present "The Mysterious Stranger" and other stories, a program of stories and songs for children of all ages and their families Thursday, Aug. 20, at 7 p.m. Listen to mysterious and exciting tales from many cultures and observe wizards and magical beasts come alive, as the audience and storyteller join together telling tales. This event is sponsored in part by a grant from the Cohasset Local Cultural Council, the Massachusetts Cultural Council, and the National Endowment for the Arts.

New bulletin board

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library has a new bulletin board on which you will find the current reading lists including The New York Times best sellers list; the Radcliffe Publishing course picks and The Modern Library 100. The New York Times list includes a code indicating whether the library owns the book or will order it for you. The other lists are comprehensive lists of what are considered the top 100 "musts" in reading. The selections range from the classics such as F. Scott Fitzgerald's, "The Great Gatsby" to the modern, " Midnight's Children," by Salman Rushdie.

Also included on the bulletin board is a guide to starting your own book group. It tells you how to begin, how to make selections and how to lead a discussion. If anyone is interested in forming a book group, this information will be of great assistance. The bulletin board is located on the first floor to the left of the main entrance.

Party in children's room

A "Make Your Own Sundae" party will be held Tuesday, Sept. 1, at 2 p.m. for all children who participated in this summer's "Unlock the Mystery" reading program. Come in and enjoy the end of summer with a bowl of your favorite ice cream and delicious toppings!

Countdown to the state primary

Three vie for rights to unseat Rep. Murray

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

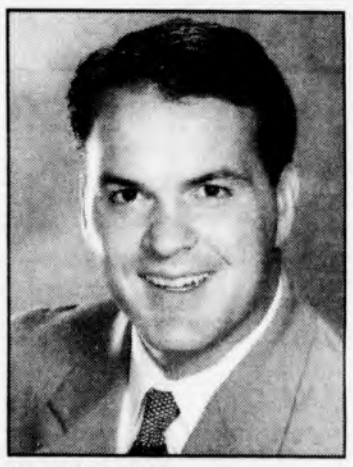
With the state primary less than three weeks away, the race to run against long-time incumbent Republican state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is heating up.

Democrats Josh Cutler, 27, of Hull and Garrett Bradley, 28, of Hingham — who are campaigning full-time — say they've worn out more than their share of shoe leather canvassing the Third Plymouth District which includes Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

The third candidate, Democrat Walter Murray, 34, of Hull, a paralegal who works at a Boston law firm, catches voters' ears whenever he can while balancing his full-time job with his campaign.

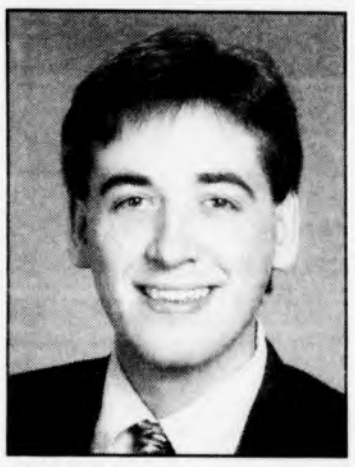
"Mary Jeanette is in for the race of her life," said Walter Murray about the Sept. 15 primary.

The Democratic candidates all give Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset — known for returning every phone call — high marks for her constituent service. But they fault the 22-year incumbent Republican for a lack of effectiveness in the Legislature.



"Part of the job is educating yourself on the issues," said Bradley.

"The other part of the job is trying to get legislation through to help our district and help our state," Cutler said.



The candidates each took part in separate editorial round tables last week at the Cohasset Mariner.

While the men all put education on their list of top three priorities, they part ways on what comes next.

Cutler, who went to Belmont Hill prep school and graduated from Skidmore College, gives the environment and healthcare a high ranking.

Garrett Bradley

Josh Cutler

Walter Murray

He backs the creation of land banks in the towns so funds could be put aside to purchase open space. He also supports recycling by expanding the bottle bill and would work through legislation to help people meet the financial burden of Title V, the state environmental code governing septic systems.

Cutler said the pendulum of "managed care" — a concept in health care which was supposed to slow down spiraling medical costs — has swung too far. He would work to get

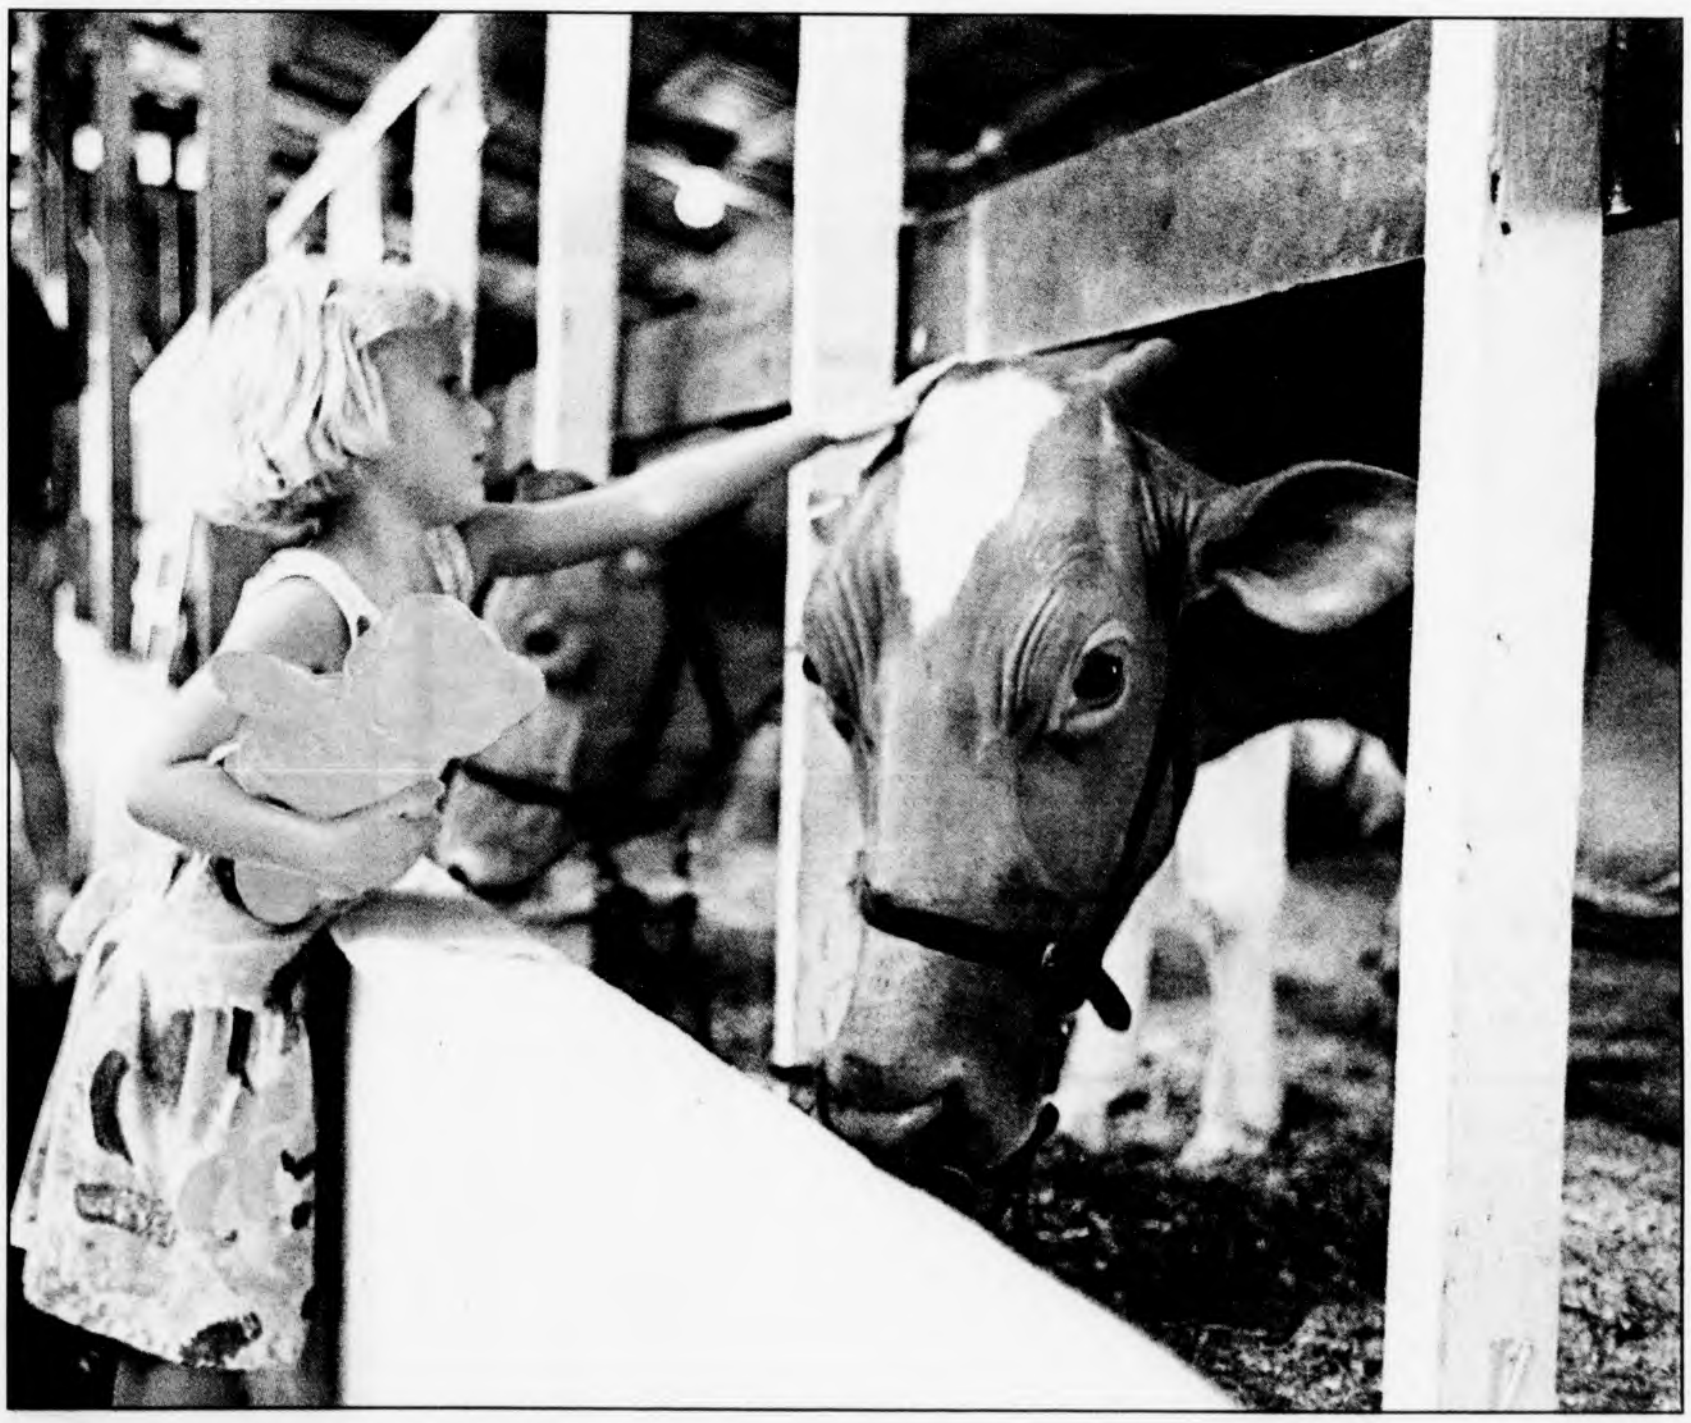
First day(s) of school to begin

Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

School hallways will soon be filled with talk of cook-outs, camping exploits and new friends made over the summer when 1,260 Cohasset students return to school for the '98-'99 year. Middle and high school teens and preteens will start Sept. 2 but their younger counterparts will have to wait until Sept. 8 to view the long-anticipated new Osgood Elementary School they will attend.



"I am absolutely thrilled," said Marilee Cantelmo, principal of the new Osgood school. " I think it's every principal's dream to open a new school so I think this is just one of the highlights of my career."

Cantelmo is anticipating about 470 children this year; about the same as last year, depending on how many parents register their children in the next week.

Returning Osgood students can expect fancier scholastic digs than they've been used to. The improvements include a large gymnasium that will allow enough space for a full-school assembly; a just-installed playground; a full technology lab; separate art and music classrooms; a

Mobil's palette doesn't pass muster

The Mobil Station at the corner of Sohier Street and Route 3A is continuing its quest to gain approval to place a new sign one foot from its property line. The business presented the request to the planning board last week.

The sign will be within the legal size limits in the town by-law but needs a special permit because signs are supposed to be 15 feet from the lot line.

Planning board members were amenable to the sign which is smaller than one initially requested earlier this year.

But members joked that the mustard-colored paint on the building's top third section did not pass muster with Cohasset's aesthetic sensibilities

All agreed to William Good's suggestion that the zoning board grant the special permit contingent upon Mobil proprietors changing the paint color from mustard to white.

Soccer Club offers reward

The Cohasset Soccer Club shed at Miliken Field was broken into Saturday evening, Aug. 15. The club is offering a $300 reward for information on the parties responsible. Call the Cohasset Police Department at 383-1212 with any information.

Lamberts Lane meeting held off

School committee member Mark DeGiacomo's plan to meet with residents of Lamberts Lane, Cohasset Golf Club president Cliff Mitman and town manager Mark Haddad has been put aside for now due to the vacation schedules of the participants.

"We've not been able to get a group together," said DeGiacomo. "Maybe next Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday will work out for everyone."

Lamberts Lane parents would like the school bus route to extend to their street but there is no place for the bus to turn around. One solution is to use the Golf Club's parking lot for the bus to turn about in.

Primary voter registration closes

The last day to register to vote or changed party affiliation for the Sept. 15 primary was Aug. 26. As of Tuesday, there were 5,292 registered voters in Cohasset including 1,125 Republicans, 1,143 Democrats, 3,001 unenrolled, and 23 in other parties.

Unenrolled voters may specify which party ballot they choose on election day.

Chapter closes for Cohasset school chief

Hart ends 28-years of service in town

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

After 28 years of service to Cohasset's school system, school superintendent Stephen Hart is officially ending [illegible]tenure in office. But he will attend [illegible]ing a variety of responsibilities he plans to see through - on a volunteer basis if necessary - after he "retires" on August 28.

Stacks of paper atop the seven-foot conference table in his office; textile samples of blue, spruce, taupe, and mulberry for the new Joseph Osgood Elementary School propped against a wall; and a front office full of morning visitors bespeaks Hart's dedication.

Currently, Hart's thoughts are set on the Sept. 8 opening of the new Osgood School, and with making the transition easier for incoming superintendent Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey who assumes office on Sept. 1.

"I'll volunteer to assist Ted if he needs me to work with him on the transition into the new school - moving, furniture changes and getting things straightened," said Hart.

Not a surprising offer, coming from a man who has made a career of teaching and guidance since he graduated from Merrimack College in North Andover in 1964.

Hart, a Hingham resident, began his teaching career with a short stint at Cathedral High School in Boston before switching over to industry. As a technical representative for Dow and later for a subsidiary of DuPont, Hart taught employees how to work with equipment in the lab.

But he soon realized that even more than teaching, he enjoyed the times when he was called on to offer guidance in some way. For that reason, he returned to school at Boston University, earning a master's degree in guidance there.

It was in 1970 that Hart came to Cohasset and began his official career as a guidance counselor, working with Cohasset's first teen club, called The City, and coaching junior high baseball.

Four years later, when special education law Chapter 766 was passed, Hart became the first administrator of special education for the town.

Chapter 766 offered enormous changes in special education law.

"That was an exciting time because Massachusetts had the most far-reaching educational law in the United States at that time," Hart recalled.

"A lot of students who hadn't been identified before as special needs students were able to benefit. And then there were some who had been institutionalized due to severe developmental disabilities - these were multi-handicapped kids. It was great to see new programs developed so that more children could benefit from public education."

Growing out of Chapter 766 was the South Shore Collaborative, a special needs network that exchanges programs and services over several towns for special education needs students. The network later evolved further to include inter-town sharing of technology.

Hart wore many hats prior to taking up the superintendent's mantle from Eugene Crowell in 1986. In his 28 years in Cohasset, he served as the first interim director of the South Shore Collaborative; special education director; and assistant superintendent whose responsibilities included business administration and grant writing, while still continuing his work as special education director for a time.

Now is a bittersweet time for Hart, with the new Osgood School that he'd fought so long for opening just as he leaves office.

"It was an all-consuming thing, going through the process of educating people about why we needed a new school," he said. "There were so many meetings held about this. We even met once at the Music Circus. It was a tremendous amount of work, getting the school approved. Some people think it's just the parents who wanted this school, but we had support from seniors, from parents with children in private schools and from people without children. Cohasset supports education. They see it as a top priority."

Other issues that have always loomed large on Hart's agenda are transportation; the promotion of METCO, a program that brings inner city students to the suburbs; and Proposition 2 1/2, the law that caps how much a town can raise its property tax levy in any given year.

"Transportation has always been an issue," said Hart. He added that "there have been so many reductions, including Prop. 2 1/2, which meant that we had to sacrifice some things, including building maintenance, to maintain the standard of education. Fortunately, METCO has always gone well - it's important for the children to be able to expand their world."

Evidence of highlights during Hart's years in Cohasset don the office walls, including a photograph of him standing with a teacher, two students and President Clinton during a field trip to Framingham.

"The little girl in that picture wasn't feeling well and so I had to stay outside the auditorium with her while Clinton gave his speech," explained Hart. "Clinton came out after the ceremony to say 'hello' to the girl. The little boy in the picture was graduated from the sixth grade this year. After his graduation ceremony, he came up to me and asked, 'Do you remember that time we met President Clinton?' You know, it's not all administrative work. There are a lot of fun moments in this job."

Another photograph shows Hart and several staff members surrounding comedian Bill Cosby, whose performance one year at the Music Circus was a fund-raiser for the schools.

Hart credits the PSO and Cohasset Education Foundation — two volunteer groups — as helping with additional funding for the schools, which must rely heavily on property taxes for new programs. "I've always appreciated their fine work and support," he said.

"If I have any advice to Malvey, it would be to work cooperatively with the community, and I think he will," said Hart. "The community values education highly and is willing to support the public school system. If he can gain their support and that of the teachers, he will do well. There are dedicated teachers, wonderful parents and students here and it's a nice community to be coming to."

As for his future plans, Hart and his wife , Miriam, will be celebrating 35 years of marital bliss next month. Travel is definitely on the agenda. Besides their daughter, Michele, in Boston, the Harts also have a daughter, Suzanne, in New York and another daughter, Andrea, in El Paso, Texas.

New school chief's background

Incoming school superintendent Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey, 50, has been in the field of education since 1970. He's been a teacher, assistant principal, team leader and has been moving up the administrative ladder for 10 years in Burlington, Mass. to the position of superintendent, earning $96,000 a year. Curriculum development is his specialty.

Malvey has served as superintendent of schools in Griswold, Conn. He had been the assistant superintendent in Mansfield and at the Cuaboag Regional School in Warren. He also served as the superintendent principal in West Brookfield.

Graduated from Boston State College (now UMass Boston) in 1970, Malvey also holds a master's degree in education from Northeastern University and a doctorate in education from George Washington University.

'Fans' turn out for Hart's last school board meeting

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

"He's shown a lot of grace under pressure," said school committee chairman Rick Shea, as he began to discuss Hart's 28-years of service to the Cohasset school system. "This is his last committee meeting and he's got a big smile on his face."

It made sense that Hart was smiling. Only moments before, 20-plus "fans" made up of former and current staffers along with Hart's wife Miriam, had entered the room as part of a surprise gathering in honor of the superintendent's retirement.

Shea described Hart as "a skilled manager and a nice guy," and recollected how the superintendent's "dry wit" had once brought laughter to a town meeting.

Hart jokingly wondered aloud who Shea was talking about.

"It's really nice to see everyone here," said Hart, referring to the crowd that, at times, was as jocular and unruly as any student assembly.

"I think we owe a great deal to the students we have-they are a privilege to work with," said Hart. "Our teachers are self-actualized and move ahead on their own. The parents have been wonderful over the years. In reality, we wouldn't have been able to anything without the people of Cohasset who felt that education is important."

Given the restlessness of the crowd, the meeting broke to enjoy the strawberry-encircled cake, orange punch, and assorted cookies on hand.

"It's been a very interesting 28 years for me," said Hart. "Now that I'll be retiring, I may be able to learn more about my town of Hingham."

New school's library to be named in honor of Hart

"It is the unanimous recommendation of the school building committee and the school committee that the new Osgood school library be named in honor of superintendent Hart," said chairman Rick Shea to the gathering that showed last week at the school committee meeting moments before Hart's surprise retirement party.

"Hart faced relentless opposition (to the new school) and a statehouse hearing and shepherded the project through to completion so that the new school has become a reality that will foster enthusiasm about learning," added Shea. "We believe it's an appropriate and fitting tribute for the library to be named after him."

In answer to committee member Mark DeGiacomo's queried, "Can we all second that?", all committee members and many of the surprise-party attendees (comprised mainly of former and present staff members) boisterously "ayed" their approval.

Reception for Hart

Former school co.mmittee member Maureen Jerz has scheduled a reception for retiring school superintendent Stephen Hart for 7 p.m., Sept. 17 at the Barker Tavern in Scituate.

Tickets are $25 each and should be made payable to Cohasset High School. For more information, call Jerz at 383-6592 or JoAnne Chittick at 383-9220.

Three-day delay for new Osgood Elementary School

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

An un-tiled corridor and other "punch list" items will push the date of the new Osgood School's opening to Sept. 8. Deer Hill School and the middle school-high school will open Sept. 2.

Chairman of the school building committee Robert Beggan met with the school committee last week to describe the finishing touches that would be worked on while teachers begin setting up their classrooms Sept. 1 which would mainly involve finishing touches to the first floor.

"The color schemes are beautiful, the ceilings are high—people will be pleased when they see it and not mind the three-day delay."
KATHY OFSTHUN, SCHOOL COMMITTEE MEMBER

"It's a beautiful building," said school committee member Kathy Ofsthun, who recently toured the new school. "The color schemes are beautiful, the ceilings are high—people will be pleased when they see it and not mind the three-day delay."

The $9.9 million dollar school has come in on budget, according to school superintendent Stephen Hart. School committee members praised building project and were not fazed by the delay. Mark DeGiacomo said three days is nothing in the scheme of things.

"I think it's important to explain that this is a major construction project coming in on time and within budget," he said. "In the construction world, three days is on time. And in the bigger picture, this building will outlive all of us and three days is a grain of sand."

Hart recommended that school be extended by three days rather than adding on extra hours of instruction during the school term. The last day of school will remain June 17 for the other schools, but the elementary school will let students out June 22.

Three vie for rights to unseat Rep. Murray legislation to ensure safeguards are in place so that HMOs don't cut costs at the expense of providing service.

Bradley puts public safety as a top priority. Domestic violence knows no economic bounds, said the former assistant district attorney.

He said he would file legislation to require a cooling off period for those arrested for domestic violence. The law would prohibit suspects who are bailed from returning to their primary residence for 24 hours.

Bradley said those he meets on the campaign trail say tax relief is badly needed.

He supports phasing in rolling back the 5.95 percent state income tax to 5 percent over several years while linking the rollback to a healthy economy. He supports giving $750 million of the state's $1.2 billion surplus back to the cities and towns in the form of block grants to help offset water rates and school overrides, for example.

Murray, who graduated from Biola University, is outraged by the high water rates in Hull, Hingham and North Cohasset, and would work through the Legislature to privatize Mass.-American Water Company. He feels water can be provided more efficiently and cheaper by the municipalities which would not make a profit or have to pay taxes.

Pointing out Hull residents pay higher rates for car insurance, Murray said he would work toward making car insurance rates fairer across the state.

Education topped the list of priorities for the three Democrats.

Murray, who graduated from Hingham High School, would earmark more state money for the towns to offset the need for school overrides.

Cutler would work to make the teaching profession more attractive through higher salaries and by providing more opportunities for professional development. He's a big believer in small class sizes.

Bradley, a "triple eagle" graduating from BC High, Boston College and BC Law School, said more after-school programs and all-day Kindergarten could be paid for with part of the state surplus through the block grants to the towns.

With $60,000 so far, Bradley has the biggest war chest of the three candidates. Cutler said he has raised $30,000 and Murray has raised $5,000. All say their money has come from family and friends.

Bradley is the only candidate to oppose restoration of the Greenbush line which would travel through Hingham and Cohasset. He said he has safety concerns and thinks the train is too expensive.

"It doesn't pass the cost/benefit analysis," he said.

Cutler backs the train even though his mother Suzanne Cutler of Hingham is an abutter and opposes it.

"We need transportation options on the South Shore," said Cutler, adding he would play hardball with the MBTA on mitigation issues.

Murray, who also supports the train, said it will increase property values and feels more public transportation is a family issue.

"People in Hingham and Cohasset are wealthy individuals who work late in town at power jobs," he said. "Anything that puts the provider at the dinner table earlier gets my vote."

New proposals from Weymouth builder

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Developer Steven Corey's plan to build 28 houses on the former Curtis Estates' 43 acres has been reduced to 23 houses, according to a planning board meeting presentation by engineer Robert Hannigan.

Some of the dozen concerned abutters had come armed with presentations of their own. Placards bearing photographs of property that would be affected by the proposed subdivision off Jerusalem Road were propped up on a meeting room table.

The removal of five houses from the subdivision would leave individual lots with more than 60,000 square feet each. A 20-foot wide strip of undeveloped woodland running alongside the site has been extended to a 30-foot width.

What the Weymouth developer wants in exchange for his alterations is two waivers from the board that will be needed for the proposed subdivision's road that would exit out to Jerusalem Road.

Charles Humphreys, attorney for the developer, explained that the road would be set in a 2,300-foot cul de sac with an 8.75 percent slope. The planning board normally confines dead end roads to 1,500 feet. Also, the board had asked for a six-foot slope, making the decline 1.75 percent steeper than proposed. However, the ledge would need to be cut into in order to create a six percent slope and this would create a canyon-like effect.

Neighbors of the proposed estate are concerned about land changes exacerbating the area's existing water problems. A possible increase in storm-caused flooding was the main argument heard from residents. Robert Hunter, 604 Jerusalem Road, maintained that water coming from a notch on the stone wall where the proposed driveway would go spills water out onto his road that freezes on his driveway.

Planning board engineering consultant John Modzelewski has looked over about 75 percent of Hannigan's plans to install two retention areas and additional catch basins to remedy the water problem on Jerusalem Road. Though not fully done studying Hannigan's strategy for water divergence, Modzelewski believes that the modifications should reduce the problem.

Hannigan traced a map of the proposed subdivision, showing where water would go under Jerusalem Road and out to Straits Pond and where a drain on Jerusalem Road would carry water out to Rattlesnake Run. Six catch basins on Jerusalem Road are also proposed.

"Any approval—and I'm not saying we are giving it—would be conditional upon receiving the proper permits and approval from the conservation commission, board of health and anyone else who had anything to do with them."
AL MOORE, PLANNING BOARD CHAIRMAN

Moore wondered if there were detention bases and how that would lessen or increase the water flow there.

According to Modzelewski, the water problem would lessen.. "The area of Jerusalem Road hasn't been definitely defined by the architect. It's possible to do what's proposed. Probably what's proposed will change," he said.

As much as water spill-out hitting his driveway, William Chisholm, 605 Jerusalem Road, is concerned about headlights shining in his window from the proposed subdivision's driveway. His placard displayed the closeness of his home relative to the new tenants' exit.

Hannigan's proposed solution for Chisholm's problem is to put in a low planted island between his home and the two entrance-exits connected to Jerusalem Road. He explained that an additional benefit to this modification is that if a car were to lose control while exiting the sloped driveway, it would hit the low-plated area rather than Chisholm's property.

There were no solutions presented to Harriette and Robert Hunter, whose poster-board presentation showed the proposed path of the site's road over an 1870 well they use for watering their garden. The Hunters do not own the property that the well sits on and it is not a drinking water well. Nonetheless, the Hunters were persistent in their arguments against interfering with the well, saying, "It is in our deed and we don't want a road going over it. The well has been in continuous use since it was built and we don't want it disturbed."

When one resident supported the Hunters, saying, "You can't build within 100 feet of a well," Humphreys responded, "Septic system. There is no septic system there."

"They may have some legal rights," interjected planning board chairman Al Moore. "It's not for the board to answer this," he continued. "They also shouldn't rely on the applicant's lawyer for information."

Last, the Massachusetts Rivers Protection Act, which was designed to protect the commonwealth's rivers, streams and adjacent lands, could stymie Corey's plans. "That's going to be an issue for the conservation commission to tackle with," said Moore. "We've been trying to stay out of other people's domains. The applicant, as far as I can tell, is taking the position that the Rivers Act doesn't apply to their property because they have some photographs of the site dry. I don't know if that means anything or a great deal because I also have a letter from the conservation commission taking the position that the Act does apply. If the conservation folks are correct or they are able to sustain their opinion, that would certainly throw the whole project into—well, it wouldn't be able to go forward.

"Any approval—and I'm not saying we are giving it—would be conditional upon receiving the proper permits and approval from the conservation commission, board of health and anyone else who had anything to do with them. I think they have a good fight ahead of them, if you want my honest opinion. I think the applicants may be getting a little discouraged with us, but we're a quasi-judicial board. We can only work with the rules that exits.. Besides conservation, there's also going to be a big fight with sewer. It seems everyone is just assuming that the sewer commission will lie down, play dead and let them just hook up. It's far from a done deal."

A continuation of the planning board hearing has been set for 8 p.m., Sept. 16.

DNA lab site for Cohasset Village falls through

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Kevin Ulmer had a great idea to make a small contribution to the village by opening a DNA research laboratory at 8 Stagecoach Lane on the second floor of the former Greenhouse Restaurant. He had investors helping with money. The sewer commissioners had already approved 330 gallons per day of temporary flow for the proposed lab until the Central Cohasset treatment plant expansion is completed. , The zoning board of appeals liked Ulmer's idea and granted him a variance to operate the lab in the downtown/village business zone. Laboratories are restricted to the industrial zone without a variance. Everything looked great, but then the owner of the building decided not to rent the space to Ulmer.

"The lease had not been put in place, and I was not able to reach the landlord until after I got the hard copy of the zoning board's decision," Ulmer said. "I assumed the place would be vacant and there would be no problem. There's certainly no line of people waiting to get in there. He [the landlord] wants to sell the property rather than lease it."

The zoning board listed Jerome Phifer as the head trustee of the trust which owns the property, The Colonial Way Trust. Phifer could not be reached for comment.

If Ulmer finds a new location for the lab which is not in an industrial zone, he will have to go before the zoning board again for permission to proceed.

Ulmer makes his living as a biotechnology entrepreneur and hoped to open the research lab to study "Genomics", information obtained from the study of human DNA, using seed money from investors. A few years ago, Ulmer formed a company called Pavonis Inc. for DNA research, but placed it on hold while he worked on other projects.

Previously, Ulmer said he would be forced to locate the lab in Scituate or Hingham if the zoning board rejected the village location. However, even though he cannot move his company downtown, Ulmer said he is not ready to abandon Cohasset.

Originally, Ulmer wanted to place a large research facility on the former Webb Norfolk Conveyor property, but could not find an investor willing to put up the money for a building. Ulmer said he will continue to look for a new location in town, possibly even on the Webb-Norfolk site.

"Stay tuned; we're still looking and we'll be back," Ulmer said.

Bus conversion still on the table

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Converting a school bus purchased last year to a handicap-accessible vehicle was reconsidered by school committee members, who weighed the economic pluses and minuses involved.

Superintendent Stephen Hart reported that the cost to install a lift would be between $3,300 to $3,500. The lift would also necessitate the elimination of four or six bus seats, depending on the age of the children.

School committee member Joe McElroy supported converting the bus, citing benefits such as the low cost of changing the bus over to handicap-access; that the smaller handicap-access bus could be used for other purposes that require less seating; and that wheelchair-bound students could travel with peers on school outings.

Another school committee member, Mark DeGiacomo, had reservations.

"I'd just like to know if this will create a problem two to three years down the line," he asked.

Chairman Rick Shea pointed out that varsity players already fill the seats to capacity and that fewer seats could pose a problem.

Hart recommended that business manager Guido Risi look into the cost of installing the lift with moveable seats that could fold out of the way but be drawn up again for extra seating.

FAR-RANGING IMPACT

While "whiplash" injuries are largely associated with car accidents, automobile collisions have the potential of inflicting a wide range of trauma on the musculoskeletal structure of the back and neck. Evidence of this can be seen in the increasing attention the automobile industry is placing on protecting drivers and passengers from side impacts. As a result, structural reinforcement of car doors and additional air bags on the sides of the passenger compartment are being offered for consumer protection. These additional restraints help illustrate that not all car crashes involve rear-end collisions, and not all injuries are of the "whiplash" variety. For that matter, chiropractors do not limit themselves to diagnosing and treating injuries arising from a single category of trauma.

Have you suffered injury? Are you suffering pain? Numbness? Tension? Dizziness? Joint pain? Burning? Stiffness? You don't have to suffer needlessly. Each day, millions of delighted patients choose chiropractic over drugs or surgery - as a common sense approach to better health. At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, we practice safe and gentle chiropractic care for the entire family. Every chiropractic adjustment is tailored to each patient. We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor where we utilize modern diagnostic procedures and specialized chiropractic techniques. Call 545-7388 to schedule an appointment. I offer presentations on such important topics as "Raising a Healthy Drug-Free Family," "Back Safety in the Workplace," "Stress Reduction," and "Meeting the Healthcare Crisis Head-on." Call to find out more.

P.S. Seatbelts remain the single most effective safety device in your car. Be sure to buckle up.

special reading niche in the library for story-time meetings; and a cafeteria.

Chicken nuggets or grilled frankfurters are on for the very first new Osgood cafeteria $1.78 menu. "We didn't have a cafeteria before," said Cantelmo. "The children used to have to eat their lunch at their classroom desks."

New faces among the faculty will be another novelty. "The new faculty members come from a variety of school backgrounds and different teaching experiences," said Cantelmo. "Obviously, they will bring us some new ideas and new strategies that they will have brought form their other school systems."

"Everyday Math" will be the mode for mathematical learning at the new Osgood. The program uses a hands-on approach to mathematics with more problem-solving, application and language involved.

Cantelmo is hoping to have five or six computers to each classroom somewhere down the line. The school is wired in such a way that the entire school can be networked together through the same computer system.

"Obviously, I think the whole event of moving into the new school is a combined effort of community and staff," said Cantelmo. "We've had tremendous support from the parents. We've had volunteers on the playground. This is a real community effort to get this school up and running. We appreciate all that it took to do that. The old school has been here 70 years—it's a big job to close that and start a new one."

Fourth graders leaving the old Osgood for Deer Hill this year will continue the tradition of marveling at the school's cafeteria and gymnasium, two luxuries their previous learning environment didn't provide. "That's always been unique to the fourth grade," laughed Deer Hill principal Paul Callahan. "Next year, when fourth graders come here from the new Osgood, they will be saying, 'Oh, it's a small gym!'"

The 500 back-packing middle school and high school students will return to some favorable changes, according to assistant principal Jack DeLorenzo A fresh coat of white paint and a blue-black patterned carpet in the new library-media center "really spruced the place up," he said.

Other changes include a rewiring of the entire building to allow all classrooms to have access to the Internet.

Students are also bound to be pleased with the $30,000 in fitness center equipment. Treadmills, bikes and stair climbers have been added to the free weights purchased last year.

Social studies teacher Anthony Rolfe, former Hingham coach, will be coaching football this year.

Retiring school superintendent Stephen Hart will not be on hand for the beginning of the new school year. But it is certainly on his mind. "It should be an exciting time with new superintendent coming in Sept. 1," he said. We can look forward to a good year with a lot of positive changes."

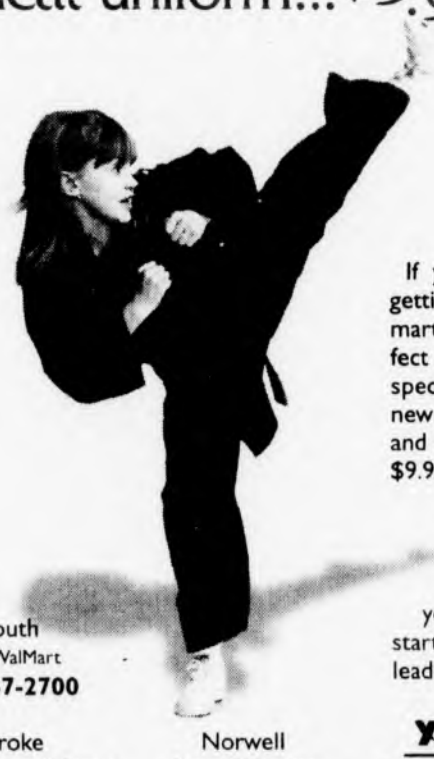
Planners okay dog runs

Last April, Christine and John Millar's proposed addition of dog runs to their 249 Cedar St. address was denied by the zoning board because of noise concerns and that the addition would have brought the kennel 10 feet closer to a lot line.



But earlier this month, the zoning board heard revised plans in which the Millars offered cut their request for 30 additional dog runs in half by dropping the east wing so the structure would not further encroach into the sideline setback. They also promised to install sound-proofing measures to mitigate the noise for the proposed 15 additional dog runs in the west wing at the site. The zoning board continued the hearing until Sept. 14 in order to get input from the planning board.

At the planning board meeting last week, member John O'Toole wanted to know how far from the nearest neighbor's house the kennel would sit. A 200-feet distance from the nearest lot line is required by town by-laws. But an August 1982 variance was granted to the kennel, allowing it to place the proposed kennel/office building only 40 feet from the easterly lot line. Heidi Condon, representing the Millars, told the board that the closest home, currently up for sale, is 160 feet away.

"It looks like an improvement dealing with the problems raised," said board member William Good about the revised plans. The planning board voted to recommend the proposal.

AROUND TOWN

THEATER CAMP

Thirteen-year old Calla Staszko of Cohasset has followed in the footsteps of such noted young actors as Robert Downey Jr., Jennifer Jason Leigh, Mary Stuart Masterson, Natalie Portman, Jon Cryer and Helen Slater by attending Stagedoor Manor this summer, a unique theater camp in the Catskills. In each of the summer's three sessions the youngsters aged 8 to 17 spend three weeks rehearsing 11 shows, which are then performed for the public either at one of Stagedoor's five theaters or at one of the nearby Catskills resorts like the Raleigh or The Concord. Calla appeared in "The Wiz." Located in Loch Sheldrake, N.Y., 1998 marks Stagedoor Manor's 23rd season.

Calla Staszko attended the Stagedoor Manor Theater Camp in the Catskills this summer.

This year campers have come from 32 different states and seven foreign countries.

All the youngsters will be watched closely by agents and managers who every year visit the camp to see if they can spot the stars of tomorrow. Maybe as a result of Calla's stay at Stagedoor, Calla will one day join the illustrious list of Stagedoor alumni who have made it in show business! We welcome a star in our midst, Calla, and look forward to seeing your name in lights

UPDATE ON BOATHOUSE

The Cohasset Maritime Institute will hold a rowing/boating meeting at the Lighthouse Keepers Residence Wednesday, Sept. 9, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. The agenda will include the following: an update on boathouse work, an update on CMI's "fleet," a few slides of working on the boathouse/rowing, information about CHS classes which utilize these resources, discussion of plans to reestablish adult rowing in Cohasset, information about getting involved in the organization, pleas for your financial support and personal involvement in CMI, more pleas for support (perhaps some shameless begging), and a sincere thank-you to long-time supporters and to newcomers.

Jack Buckley hopes to convene as many supporters of rowing as possible and thereby provide his fledgling organization with the shot of energy it needs. Your attendance (as well as that of a friend) is, therefore, vitally important to the success of the meeting. Jack urges that you do all you can to attend this meeting. If you are able to help out with providing some cookies or some goodies, call Jack at 383-8261.

Any contributions to CMI may be mailed to Jack Buckley at 272 North Main St., Cohasset. The Cohasset Maritime Institute promotes Maritime education and recreational rowing in Cohasset — home to America's first lifeboat, 1807!

DEAN'S LIST

The University of Vermont has released its list of Cohasset residents who have made the dean's list for the spring 1998 semester: Thomas A. Forbes, a freshman majoring in radiation therapy; Sarah E. Kirk, a senior majoring in sociology; and Kelley-Marie O'Donnell, a freshman with an undeclared major. Congrats to all of you (we wish Sarah every luck in the world as she begins her new ventures in the business world).

MIDDLEBURY GRAD

Alison W. Killilea, daughter of Ms. Susan Redgate Killilea of Cohasset and Mr. Thomas W. Killilea of Boston, received a bachelor of arts degree in American Civilization from Middlebury College at the 1998 commencement exercises Sunday, May 24, on the Vermont liberal arts college campus. Hats off to you, Alison!

DEGREE IN ECONOMICS

Sarah Atherton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terry J. Atherton of 34 Clay Spring Rd., graduated from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., May 17. Sarah received a bachelor's degree in economics. She is a graduate of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School. Here's to an illustrious future for you, Sarah!

GRAD WITH HONORS

Johanna Ruth Horn was awarded a bachelor of arts degree, magna cum laude, Saturday, May 23, at Bowdoin College during its 193rd commencement exercises. Johanna majored in anthropology and women's studies. She is a graduate of St. Paul's School in New Hampshire. Congrats to you, Johanna!

STUDYING ABROAD

Middlebury College junior Thomas Greco, son of Mr. Thomas R. Greco of Cohasset, took an opportunity offered by the college's study abroad program to spend the spring studying in Australia this past academic year. We'll bet he has lots of experiences to relate, we would love to hear more about your studies and adventures, Thomas!

NEW ARRIVAL

Kristin and Mark Norton announce the birth of their son, Alec Carlton Norton! Alec was born July 30 at South Shore Hospital at 9:01 p.m. and weighed in at 7 pounds 5 ounces. He was 19 inches long. Naturally Alec's sister, Charlotte, welcomed her brand new baby brother with open arms as do we all! Congratulations to your happy family!

WEDDINGS & ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. & Mrs. James Hoffman

Hoffman – Seay

Kristin Seay, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Seay of Eastham, was married to James Hoffman, son of Joseph and Joyce Hoffman of Cohasset. The ceremony, officiated by The Rev. Jim Robinson and Father Mulvehill, was held May 16 at the Chapel in the Pines in Eastham. A reception followed at the Captain Linnell House.

The bride is a graduate of Nauset Regional High School and attended Cape Cod Community College and the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She is employed by the Captain Linnell House as the manager's assistant, Kadee's Lobster and Clambar as the operations director, Cape Cod Community College as a culinary teacher in the Project Forward program and Cape Cod Photo and Art.

The groom is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Saint Michael's College, Vermont. He is employed by ADP as a sales district manager of the Cape Cod region.

The couple honeymooned in the Caribbean and now resides in Orleans.

Trip to George's Island

The Freewheeler's Group of the Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club is sponsoring a trip to George's Island Saturday, Aug. 29, leaving via ferry from Hewitt's Cove in Hingham at 10 a.m. A tour of Fort Warren, circa 1835, is available on George's Island as well as the beach and picnic area. Although some concessions are available, plan to bring a picnic lunch. The ferry pass includes the water taxi to other islands in the area. Return ferries from George's Island leave at 11 a.m., 2 and 5 p.m. Advanced reservations are necessary for the group rate of $7 per adult and $5 for children age 3 and over. There is no charge for children under 3.

Please call (781) 383-0225 to make reservations. This outing is open to all members of the Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club as well as non-members interested in the trip. Plan to meet at Hewitt's Cove Ferry Terminal, off Route 3A in Hingham, at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 29. Should the weather not cooperate, a rain date will be announced at a later time.

OPINION

Thanks, Mr. Hart

Superintendent Stephen Hart is stepping down after spending practically his entire career in education right here in Cohasset. For the past 12 years, he's been at the helm of the school department which under his tenure has had to deal with the aftermath of Prop. 2-1/2, the adjustment pains of education reform and the building of a new school which bitterly divided the town.

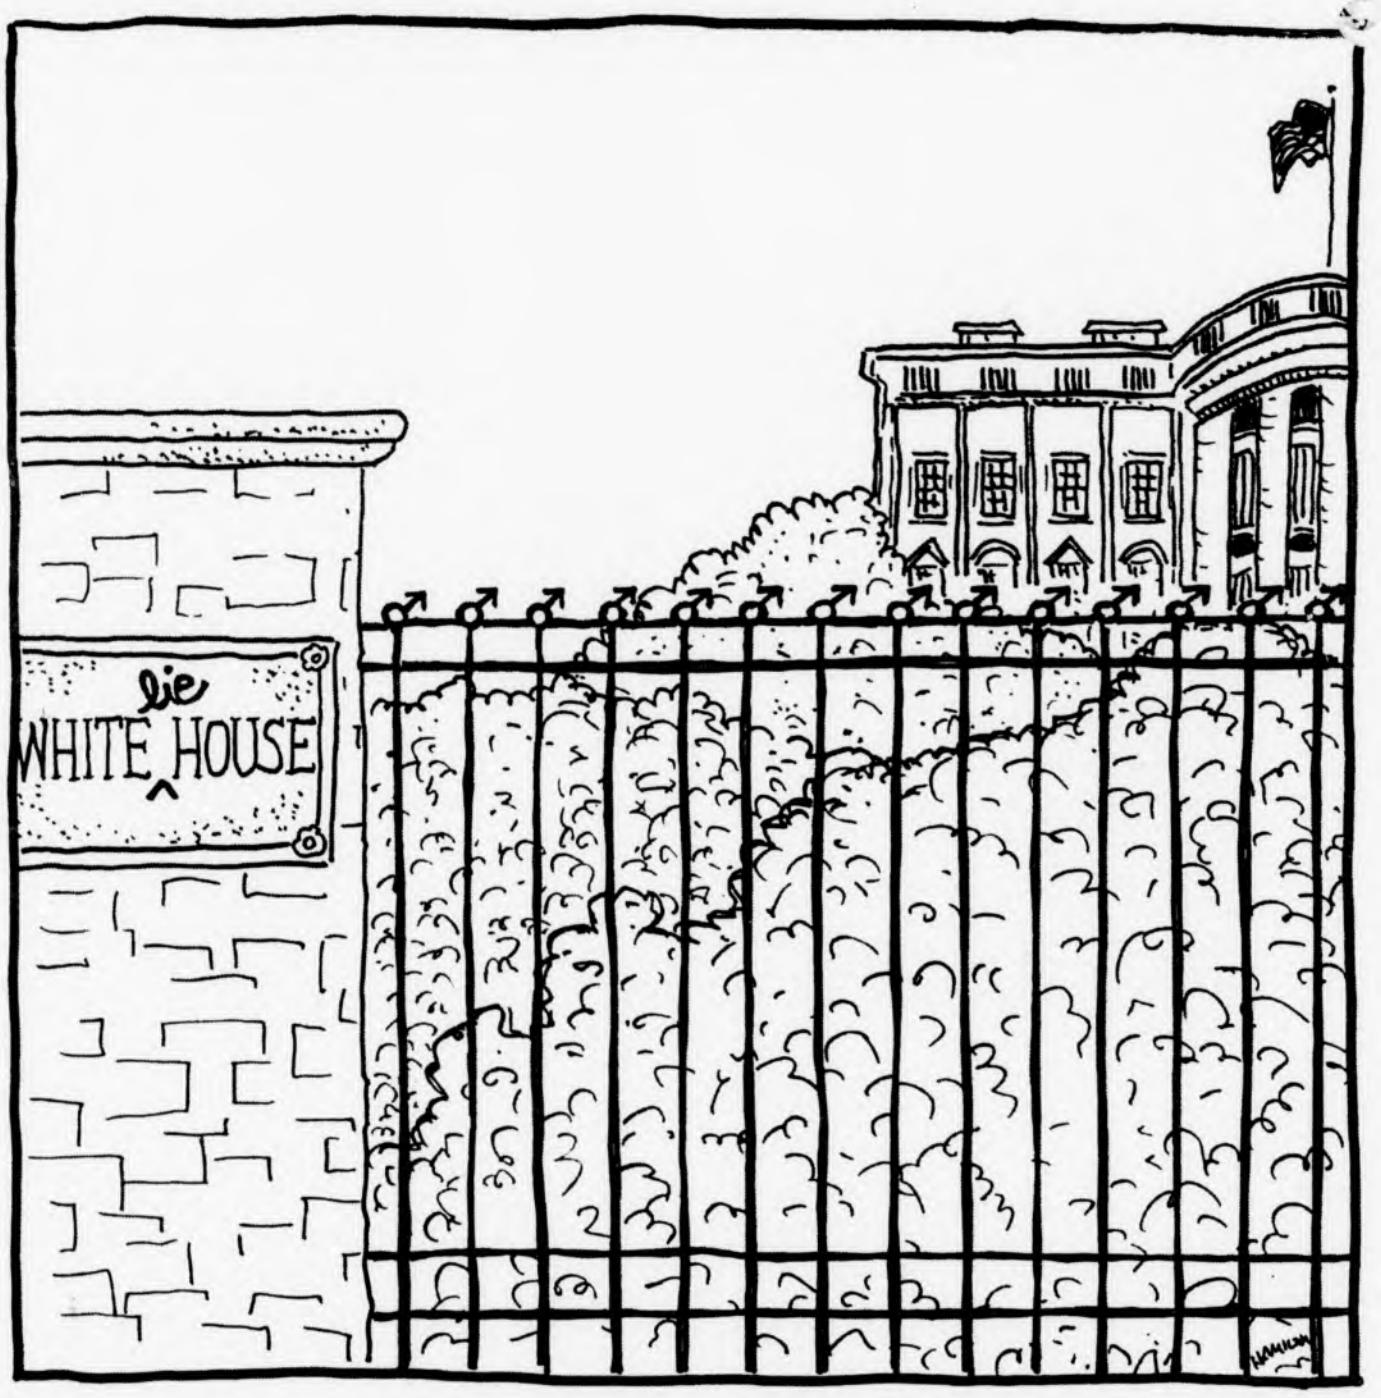
Here at the Mariner, we have appreciated Mr. Hart's openness and accessibility.

"He's shown a lot of grace under pressure."

RICK SHEA, SCHOOL COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

He always returned our phone calls. And when controversy hit the schools, Mr. Hart invited us to his office to explain and clarify the issue.

As school committee chairman Rick Shea says, "he's shown a lot of grace under pressure."



Over the years, he's provided stability to a small-town school system which continually turns out top-notch students.

The school committee decided the new Osgood School library will be named after Mr. Hart who shepherded the new K-3 school through to completion.

We'd like to add our applause to that decision. The Stephen Hart Library is a fitting tribute to a man whose dedicated his life to our children's education.

A reception for Mr. Hart is planned for 7 p.m., Sept. 17. Please call former school committee chairman Maureen Jerz, 383-6592 or former school committee member JoAnn Chittick, 383-9220, for details.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Offended by train commentary

TO THE EDITOR:

By now we on the South Shore all know that Nancy Buckley of Hingham is against the train. She has written countless letters-to-the-Editor to numerous publications over the past several years (with somewhat inordinate frequency, considering the redundancy of her message, in my opinion). This has been her privilege, and I have had no complaint with its free exercise.

I am offended, nevertheless, and must draw the line at her most recent ploy for publication which was to capitalize on the recent and tragic accidental death of a young girl from Abington to spout her stuff again. On the editorial pages of the 8/6 Cohasset Mariner and the 8/7 Boston Globe were the same letter from Nancy, headlining the tragic event as a lead-in for her same, tired, worn-out beefs about the railroad. I find it inexcusable that she would use such an unspeakably sad and personal loss as an attention-getter in so obvious a way.

And you fell for it! I would have thought that the editorial staff of each paper might be more discerning in its choice of what to print. There was simply nothing new or newsworthy in that formula "anti-Greenbush" letter except the reference to this regrettable loss of a young life.

But while we're on the subject, in addition to being insensitive in her determination to market her views, Nancy Buckley is just plain wrong. Her speculation that the accident was attributable to anything but human error goes beyond reason and is utterly unfounded. Her notion that four gates instead of two would have prevented a pedestrian from attempting an ill-fated crossing defies logic.

That she said these things, and that she used a tragedy as an excuse to say them, is indicative of how far she is willing to go to promote her own personal agenda against the train. Yet many of us consider it a perfectly civilized method of public transportation. Canton, Dover, Newton, Needham, Winchester, Wellesley, Weston and many other towns around Boston all enjoy commuter train service. Who is Nancy Buckley to say we shouldn't?

Local leaders endorse Cutler

Two dozen prominent area residents are endorsing Democratic State Rep. candidate Josh Cutler. These residents have formed a steering committee to assist Cutler in his bid to bring a new voice to Hingham, Hull and Cohasset on issues like education, health care reform and environmental protection.

Members include current and former selectmen, school committee and planning board members as well as local business and civic leaders in Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

These local leaders join campaign chair Chartis Langmaid Tebbets of Cohasset, and campaign manager Ann Marie Farell of Hingham as part of a growing campaign team. Cutler has also been endorsed by former Secretary of Health and Human Services Philip Johnston.

For more information about the Cutler campaign, call 741-9889 or visit the web site at www.jcutler.com.

Oil Contamination, A Cautionary Tale

In 1985, on a piece of prime waterfront property near Rockport, Maine, the owner noticed some oil in the cellar, probably from a leaking oil tank, and a funny taste in the water. Subsequent testing revealed that the well from which the water came was contaminated with toxic hydrocarbons Last November, the third well drilled on the property finally became contaminated. It took 13 years for the plume from the leaking oil tank to contaminate every location on the property from which clear water could be obtained. According to one knowledgeable resident, since the town is planning no central water supply, the property has become virtually worthless.

In Cohasset, The DEP is now taking action against two organizations in town which are believed to have released "oil/hazardous material". Clearing up these spills is enormously expensive because the affected soil must be removed and pyrolized, that is, burned until there is no trace of oil. During the cleanup of the Cedar Street landfill, a spill was noticed which came from a relatively small amount of of oil. The cost of remediation was about $25,000.

You may have read about the Hull resident coping with an oil spill in her property. It appears that cleanup from a leaking oil tank has been estimated at about $50,000.

On Sunday, August 23, The Boston Globe had an article on the impending scarcity of water worldwide. Preventing contamination of our water supply is vital.

Cohasset has spent millions to protect its water supply. It may be the best investment the town has ever made.

Avoiding Foodborne Illness

Studies have found that poor personal hygiene is a factor in about a third of all of the foodborne disease outbreaks in this country. Foodborne illness, which often shows itself as flu-like symptoms such as nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and fever, is generallycaused by bacteria.

Only a few types of disease causing bacteria (pathogens) cause millions of cases of foodborne illnesses each year. Most cases of foodborne illness can be prevented. Proper cooking and processing of food destroys bacteria.

You can help prevent the spread of foodborne illnesses by following these simple steps:

Cleanliness

Wash your hands with hot soapy water before handling food and after using the bathroom, changing diapers and handling pets.

Wash cutting boards, dishes, utensils and counter tops after preparing each food item and before you go on to the next food.

Use plastic or other non-porous cutting boards and run them through the dishwasher or wash in hot soapy water after use.

Use paper towels to clean up kitchen surfaces. If you use cloth towels, wash them often in the hot cycle of your washing machine.

Separate raw meat, poultry and seafood from other foods in your grocery shopping cart and in your refrigerator.

If possible, use a different cutting board for raw meat products.

Always wash hands, cutting boards, dishes and utensils with hot soapy water after they come in contact with raw meat, poultry and seafood.

Never place cooked food on a plate which previously held raw meat, poultry and seafood. Refrigerate promptly

Hot and Cold

When cooking, get foods hot enough long enough, and when refrigerating make sure the food is kept cold. Food safety experts agree that foods are properly cooked when they are heated for a long enough time and at a high enough temperature to kill the harmful bacteria that cause foodborne illness. Refrigerate foods quickly because cold temperatures keep harmful bacteria from growing and multiplying.

Cook roasts and steaks to at least 145°F. Whole poultry should be cooked to 180°F for doneness.

Cook ground beef to at least 160°F. Don't eat ground beef that is still pink inside. Cook eggs until the yolk and white are firm. Don't use recipes in which eggs remain raw or only partially cooked.

Fish should be opaque and flake easily with a fork.

Set your refrigerator no higher than 40°F and the freezer unit at 0°F Check these temperatures occasionally with an appliance thermometer.

SAFE urges Cohasset residents to attend Sept. 1 hearing on CHL landfill

SAFE today urged Cohasset residents to attend and to testify the board of health site assignment hearings on the Cohasset Heights Ltd. landfill (CHL), scheduled for 7 p.m. Sept. 1, 2 and 3 at the Cohasset town hall auditorium.

"Citizen participation in these hearings is essential," said SAFE vice-president John K. McNabb Jr., who is also a water commissioner. "The board of health will be considering whether to revoke CHL's site assignment, which is the only way to ensure that CHL will stay closed." The landfill closed July 2, when it reached its maximum permitted height of 190 feet above sea level.

"The massive citizen participation and the citizen testimony at the board of health's 1996 site assignment hearings helped persuade the board to reject CHL's proposed 27.5-acre Area 5 expansion," said McNabb. "However, even though that expansion has been defeated and the landfill is now closed, the 1,000,000 tons of waste in the landfill still remain a threat to Cohasset."

CHL has admitted to dumping more than 1,000 tons of waste illegally in Area IV-B, in violation of their site assignment, and more than 100,000 tons illegally on the landfill slopes, in violation of their state operating permit. "CHL must also be required by the board to remove this illegally dumped waste," said McNabb, "and should be required to pay a significant financial penalty to the town of Cohasset for these violations."

"At the hearings," said McNabb, "the board of health will also review the threat posed by CHL to air quality, wetlands and to our public drinking water supply, Lily Pond, which lies one mile downhill from CHL."

"The board of health," said McNabb, "should also require CHL, as part of its permanent closure, to install an active gas collection and treatment system to prevent landfill odors, to reconfigure landfill slopes and redirect stormwater to prevent any further damage to wetlands, and to prevent the drainage of any more contaminated landfill leachate toward Lily Pond."

Cutler campaign interns head back to school

Two college students spent the summer gaining first-hand experience at campaigning as interns on Democrat Josh Cutler's campaign for state representative. Kristina Yee, a junior at Brandeis University; and Ed Mills, a junior at Boston College; have been familiar faces around campaign headquarters.

Kristina Yee, a political science major, applied for her internship after checking out Cutler's platform on his campaign website. She has been invaluable working in the headquarters on projects ranging from identifying new voters, coordinating mailings, writing letters, phonebanking and working on the campaign data base. She'll be missed around the office, but vows, "I'll be back for primary day!"

Ed Mills, a Hull resident, is headed back to B.C. to pursue his political science degree after spending his summer as the Cutler campaign's visibility coordinator. While organizing signholders at various locations around the district has been a lot of work, it has been gratifying to see "the great response from people driving by," says Mills.

Both Yee and Mills are considering careers in public service.

The Cutler campaign will offer an internship to another student this fall in conjunction with the Student Democrat Club at Brandeis University. Students from other area colleges interested in politics and government are also welcome, and can learn more about the opportunities available by calling Ann Marie Farrell at (781) 741-9889 or stopping by campaign headquarters at 110 North St. in Hingham.

TV news — bad for you

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Did you hear the one about Newt Gingrich, Dan Quayle and Bill Clinton?

Well, they went to see "The Wizard of Oz," see, and . . .

Oh, the hell with it.

Are you as sick and tired of Bill Clinton jokes as I am? Are you as fed up as I am with reading about Bill Clinton's sex life, most of which would barely raise an eyebrow in the late show on Cinemax? You don't really want to listen to another Bill Clinton story, do you?

If the answer to those questions is "Yes, yes and no" then let's get on to something more constructive.

Like Mike Barnicle. Wanna hear more about him? No? Good.

I see by the papers that they (the omnipotent "they") have discovered the television program most unsuited for kids to watch and it's not "South Park," or "Bay Watch'" or even a Shannon Tweed flick on Showtime after midnight.

It's the local news at 6 o'clock.

Two psychologists told the American Psychological Association meeting in San Francisco last week that, in effect, they would rather have their youngsters watching Rambo or Arnie blow away the baddies than see Chet and Natalie or whoever is around to man the Channel 7 desk recount the realities of the day.

Any day now we'll be seeing the first newscast rated TV MA (mature audiences only), and it won't be just because Liz or Kim may be showing a bit more decolletage than the Legion of Decency thinks decent.

"What we call news has become so sensational," said Joanne Cantor of the University of Wisconsin. "It's all the news that's fit to terrify."

"Children need to have some reasonable amount of information about the dangers that are important to them," said Barbara Wilson of the University of California. "But what they are getting is exaggerated fears of things that are not necessarily the dangers they are going to encounter."

What she means is that a kid in these parts needs to know enough not to jump into the Quincy quarries but an earthquake, 8.4 on the Richter scale, the kind that devastates Chile and Turkey periodically, is unlikely to strike him in Scituate.

TV news has come a long way since our best source of over-the-air information was Neil T. Scanlan, the Shawmut Nightly News Teller.

Neil just told us about that accident on Route 3A. Now the tube brings us the demolished car in full color, including pools of real blood on the ground and people being carted away in body bags,

"One of the problems is that you cannot tell children it is not real," said Cantor.

When the Roadrunner tricks Wile E. Coyote into jumping off a cliff, the violence can be explained away as fantasy but how do you handle it when your child witnesses a row of bodies taken from a burning home that could have been his?

Cantor's recommendation is that no child under 8-years-old should be permitted to watch television news while it grinds out the violent crimes, fatal fires and bloody accidents.

And when they ask you something nonviolent, like, "What was that on Monica's dress?" you can let them watch the news at 6 once again.

Parents to help with unpacking

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Parents can get to know their child's teacher and classroom set-up this Aug. 29 by volunteering their services to help unpack school supplies sent from the old Osgood Elementary School to the new one. Teachers will direct their students' parents in setting out textbooks, chalk, posters and other items.

Burkhardt Brothers Movers began the two-day move from the old school at 8:30 a.m., Aug. 25.

"The teachers will tell parents what to unpack and where they want things," said Cassandra Rioux, Osgood School Council member. "Parents interested in volunteering should contact their child's room-mother from last year to get more information about where to report to help out and also where to go for baby-sitting." Newcomers can call Sarah Markert at 383-6124 or Rioux at 383-2856 for more information.

"We'll have high school kids, college kids and some college graduates looking after the children at Deer Hill from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Aug. 31 and Sept. 1 for $5 per day, per child," said Rioux. "Children are not allowed at the new school," she explained. "The contractors are still working there and it's very dangerous. We can't emphasize this enough—no matter how well behaved your children are, union workers won't be free to work with children on the premises. The liabilities are too great."

Videos, outside play activities, drawing, painting, games, and perhaps swimming if the weather is hot enough are all options on the baby-sitting agenda. "They may decide to organize more than that," said Rioux. "It's real low budget. We're not planning anything specific right

Pustizzi shoots for golf success on PGA Junior Tour

By David McKee
STAFF WRITER

When it comes to playing golf, there's no slowing down 15-year-old Joe Pustizzi. The Hingham High sophomore and son of PGA professional Joe Pustizzi Sr., recently suffered a cut on his left hand while working at his job at the Cohasset Golf Club. However, a couple stitches later and a bandage or two and Pustizzi was good to go.

Club by posting a score of three over. Currently he is in seventh place in the Junior PGA standings after 13 events.

"I need a good finish, maybe even a couple first's in the last three tournaments to move up a spot," Pustizzi said. "But I'm going to give it my best and see what happens."

During the junior tournaments Pustizzi regularly competes against 30 different players. And even

Joe Pustizzi

In fact, Pustizzi, who has won two events on the New England Junior PGA Tour this summer, will play in the final three tour events over the next two weeks. And if he can manage a couple solid finishes, he has an outside chance to finish among the top six and earn a spot in the New England Junior PGA championship finals.

"The cut's no big deal even though it was a little bloody," Pustizzi said. "I cut my hand in a ball washer but I'll be fine. I shot a round of golf on Tuesday and it was no problem."

Pustizzi, who stands 5' 7" and weighs 120 pounds, recently won first place at the junior event at the Leo Martin course in Weston after he shot a round of two under. He also captured first place at the event at the Bay Point Country though every player is trying to put up the best possible score, there is great sportsmanship among the golfers.

"We have a lot of fun together," Pustizzi said. "We're out there trying to beat each other but we don't get too carried away. Everyone really enjoys the game and it's great fun and great competition."

Pustizzi, who can drive the ball 245 yards off the tee, credits his short game with helping him shoot low numbers on the links.

"My wedge play and my putting are pretty solid right now," he said. "And that's probably the best part of my game. I'm also pretty good with my woods but I need to work on my iron play."

Oceanside Bike Fest pedals by on Sept. 19

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

Are you in the mood for a nice late-summer bike ride along some of the most scenic spots on the South Shore with a couple hundred of your nearest and dearest friends while raising funds for a great cause?

Has the National Multiple Sclerosis Society got an offer for you on Saturday, Sept. 19.

Spots are still open for the 10th annual MS Oceanside Bike Fest 98, a one-day bike tour that begins and ends at the Middle School in Duxbury and includes many other local communities such as Pembroke, Kingston, Scitauate, Cohasset and Marshfield in the 25-, 50- or 100-mile trecks.

The 100-mile ride will begin at 8 a.m. while the 50-mile journey sets off an hour later and the 25-mile tour of Duxbury will start at 11 a.m.

Registration begins one hour before each ride.

Money raised from the event will be added to the ongoing funding efforts to find a cure for multiple sclerosis, a disease which has more than 9,000 cases just in Massachusetts and New Hampshire alone according to Sharon Turner, the Director of Development for the Southeastern region of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

MS is a chronic, often disabling disease of the Central Nervous System. Symptoms can be as mild as numbness in the limbs or severe such as paralysis or loss of vision.

Most people are diagnosed with the disease between the ages of 20-year-old and 40-years-old but the unpredictable physical and emotional effects of MS can be life-long.

According to the MS Society, the progress, severity and specific symptoms of MS in any one person cannot yet be predicted , but advances in research and treatment are giving hope to those affected by the disease.

More than $100,000 was raised from the event last year. Expectations this year are that as much as $115,000 would be raised by the 500 to 600 bikers who will take part in the ride..

"We're a little bit behind last year's he was very young. And even though his father is a teaching professional, he never felt any pressure to play the game. In fact during the winter, Pustizzi competes for the indoor track team at Hingham High. In the spring, he plays for the HHS golf team.

"My dad let me do my own thing and never forced me into golf," Pustizzi said. "But when I showed some interest he would help me if I asked. And he is great to work with because he really knows the game."

He said his dad has been working on his ball position and stance of late.

"My dad keeps things pretty simple when he works with people," Pustizzi said. "He doesn't get overly technical and stresses the basics."

In addition to working with his father, Pustizzi also works on his game the PGA professionals at the Cohasset Golf Club (George Deitz and Rick Altham.)

Pustizzi has short term goals of helping the HHS golf team compete for a state championship over the next three years. His long term goal is to play golf in college.

"I play whenever I can," he said. "Golf is a such a fun sport and every day something new happens. And right now I just want to play as much as I can and keep having fun."

Pustizzi lives in Hingham with his parents Joe and Judy. He has an older sister Lacey and a younger sister Loni.

participation but we have every confidence that we will be able to make our goal," said Turner. "It's a event that people look forward to taking part in."

Of the money raised 40 percent will go to national research and program development while the other 60 percent will stay local in administrative and fundraising costs as well as programs such as support groups for people and families dealing with the disease and an upcoming "vacation week" for patients in Connecticut.

The start and finish for all the rides have always been held in Duxbury near the Middle School on St. George Street. According to Turner that's not just by coincidence.

"We've always started the race in Duxbury and I don't see where that's going to change. It's the perfect setting for something like the Oceanside Bike Fest. It's a great community that always comes out and supports the event," said Turner. "Duxbury, as well as the whole South Shore, is just so beautiful this time of the year. The weather always seems to be nice and the riders come back year after year because of the scenery along the route.

"We see a lot of the same people each year coming back to the ride just because of the tremendous scenery along the roadside."

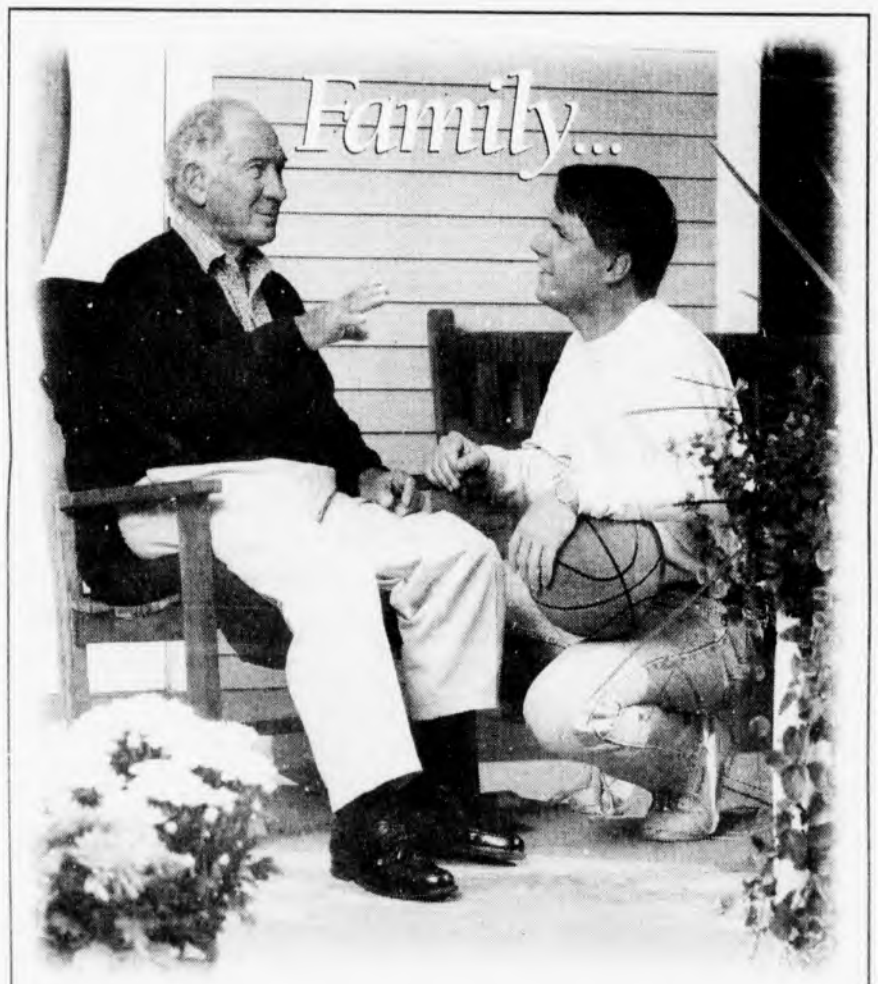
As with any bike outing, safety will be a top priority with the Bike Fest. All riders receive a safety instruction packet before the event and all riders will have to wear their helmets.

Turner added that the ride course will be well-marked and there will be refreshment stands as well as medical stations along the ride route.

Besides a luncheon at the end of the ride, all participants will also receive a T-shirt from the event.

"It's a great time for a great cause," said Turner. "We'd like to see everyone come out and support the riders."

Registration for the event is $25 and riders are asked to raise a minimum of $50 in donations, which can be brought the day of the race or mailed to the local MS Society office by Oct. 9.



The mailing address is the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, P.O. Box 329, Wareham, MA 02571-0329.

For more information you can also call the Oceanside Bike Fest Hotline at (508) 291-2169.

GO FISH!

They may look all sweet and innocent, but don't get into a fishing contest with these young anglers. Cohasset's Ryan Kucinski (far right) and friends Eric and Alex Stengrevics recently reeled in a 25 lb., 39-inch striper off "The Rhumba" in Provincetown. In true team effort, these avid fisherman passed the rod amongst themselves before winning the battle with the prized catch.

John L. "Jack" Williams Jr., 49, a resident of Cohasset for 22 years, formerly of Tennessee and Scituate, died suddenly Monday, Aug. 24, at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Mr. Williams was born in Pittsburg, Pa., son of Mary Belle (Strickler) and the late John L. Williams. He attended Etowah High School in Tennessee, U/Mass Boston and Wesleyan College.

He served in the Coast Guard for four years in Scituate.

He was employed as a mail carrier in Scituate for 24 years.

Mr. Williams was a lifelong member of the Disabled American Veterans and the American Legion Post, Cohasset.

He leaves his wife Vicky H. (Bates); and two sons, J. L. Williams and Garrett B. Williams, both of Cohasset.

A Memorial Service will be held Friday, Aug. 28, at 10 a.m. at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. The Rev. Gary Ritts will officiate. Interment will be private.

Visiting hours are Thursday, 2 to 4 and 6 to 9 p.m., at the McNamara/Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset.

LIBRARY CORNER

Party in the children's room

A "Make Your Own Sundae" party will be held Tuesday, Sept. 1, at 2 p.m. for all children who participated in this summer's "Unlock the Mystery" reading program. Come in and enjoy the end of summer with a bowl of your favorite ice cream and delicious toppings! All children who participated in the reading program should pick up their key rings and take them home at this time.

Piano lessons resume

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, resumes her lesson schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset. Her personalized instruction has attracted students who have had careers in music, while others play just for pleasure.

As part of each lesson she incorporates music theory, harmony, rhythm study and expression. She encourages her students to improvise and compose, and strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

For further information, call 383-1487.

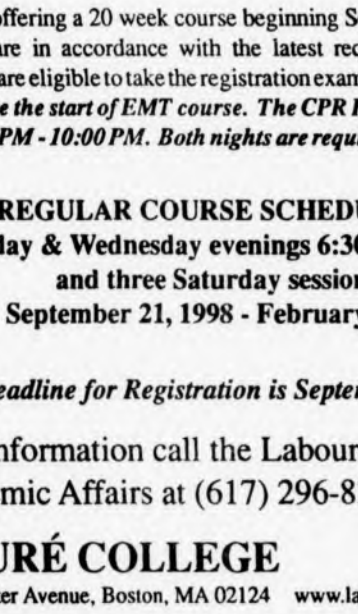
Wildlife center walkathon slated

A walkathon and festival to benefit the wildlife of New England are planned for Sunday, Sept. 27, in Bare Cove Park, Hingham. The event is being sponsored by the New England Wildlife Center to bring public awareness to the plight of wildlife and habitats that suffer at the hand of man's activities.

The walk and festival will include music, entertainment, live animal demonstrations and educational events about wildlife and habitats. The center is seeking walkers and sponsors for this worthy event.

For more information, call the center at (781) 749-1248.

Art classes at Aisling Gallery



The Aisling Gallery of Hingham is again offering as a part of its cultural program the well received BODHRAN CLASS this September starting Wednesday the 16th. Due to the overwhelming response in the past, the class is limited to 10 students. taught by Robert Condon, a member of the Comhaltas Ceoltori, Eireann, the classes are 8 weeks for both beginner and intermediate/advanced starting at 7 p.m. for the beginner and 8:15 p.m. for the advanced. It is recommended that those wishing to take the classes pre-register to ensure a place in the class. The last class sent 2 of its students to the international All Ireland Fleadh in Ballina County Mayo. For further information call the Aisling Gallery 229 Lincoln St., Hingham 02043, (781) 749-0555.

Request program to end Cohasset carillon series

Sally Slade Warner, carillonneur of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset, will play the final recital in the 74th Annual Summer Carillon Recital Series on the 57-bell Cohasset Carillon. The program will take place Sunday evening, Aug. 30, rain or shine. Featured will be requests submitted previously by listeners, as well as a selection of original carillon music, popular tunes, hymns and transcriptions of works for other musical media.

For more information, call the church office at (781) 383-1083 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

New books on tape

Suzanne Terry, children's librarian at Paul Pratt, announces a new selection of more than 20 unabridged recorded books. These books on tape range from the classics, "Little Women," by Louisa May Alcott, to "Matilda," by Roald Dahl. There are also great modern "soon to be" classics, "Julie of the Wolves," by Newbury medal winner Jean Craighead George; "Island of the Blue Dolphin," by Scott O'Dell; and "Ballard of Lucy Whipple," by award-winning author Karen Cushman. Other popular titles include Beverly Cleary's "Dear Mr. Henshaw." All the selections are great for vacation travel and appeal to a wide range of readers. They are available for one week circulation through the library.

POLICE BRIEFS

Drug trafficking arrest made

As a result of a year-long investigation, Cohasset police arrested a Scituate man and charged him with drug trafficking.

At 9:15 p.m., Aug. 7, police arrested Peter F. Crowell, 46, of 27 Allen St. in the Stop & Shop parking lot where he was pulled over following a traffic violation. Crowell was found with 11 bags (15.2 grams) of cocaine with a street value of about $1,500, Det. Gregory Lennon said.

Police charged Crowell with trafficking in cocaine, possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, possession of cocaine, and failure to stay within marked lanes.

Crowell's 1995 Chevy pick-up was seized under drug forfeiture laws because it was allegedly used as a conveyance to facilitate the distribution of cocaine, Lennon said.

Under the law, the sales price of the vehicle will be split between the district attorney's office and Cohasset police.

If convicted, Crowell faces a minimum three-year prison sentence, said Lennon who declined to provide details of the investigation at this time.

Hull man charged for drugs possession

As the result of a simple traffic stop, police arrested John E. Davis, 45, of Hull and charged him with illegal possession of cocaine and hashish.

Det. Gregory Lennon said Davis was pulled over on King Street for failure to stay within marked lanes at 10:20 p.m., Friday Aug. 21. Lennon said he shined his flash light into the vehicle and saw the drugs. Davis was arraigned on the charges Aug. 24.

Youths arrested for alcohol violation

Police arrested two Cohasset youths early Friday morning following a report of a disturbance at the Little League field off North Main Street.

Charged with minor transporting alcohol are Adam Sheerin, 18, 391 Atlantic Ave., and Derek Bugley, 17, 16 Fernway.

Shortly after midnight, a call came into headquarters about a disturbance at the Little League field. Police responded to the scene and found the youths with beer present and made the arrests. In the dugout police found an array of empty beer bottles and three full bottles of Sam Adams Summer Ale.

The youths were arraigned on the charge Friday with a pre-trial hearing set for Oct. 27.

BUSINESS NOTES

BIG SHOES TO FILL

Daniel Sugrve, 2, stands by the Sebago boat shoe on display last week at the Shoe Market in Cohasset Plaza.

Siro's renovations are underway

Cohasset's Kristie Henriksen, owner of Siro's restaurant in Hingham, said the establishment is scheduled to open in late September.

According to Henriksen, the 13,000 square-foot building that holds 267 seats will be a premier place for South Shore diners. A three-day celebration is planned for the grand opening. Scheduled to appear will be local and regional dignitaries who are patrons of Siro's in Marina Bay in Quincy including U.S. Rep. William Delahunt.

Henriksen said that Barbara Crispri of Marshfield will be general manager of Siro's in Hingham and Susan Connors of Canton will be the chef.

Handling the interior design and transformation of the former Whiton House is director Celeste Cooper of Repertoire. The firm has offices in Boston and New York. Henriksen's husband, Tom Fallon, is overseeing the renovations at the restaurant.

Cohasset Chamber Scholarship Golf Tournament

The Second Annual Scholarship Golf Tournament for deserving Cohasset High School students will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 15, at Poquoy Brook Golf Course in Lakeville.

The rates are as follows:

- Individual Golf with lunch $95 and $360 per foursome.
- Golf only is $68 per person.
- Hole sponsorship is $75; and Hole co-sponsorship is $50.

In addition there will be a Hole-In-One Prize of a $10,000 Certificate of Deposit, two Longest Drive Holes, one Closest to the Pin Contest, as well as many other giveaway donations form our membership.

Please invite your friends, business associates and co-workers. For further information call the Cohasset Chamber at (781) 383-1010.

Flames destroy $1.5 million Atlantic Avenue home

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Some flowers still bloom in the hanging baskets along the sweeping verandah of the old Victorian mansion on Atlantic Avenue.

Remarkably they survived an inferno that claimed the second and third stories of the more than 6,000 square-foot, $1.5 million, shingle-style home built on its ledge perch more than 100 years ago during the height of Cohasset's "summer colony" era.

Fifty firefighters from five towns battled the three-alarm blaze for six hours from about 11:15 p.m. last Thursday into the early hours of Friday morning.

For a Cohasset call firefighter at his first fire, it's a night he will never forget.

"I've played sports all my life and I've never done anything so exhausting," said Rich Bonanno who completed the firefighter training course last month. "I have a whole new respect for what firefighters do for a living."

What appeared to be a little smoke quickly accelerated into dangerous flames and a choking, thick haze.

"When we first went through the living room, we were being careful not to track anything," said Bonnano who was one of the first on the scene. "Then all of a sudden everything just went pouf."

"I have a whole new respect for what firefighters do for a living."

— Rich Bonanno, call firefighter

It all started with a candle placed on a wicker hassock on the first-floor porch, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

"For some reason the candle came in contact with the combustible cushion," he said.

Chief Lincoln explained that the "balloon frame" structure — a form of construction developed during the 1800s which marked the beginning of sprawling houses — meant there were open channels right from the basement to the attic for the fire to travel.

"Once it gains entrance, it's difficult to stop it," he said. The matched tongue and groove wooden wainscoting on the porch also made it difficult to pull down the ceiling.

There were four teenagers at home — including the owners' 17-year-old son Will MacPherson — who were in another part of the house but investigated when the smoke alarm went off.

At 11:11 p.m., the 9-1-1 call came into the dispatch center reporting a fire at 124 Atlantic Ave. The youths tried to extinguish the fire with bottled water and a garden hose. They called back saying they were trying to put the fire out and might have it out, Lincoln said.

THIS WEEK IN COHASSET

School committee story clarification

A story in last week's Cohasset Mariner about school bus accessibility should have said school committee member Mark DeGiacomo supports the proposal to convert a school bus.

He backs spending the $3,300-$3,500 now to install a wheel-chair lift because the parts may not be available in the future.

The article incorrectly said DeGiacomo had reservations about converting a bus.

Bradley's stance on surplus corrected

A story in last week's Cohasset Mariner incorrectly reported State Representative candidate Garrett Bradley's position on the $1.2 billion state budget surplus

The article should have said Bradley wants to cap the surplus at $750 million, sending the rest back to cities and towns in block grants, based on population. The story mistakenly said Bradley called for sending $750 million back to cities and towns.

Conservation commission appointments

Selectmen appointed Valerie J. Semensi, 756 Jerusalem Road, to the conservation commission to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of John Bryant.

They also reappointed Veneta Roebuck and Ed Graham to the commission.

Selectmen are still seeking two volunteers to serve as associate members of the conservation commission. Interested citizens should call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105.

Credit cards in Cohasset's future

Selectman Tom Callahan thinks it might be worth investigating having the Town of Cohasset sponsor a credit card.

With one percent of the money coming back to the town, he said East Orange, New Jersey makes about $40,000 a year on its credit card Selectman Merle Brown said the Town of Hanover has its own credit card. Town Manager Mark Haddad said he would look into the matter.

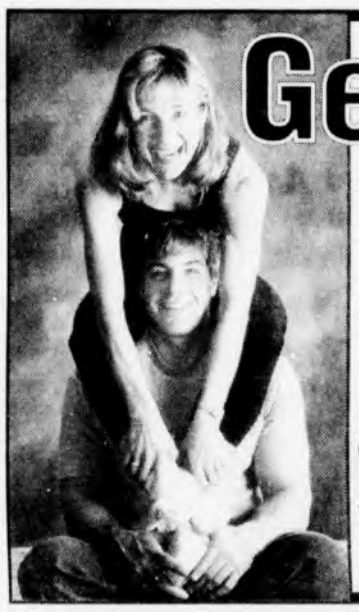
Lottery at the RTF

Selectman Merle Brown said the RTF will sponsor a recycling lottery on a date to be announced. In the lottery, every 10th car would be stopped at the front gate and if it had recycling materials, the driver would get a free compost bin or $10 in cash.

Brown said to watch the newspapers for more details.

Donation to youth resources



Town Manager Mark Haddad told selectmen this week that producers of the recent airline commercial filmed on the town common have donated $2,000 to the youth resources fund which could be used for the new teen center.

Change of manager

Selectmen approved a change of manager at Cohasset Plaza Liquors. Robert Pike, who has served as assistant manager for six years, will take over the top spot.

Higher parking fines possible

Selectmen are considering increasing parking fines from $15 to $25 in the beach areas of town. But first they want to hear what the police chief recommends. Selectman Diane Sullivan thinks parking tickets across town should carry the same fine so there isn't a two-tiered system. Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said the Sandy Beach parking lot has the biggest problem and it may not be necessary to increase fines in other areas.

Quonset huts hit the dust

World War II buildings razed

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

The "ugliest buildings in Cohasset" will soon be history although they have historical significance.

The Quonset huts at 430 S. Main St., which date back to the end of World War II, once housed the D.A. Kennedy Company which built radar equipment.

The domed, prefabricated metal structures — a familiar site on Navy bases in the Pacific — were offshoots of the British Nissen huts. The Navy used the huts for everything from barracks to warehouses.

"It's called the ugliest building in town and it's always been called that because it is."
—Corinne Cahill, abutter

But despite their unique architecture and ties to Cohasset's past, abutter Corinne Cahill is glad to see the huts razed.

"It's called the ugliest building in town and it's always been called that because it is," Cahill said.

The huts will be replaced by five luxury condominiums being developed by builder John Murphy of Hingham.

"They have a checkered past," laughed Murphy about the huts history.

In fact, they've been the object of neighborhood ire as far back as 1962.

"That's when the neighbors organized and began agitating with the town to deny the nonconforming use of this building," Cahill said.

The historic parcel was once the site of the old barn and ice house originally owned by Mordecai Lincoln, one of the first Scituate settlers whose property straddled the town line along the Gulf River.

When the radar antenna factory was in its heyday it operated 24 hours a day, Cahill said, continuing after the war ended.

Gil Wilder of North Scituate was one of the founders of the D.A. Kennedy Company.

The fledgling company initially rented the Story Grain Mill at the site which was a warehouse for hay and feed. Demand for metal antennas grew rapidly.

"We needed space quickly and the Quonset huts were available," Wilder recalled.

The first of the huts went up in 1946, he said, and was followed by two more over the next two years.

Unfortunately, the lightweight steel structures could not be easily disassembled and moved.

So as the company (which once employed 800 workers) expanded to Scituate Hill and the Hingham Shipyard, the huts remained.

Eventually the South Main Street site was sold to the Quincy Shipyard.

"They needed space for Naval architects," Cahill said. Then the shipyard closed and the huts houses a succession of businesses ranging from a chemical company to a garbage hauling place.

About two years ago a local resident proposed converting the site into condominiums, a

Buckley builds confidence, competence through CMI

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Jack Buckley is hoping that the Sept. 9 Cohasset Maritime Institute meeting at the Lightkeeper's Residence will raise awareness, membership and funding for his group.

Since 1994, when Buckley first entered into a $1 leasing agreement with the town to rent a dilapidated structure on the Hagerty property for his institute, about 100 volunteers have helped to fix up the future boathouse.

"We've had about 100 people involved in this," said Buckley. "Funny, but if everyone had showed up all at once, we might have been finished in a day or two!"

The building now has a Nantucket-style trim on its exterior and scaffolding still adorns at least one wall of the boathouse where a new door is needed.

CMI maintains ties to the high school through courses taught there such as maritime history and environmental science.

"The group was started with the goal of keeping alive the historic lifeboat rowing in Cohasset."
–Jack Buckley, CMI director

"The group was started with the goal of keeping alive the historic lifeboat rowing in Cohasset," explained Buckley. "Boat craftsmanship, maintenance, restoration, and building are skills learned through CMI, as well as just having a connection to human-powered vessels."

Buckley would like to promote the historical tie that Cohasset has to lifeboats. The town is, after all, home to American's first lifeboat in 1807.

One way of promoting that tie has been through the restoration in June 1991 of the institute's first lifeboat, the John Warren II, which is jointly owned by the Hull Lifesaving Museum.

The high school teacher is hoping that CMI is "institutionally healthy enough" when 2007 rolls around. Buckley would then like to host a bicentennial in honor of the year the first American lifeboat was launched here.

Perhaps the most rewarding aspect of Buckley's work is that he can see the raised confidence of those involved

Bedrock fractures extend from landfill, official says

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Water Commissioner John K. McNabb Jr. says he has been listening to arguments for years from the Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) landfill that the facility poses no threat to the town's drinking water supply. However, a water commission consultant has uncovered evidence of two water-bearing, bedrock fractures extending from CHL to Brass Kettle Brook, the main tributary to Lily Pond. McNabb said the fractures are significant because it is possible that leachate from the landfill could travel in water within the fractures into Brass Kettle Brook.

"The point is, we are only showing fractures that are water-bearing, but there is no proof of what's in the fractures or if there is leachate in there," McNabb said. "However, this takes away CHL's assertion that there is no threat to Lily Pond since this is a water-bearing fracture. We certainly can claim that there is a potential threat."

The water commission has hired Norfolk Environmental to examine CHL's possible impacts on the Lily Pond watershed and to examine previous reports prepared by consultants for the health board. Norfolk environmental will present its findings at the health board's site assignment hearings for the landfill, currently delayed from Sept. 1 until Oct. 1 (see sidebar).

McNabb said the water commission has received a verbal report from a geophysicist detailing two large fractures about 100-feet apart in the bedrock which carry water from the landfill and west to Brass Kettle Brook. Lily Pond lies downhill from the brook and CHL. The delayed site assignment hearing gives the water commission's consultant more time to review the information on the fracture and prepare a final report.

According to McNabb, a water-bearing fracture is troubling because it could carry leachate in a concentrated form directly into Brass Kettle Brook, which feeds into Lily Pond. Leachate that drains from the landfill into surface water would be diluted and reduced because it would be spread out over such a wide area.

"I was worried about the concentration of leachate over time and the long-term accumulation," McNabb said. "Now we have to look and see if anything undiluted is getting into Lily Pond."

A series of monitoring wells is set-up in a wide perimeter around CHL to see if any environmentally hazardous ma-

Charter group may rent old Osgood school

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Even though the old Osgood Elementary School has been cleared out for less than a week, new students may soon be filling some of its halls.

Town manager Mark Haddad received a request from Timothy Anderson, director of the South Shore Charter School in Hull, to rent out a portion of the empty elementary school's classrooms for 25 students in grades 11 and 12.

The alternative school students are being temporarily displaced by required ADA (Americans with Disabilities Act) renovations, including the installation of a new elevator, at the charter school this fall.

School improvements are expected to take four to six months, during which the charter school would like to lease the Osgood school.

Problems began for the charter school when its architectural board advised officials that they could not use the building unless an elevator was installed. An article in a local paper brought quick relief to Anderson, founder of the charter school.

The alternative school students are being temporarily displaced by required ADA (Americans with Disabilities Act) renovations, including the installation of a new elevator, at the charter school this fall.

"We had a lot of different cultural organizations calling — a Lebanese group in Quincy, churches and even people offering their own homes for our students," said Anderson. "Then we received a call from Pat Plante, Osgood Reuse Committee who then put me in touch with chairman Patience Towle of the Library Trustees."

"By the time Tim called a library trustee member had already discussed it with me and we'd talked to the town manager about it," said Towle.

"It just meant so much to us, having people call up and ask if we needed space," Anderson said, "It meant even more to have official town bodies of Cohasset calling us up. It's kind of like 'we've arrived.' We're not just out there alone."

Selectman Tom Callahan, whose children attend the innovative school, received a call from Anderson on the matter. According to Callahan, Anderson had discussed the situation with library trustees who had suggested the rental idea to him.

Haddad, who spoke with school committee members Joe McElroy and Rick Shea, as well as town counsel, said that "no one had a problem with this so long as the charter school is responsible for security, utility costs and a $1,200 rent based on a per-month cost."

"We're not spending a dollar on this," he said. "Also, we can ask them to leave if for some reason if we have to."

Callahan suggested that no loitering be a proviso in the agreement.

"Well, I'm all for helping out our neighbor," said selectman Diane Sullivan. "But I think we need to check about handicap access at the school, since we're the landlord."

"We won't do anything that will cause us a problem," assured Haddad.

Town manager envisions expanded DPW

Advocates eliminating water, sewer boards

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

If Tuesday night is a gauge, then March's annual town meeting won't be dull.

At that time, selectmen plan to ask voters to support consolidating the sewer and water departments under the umbrella of the Department of Public Works.

But what's at issue and deeply divides the board, is the proposal to eliminate elected town boards governing those town departments in the process.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said the townspeople took the first step toward a professionally run government through the Town Manager Act enacted in 1997. She said the consolidation of departments and elimination of the elected boards is a natural outgrowth of that.

But Selectman Diane Sullivan said keeping elected boards provides the opportunity for diverse viewpoints.

Selectmen discussed the draft DPW consolidation report prepared by Town Manager Mark Haddad at their meeting Tuesday. For the most part, selectmen agreed with the report with the exception of the recommendation to do away with the elected water and sewer commissions.

Haddad proposes adding two divisions under the DPW — an engineering division and a public buildings division. Hiring a town engineer would initially cost about $50,000 but that position would be combined with that of the superintendent of the DPW once Harold Litchfield, the current superintendent, retires. He also plans adding 1-1/2 maintenance positions for an additional $35,000. He said the process of wider DPW oversight began in 1995 when the town combined the highway department and the cemetery and tree and park departments into a new DPW.

Haddad said appointed water and sewer commissions could continue to serve in an advisory capacity. But with control of their departments rolled into the DPW — there would be more coordination. He said having the departments operated by elected officials leads to mandates and leads to conflicts.

"We should provide the best service for the least cost and this was driven by the maintenance of our buildings."
—Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris

McMorris said eliminating elected boards did not mean their members aren't doing a good job. She said residents should be able to go to one person who has responsibility over a problem.

"This does not reflect on the job they're doing," she said. "It's a more efficient way to provide services to the community."

But Sullivan said elected boards are critical to providing checks and balances.

"I can't see taking every decision the voter has and putting it in the town manager's hands. That brings one viewpoint," she said. (The DPW falls under the jurisdiction of the town manager).

She said the proposal was a "way to go around boards they disagreed with."

But McMorris accused Sullivan of personalizing the issue.

"We should provide the best service for the least cost and this was driven by the maintenance of our buildings," she said.

The town recently completed a facilities audit which found the town needs to spend $15 million on its buildings over the next decade.

Selectman Tom Callahan said policy making boards such as selectmen and the school committee should be elected but others need not be.

Selectmen voted 3-1 with Sullivan opposed to send the report to the Government Structure Committee which will hold hearings on the proposal. They hope to have an warrant article for the consolidation proposal ready for the annual town meeting. Selectman Nan Roth was absent from Tuesday's meeting.

Cohasset Community blood drive Sept. 9

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, Sept. 9. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Unitarian Parish House at 23 North Main St. from 2 to 7 p.m. As in the past, baby-sitting will be provided from 3 to 6 p.m. The Red Cross depends on regular donations to meet the ongoing need for blood and blood by-products.

The Red Cross always counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset, so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and especially needed. To register and to make an appointment for donating at a specific time, or if you have any questions, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 383-1290.

plan abutters embraced even though it took two long years to obtain permit approvals.

"It's exciting, it really is," Cahill said about the demolition which is underway. "People sit on their white lawn chairs watching the show! It's fascinating."

The only regrets Wilder has is that the huts stayed up so long.

"We should have taken them down when we left the location," he said. "As time past, they were an eyesore. I've always regretted not going through with taking them down."

Town historian David Wadsworth said Quonset huts were popular because "they could be put together in a hurry."

But despite an interesting local history, the local huts can't compare with Cohasset's other historical structures.

"They are no great loss for the town," Wadsworth said.

Bedrock fractures at landfill found

terials are migrating from the landfill in storm water run-off, or by other methods. McNabb said a well at Boulder Lane, well #8, has consistently shown the presence of acetone, a volatile organic compound.

A 1997 report by health board consultant CDM stated the company's belief that the acetone originated at the landfill. CDM recommended the placing two additional monitoring wells south of Boulder Lane to get a better idea of where the acetone was coming from. However, CHL's consultants refuted CDM's assertion, claiming the acetone came from naturally occurring processes or from lab error. McNabb scoffed at CHL's claims.

"Acetone that occurs naturally in the middle of the woods?," he asked. "I don't think so."

McNabb said Norfolk Environmental's testimony would help keep the landfill closed and allow the town to prepare a thorough set of closure conditions.

"The fractures present a more serious method of transporting [contaminants] to Lily Pond not previously identified and must be included in the order of conditions," McNabb said. "For example, there should be at least two more monitoring wells and a more definitive leachate management program for the landfill. We have to look at some system to bar run-off and leachate, collect the material and drain it away."

Effective run-off management is exacerbated by the presence of about 100,000 tons of excess material on the slopes of the landfill. Overlay drawings show that CHL has placed massive amounts of materials on the landfill slopes in violation of its state permit. The slope angles are precalculated to prevent excess amounts of material from sliding off the sides and into neighboring areas.

CHL site assignment hearings postponed

The board of health has approved a request by CHL attorney Anton Moehrke to delay site assignment hearings from Sept. 1 until Oct. 1. According to Water Commissioner John K. McNabb Jr., Moehrke asked for the delay to review the town's proposal for the closure of the facility.

McNabb, who is also the vice president of the anti-landfill group Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE), has spearheaded the effort to hold site assignment hearings and close down the landfill forever. The site assignment is the chief document that allows CHL to operate a landfill on the site. McNabb said the site assignment is considered part of the property, and would transfer to a new owner if the property were sold.

The site assignment is one of many official proceedings between the town and CHL. On Aug. 17, Norfolk Superior Court Judge Peter Kilborn indicated how he may decide on two appeals by CHL of ZBA decisions. The first case involves a decision by the ZBA upholding the building inspector's order to remove 1,000 tons of illegal waste from Area IV-B. McNabb said Kilborn indicated he may uphold that order.

The other case involves a ZBA decision that CHL's special permit was invalid. Kilborn was considering a legal claim by CHL that the town had the chance to raise that issue previously, but failed to do so. The judge added that he needed to review the case law before making a decision.

Town counsel gets a raise

Selectmen voted to reappoint the Boston law firm Deutsch Williams as town counsel and to increase the rate from $120 to $140 an hour.

Nevertheless, some selectmen were not happy about the rate hike.

"We shouldn't sit here like a lamb and say '$140, that's fine,'" Selectman Tom Callahan said.

They asked Town Manager Mark Haddad to obtain a status report on all the current cases together with a budget. They also want a list of what's covered under the $4,000 per month retainer.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said the rate hike was driven by the cost of hiring associates. She backed the hike. The other selectmen said they would rely on her expertise on the matter.

Special Town Meeting set

Selectmen set the Special Town Meeting for 7 p.m., Oct. 26. Citizens petition articles, which require100 signatures, must be received at the selectmen's office by 4:30 p.m., Sept. 8.

Policy to toughen town's liquor license rules falters

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The town won't be able to enforce a policy officials had hoped to put in place by January which would have mandated all liquor license holders and their employees attend a TIPS or any other certified alcohol training program.

Town manager Mark Haddad told selectmen at Tuesday night's board meeting that town counsel has since checked with the Massachusetts Alcohol Beverages Control Commission attorney and was informed that towns cannot pass regulations that are more stringent than state law.

An Aug. 13 board of selectmen's meeting set the already defunct new policy as a result of a public hearing concerning a local convenience store's sale of alcohol to a minor on June 20.

At that time, Police Chief Brian Noonan had called on Cohasset's drug and alcohol committee to develop a program that would prevent minors from purchasing alcohol from local merchants.

TIPS, the training program recommended by selectmen, holds role-playing courses that go over alcohol-related scenarios that servers and sellers might run into in their line or work. Certification would have been required every three years, unless a lifetime certification was earned.

Selectmen are now looking into the possibility of re-wording licenses themselves so that alcohol-training certification would become a part of the license agreement.

Parking at swim center clarified

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The most current plans to remedy the swim center and Little League field parking situation include creating lined, hot-topped parking for Little League cars and leaving a bike and walking path up to the swim center open.

Grass behind the swim center will be trimmed on the higher side to deter parking," explained selectman Merle Brown at Tuesday night's meeting, although the area is available for Little League overflow parking.

The drop off behind the swim center will include a small paved area to facilitate handicap-access.

Increased Little League parking will be available along the side of the field near Hugh Morgan's concession stand where the area will be hot-topped and lined.

But Selectman Tom Callahan said more cars will park along North Main if parking behind the batting cages is eliminated as planned.

Plans to reloam and reseed the area in front of the swim center and Little League field, referred to as a "dust bowl" by many, are still on.

The area's parking problems have been ongoing, with many expressing concern about the difficulty in backing out of the swim center's fenced area, especially when Little League games were on. There is a large paved parking lot for the swim center off Sohier Street which is not used to capacity. Brown said the steps leading up to the center seem to deter use of that parking lot.

Though the path leading up to the swim center from North Main Street was clearly marked for handicap-access and emergency vehicles only, the lot was often filled with staff and visitors' vehicles.

The narrow walk and bike path would still allow access to the center, but not of the four-wheeled kind.

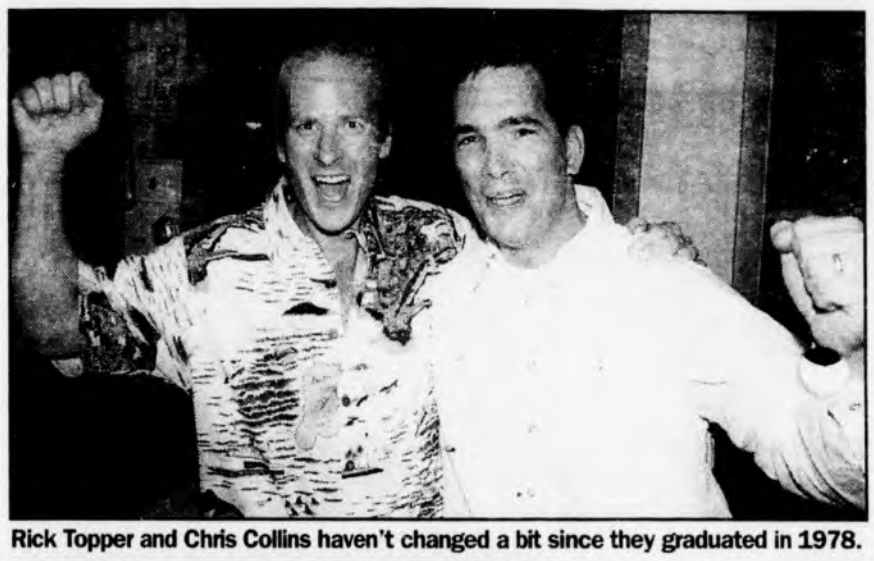
OFF TO EDUCATION WEEK



Polly Doggett is combining visiting her son, Dana, and his family in Orem, Utah, while attending BYU Education Week in nearby Provo. Each year at this time close to 1,000 classes on a wide variety of subjects is offered at the college for a very nominal fee. Dana plans to take a week's vacation so that he may attend, too, and his son Tommy, 16, is back from camp in New Hampshire just in time to sign up for the classes of his choice. Grampa Doggett has volunteered his services as an at-home baby-sitter for Conner, age 2, and Alex, age 5. Hopefully, Polly will fill us in on her educational/fun doings upon her return!

THE '49ERS

In 1949, a young couple got married and moved to 49 Cushing Rd. in Cohasset. Their phone number contained the number 49, and they named their boat The 49ers. That was 49 years ago. So a surprise celebration was held in honor of Tom and J.J. Healy's 49 years together. The party was given by their children, Maureen Coburn of St. John, U.S.V.I., Susan Benterou of Pleasanton, Calif., Kathy O'Donnell of Kippen, Scotland, and Bob Healy of Cohasset. Two of their sons-in-law, Jim Benterou and Dom O'Donnell, were also in attendance, as well as all of their grandchildren, Francis, Jason, Bryan, Dominic, Evan and Samantha. Forty-nine or so friends and relatives from near and far joined in the celebration, including Tom's brother Fran and his wife Eva from Palm Desert, Calif. — and, a great time was had by all! Congrats from all of us on the super-duper event, Tom and J.J., you are a wonderful couple whom all adore — here's to the next 49 happy years!

COMMENDED SCHOLARS

Robert C. Morgan and Benjamin T. Smoot, juniors at Boston College High School, have been named commended scholars in the 1999 National Merit Scholarship Program. A letter of commendation from the school and the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, which conducts the program, will be presented by Dr. Raymond Bailey, the principal, to both Robert and Ben and 23 other scholastically talented juniors at Boston College High School. This is an extremely competitive program, and these two young men can be proud of their designation! We surely are proud of you both!

Rick Topper and Chris Collins haven't changed a bit since they graduated in 1978.

The "Cousins at KoKo" 1978 alums (and cousins) are Steve Sinopoli, Tom Lagrotteria, Dan Tilden and Joe Perroncello.

CLASS OF 1978 REUNION

Remember when we told you about the CHS Class of 1978 Class Reunion? Well, here are some of the details that many have been waiting for!

It began with a happy hour at KoKo Island Friday night, as alumni alternated between eating Chinese food, perusing old class pictures from the late '60s and catching up on stories. The partying lasted until closing time!

Steve Sinopoli located 90 percent of the 160 alumni, and other relocated classmates from Cohasset were tracked down, and from this number, 75 alumni attended.

Administration members invited as guests of the class who attended were: former Assistant Principal Gino DiGirolamo (Mr. Di) drove up from the Cape with his wife Jo; former CHS teachers Joan (Tribeman) Foley from Warwick, R.I.; Patty (Perreault) Bennett and her husband flew in from Virginia, and current teacher Dennis Walsh and Principal Curt Collins also attended! Alumni from Massachusetts, California, Arizona, Colorado, Washington, Florida, Illinois, Texas, Virginia, Georgia, Pennsylvania, Maine, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and North Carolina attended!

Steve Sinopoli is currently coordinating an effort with alumni to make a class gift to the Scott Sandblom Scholarship Fund in 1998.

The class also had a great idea: an "alliance" was formed with the Class of 2008 (this year's third grade class). They constructed a banner measuring more than 12 feet long that included the names and nicknames of all members of the Class of 1978, which was displayed at their dinner event.

As part of the 25th reunion in 2003, the Class of '78 will establish a general scholarship fund to be awarded to a student from the Class of 2008. A decision will be made on the criteria that will be used to award the scholarship, and the winner(s) will be notified in early 2008. The year not only coincides with their high school graduation, but will also mark their 30th reunion — the winner(s) will be invited to the reunion dinner that year!

Future plans include the development of a CHS Class of 1978 Web site, where alumni from the class can communicate to one another, see pictures, etc. We do commend Steve Sinopoli for organizing this event, what a lot of hard work went into organizing this gala! As he said, "Like a good wedding, the reunion went by too fast!"

Steve Sinopoli and Tracy (Fernalld) Govan catch up on old times at the CHS 1978 reunion.

WOMEN IN CONSTRUCTION

Maria A. Plante had some wonderful news to report this week — back in August of 1958, she and Kathleen T. (Happenny) Moriarty organized the Boston Chapter #15 of the National Association of Women in Construction. Maria served as National Vice-President in 1959 and President of the Boston Chapter in 1960. NAWIC is now celebrating its 40th anniversary and Maria has been invited to attend the 40th Annual Meeting and Reception in Boston where she will install the incoming Board of Directors! What a feeling of pride she must be experiencing knowing that she helped to begin the whole chapter! Congratulations, Maria!

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

That's the news for this week; hopefully I will be hearing from you about yours real soon!

Is Your Back Getting In The Way Of Good Health?

Ideally, good health should be natural. Given a chance, the body can work seeming miracles. But if something interferes with normal body functions, natural health is harder to achieve. All too often, the back is the source of health problems. That sudden twist or fall you paid no attention to could have forced a vertebra out of position. And in the process, the nerves that spread out from between the vertebrae can no longer properly serve body organs. The result? Poor health. To make sure your back isn't getting in the way of good health, get a chiropractic checkup.

20 years and growing

Twenty years ago next month, the Cohasset Mariner made its debut in town When we first hit the streets, Jimmy Carter was president, Michael Dukakis was Governor, and bell bottoms and disco music were in fashion. The Red Sox continued their abysmal play-off record losing a one-game division play-off bout against the dreaded New York Yankees. The controversial Vietnam flick the Deer Hunter earned the academy award for best picture, director and supporting actor (Christopher Walken) and Jane Fonda and Jon Voight took home best actress and best actor honors respectively for their roles in another Vietnam film Coming Home.

In our very first editorial the paper's credo, "to leave the worldly reporting to the Boston Globe's of journalism," and to "focus on what happens here — at the churches, in the schools, at town hall, along the harbor and around town," was introduced. While editors and publishers have come and gone in the last two decades, that credo has remained the same.

And there's been a lot to report on and write about in the last 20 years. From the devastating fires and storms that have ripped through the town — but brought townsfolk together — to the election upsets and town meeting votes that have shaped the place we call home, the Mariner has been right there with you. We think our reporting, features and photography have captured the essence of Cohasset.

From the very beginning our readers have been a big part of our success. Your letters and commentaries have enhanced our editorial pages and your community, sports and school events listings have helped us let your fellow residents know what's happening around town.

As we near our 20th anniversary, and gear up for a special commemorative issue, we're turning to you again. We want to know what you consider the to be the biggest stories over the last two decades. We're looking for citizens to share their recollections and photos of the events that have had the greatest impact on the community over the past 20 years. Please send, fax or e-mail us your stories and mail us any photos. We will return all photographs. Our address is 73 South Street, Hingham 02043. Our fax number is (781) 741-2931 and our e-mail address is mford@cnc.com.

A glance into the past helps put things into perspective, as we consider how far we've come and how much further we have to go.

Deadline for community copy

The deadline for submitting community copy for the Cohasset Mariner is 8 a.m., Friday for the following week's issue. Letters and obituaries will be accepted until noon, Tuesday. Items may be dropped off at Cohasset News, 3 Brook St. or sent by fax to 741-2931. Call Mary Ford at 741-2933 with questions.

Lobster fleet gets short end of stick

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to make a few observations about the current dredging project in Cohasset Harbor. Once again, the lobster fleet is getting the short end of the stick. I would preface my remarks by saying that I have been operating a lobster boat out of Cohasset for 40-plus years and I am a life-long resident and taxpayer of this town. As Assistant Harbormaster, I, along with Cliff Dixon and Harry Ritter, was involved in removing and replacing the moorings in the harbor during the last big dredging project in the late 1960s. This, by the way, was all done by the harbor department — not by an outside firm at the cost of $30,000 to 40,000. The same number of moorings were involved, give or take 100.

The current plan, to tie all the lobster boats to the floats of the Cohasset Yacht Club and to those belonging to Mr. Peter Roy, is endangering the safety of the harbor's lobstering vessels. These float systems were not designed as moorings for these large boats. The largest boats usually tied there are 18 to 22 feet, low profile, and light and shallow draft. The average lobster boat in Cohasset Harbor is about 35 feet and weighing seven or eight tons — quite a few are larger (up to 45 feet) and some are smaller (around 22 feet). I don't know the weight of the mooring system used on the Yacht Club or Mr. Roy's floats, but I am sure it doesn't add up to 40 or 50 tons, as the aggregate weight of 30 individual moorings weighing between one and three tons each would be.

This mooring plan is an accident waiting to happen. It also may be in violation of the town of Cohasset Harbor regulations and town bylaws concerning mooring size and tackle. In my opinion, these float systems will never hold all these boats in a sneak storm like the Halloween Storm of 1991, which was not predicted and had hurricane force winds. I don't remember any damage done in Cohasset Harbor during that particular storm. Why? Because all the boats had safe, dependable moorings. It just isn't prudent to put the whole fishing fleet on temporary tie-ups during the stormiest time of the year — the time when you do get the unexpected storms. This time of the year is worse than winter because at that time everyone is prepared for bad weather.

I don't understand why the town has bent over backwards to help the yacht club change a federal dredging line so that they could implement their new float system. I don't have an objection to their new float system; I'm objecting to the fact that the town's inconsiderate actions are endangering the livelihood of every fishing family in Cohasset. In their zest to get the harbor dredged, the town has negotiated all rights away to the Army Corps of Engineers — thereby virtually eliminating the chance for the fishermen to have a safe harbor to work from. If it were not for the commercial fleet, there would be no money spent by the Corps of Engineers to dredge Cohasset Harbor. This is a fact supported by the engineers' statement as being so.

The lobster fleet of Cohasset will get very little benefit from this project. The only part of the harbor that needs to be deepened is the entrance channel and even that has not changed in the last five years — it seems to have reached its natural depth.

This whole dredging issue could have been remedied by assessing each fisherman his share of the expense, and to do it at the same time Mr. Roy's basin was dug. If the only option open to the town included endangering the fleet, I say don't dredge the harbor until this problem is worked out.

In conclusion, I will state that this is not the first time that Cohasset Harbor has been deepened, but is surely the most disrupting. We're not talking inconvenience here, (everyone can live with that) we're talking about real danger when men have to risk their lives to save equipment during a storm. How far will we go to appease the curiosity of some engineers in an office who want to experiment with how they will dump the dredge spoils?

Come on now.

I also would like to thank the Cohasset Yacht Club and Mr. Peter Roy for coming forward with this plan, for without it (although completely inadequate), we would have absolutely no place at all to tie up.

The only way to safely moor boats in Cohasset Harbor is on individual moorings. There is absolutely no good reason why the fishing fleet cannot be moved around the harbor as each section is worked on. This is not a new idea, this is the way that works for everyone concerned.

Boathouse get-together is Sept. 9

in CMI. "Once you learn how to do something and begin to feel competent at it, you become more confident about yourself in general," said Buckley. "Whether it's woodworking, steering, commanding crew—when you gain these competencies, you inevitably gain confidence."

Under Buckley's direction, alternative school students scraped, sanded, caulked, painted, removed decking and plugged scuppers. They also built new floorboards and thwarts, built oars and cast new oarlocks for the vessel. The boat is now used by a wide variety of adults and students alike for expeditions and competition in Massachusetts Bay.

In order to keep the many benefits of CMI going, Buckley is willing to "beg for money," as he jokingly puts it, at the Lighthouse meeting.

The 7:30 p.m. Sept. 9 get-together will be a celebration of CMI's accomplishments, as well a presentation of slides and videos demonstrating participants' involvement in the boathouse renovation and other activities. Updates on what CMI can offer members and potential members is also on the evening's agenda.

"People may reconnect even more to the group and newcomers may decide to become involved," said Buckley hopefully.

ASK!
Documents dangers of King Street

The Cohasset neighborhood group, ASK! (A Safer King Street) has conducted its study of the chronic traffic problems in the King Street area. The study found that the accident rate on King Street is 40 times greater than the average mile of road in Cohasset, ASK! said.

After experiencing 21 reported accidents in the last two years on King Street and an additional 17 this year at the Beechwood/Route 3A intersection, this neighborhood is by far the most dangerous in Cohasset, said members of ASK!

They said, police efforts to reduce the accident rate has resulted in more speeding tickets being issued in this area than anywhere else in Cohasset. Ten percent of Cohasset's speeding tickets are issued in the 1.2 mile stretch of King Street between Beechwood and 3A.

Louis S. Harvey, who led the study, said, "King Street, which was built to handle 100 horse and buggies per day, is now carrying more than 2,500 speeding cars. The street cannot support this burden and it is letting us know by the devastating accident rate."

The ASK! group will propose that the commuter traffic be diverted on to Route 3A which was built for automobile traffic and that the dangerous intersection at Beechwood and 3A be reconfigured to create a proper turning lane. This proposal will be presented at Town Meeting Oct. 26.

ASK! is a neighborhood group with the mission of finding the most effective, timely, economical and practical solution to the safety problems of the King Street area.

Editor's note: This is a press release from ASK!, a Cohasset neighborhood group, which organized to find solutions to traffic problems on King Street.

Setting records of all kinds

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

You've all heard about Mark McGwire and his efforts to break Roger Maris' record of 61 home runs in a single season. But what about Geoff Smith?

Geoff was lowered in a box into a pit in the garden of his favorite pub, the Railway Inn, in Mansfield, England, Saturday and he plans to stay there for 180 days.

That will be a world record in what the Associated Press calls "the sport" of being buried alive.

Huh?

(How long will it take to become an official Olympic sport?)

Geoff is driven to set the new mark for voluntary interment by his mother, Emma, who held the old record of 101 days until it was broken by an unidentified American, who remained underground for 141 days.

(If I were the unidentified American, I would remain unidentified by choice.)

And I thought I had heard everything when I learned that Aaron Marshall of Western Australia set a world record by showering for 336 consecutive hours. That's 14 days!

Or that S. A. E. W. Perera of the Sri Lanka Army, who once sang solo for 134 hours, 54 minutes. That's more than five days!

Or the 441 smoke rings blown from a single drag on a cigarette by Atsuhiro Nakamura of Nara, Japan.

I know those things for a fact because they're in my edition of the Guinness Book of Records, although I'm told the Guinness folks have been weeding some of their more outrageous marks from the book.

Do these obscure records fascinate you as much as they do me?

Like Sheldon "Larry" Lejeune holds one of baseball's oldest and most obscure records. He threw a baseball 426 feet, 9 1/2 inches in 1910. No one has exceeded that mark since. I'll bet no one has tried, either.

A pitcher named Ron Herbel got six hits in 206 at bats for a lifetime .029 batting average, the lowest ever, before the San Francisco Giants and three other teams got hep to the fact that he might not be major league material.

The highest batting average ever recorded officially was .492 by James (the original "Tip") O'Neill of the St. Louis Browns in 1887. That was the year bases on balls were counted as hits.

Every baseball fan knows that Cy Young, for whom the award is named, holds the record of winning 511 games. But who knows that he also holds the record for losing games, 314?

An athlete named Larry Lewis won a 100-yard dash in 17.8 seconds in 1969, a world's record time for runners in the 100-or-older class. Lewis was 101.

The 1916 New York Giants won 26 in a row at home, a major league record, and 17 games in a row on the road. And they finished fourth in the National League that year.

The major league record for home runs in a season before Babe Ruth was 27 by Ned Williamson of the Chicago White Stockings in 1887. That's without Androstenedione. A shot or two of gin, maybe?

John Kull is forever known as baseball's perfect player. He pitched one game for the Philadelphia Athletics in 1909 and won it; he got to bat once and got a hit; and he handled his one chance in the field flawlessly.

And good luck to the newest record-setters, Mark McGwuire and Geoff Smith

CANDIDATES CORNER

Bradley calls for ban on negative campaigning

Former Assistant District Attorney and State Representative candidate Garrett Bradley called for a voluntary ban on all negative campaigning in the Third Plymouth District Democratic Primary.

In a letter to both his Democratic opponents, Bradley applauds the manner in which the Primary has been run so far. Bradley writes, "up to this point in the Democratic Primary campaign, all three candidates have run positive, issue-based campaigns. The voters of the Third Plymouth District have benefited from a thorough, substantive debate of important issues that impact families and senior citizens on a daily basis."

While the Primary has not been negative so far, Bradley wants to raise the standards of political campaigns by instituting a voluntary ban on negative campaigning.

"We have an important obligation to continue this positive, issue-based Democratic Primary," stated Bradley. "As Democrats, we cannot afford to miss this unique opportunity to win this seat back by attacking each other in the Primary."

"By voluntarily joining together to ban negative campaigning, we can also raise the standards of political campaigns both in our area and statewide, and present a unified, Democratic effort throughout the Primary and General elections."

Bradley has also called for a unity breakfast after the Primary, so that the winner of the Democratic primary can be assured of a unified party in his campaign against the incumbent Republican, Mary Jeanette Murray.

Cutler endorsed by environmental organizations

The Massachusetts League of Environmental Voters (MLEV) and New England Environmental Voters (NEEV) have voted to endorse Democratic State Representative candidate Josh Cutler.

"We are pleased to make this endorsement," said Marsha Westropp, co-chair of the MLEV board. "Mr. Cutler has demonstrated his strong commitment to the environment through his leadership in securing passage of Land Bank legislation and commitment to work for environmental legislation if elected, particularly the updated bottle bill."

MLEV and NEEV are non-profit organizations dedicated to improving environmental quality through electoral political action. MLEV and NEEV seek to achieve this goal by increasing the public's awareness of the positions taken on environmental issues by Massachusetts' public officials and candidates for office.

Cutler is a Democratic candidate for state representative for Hingham, Hull and Cohasset. He is running to bring a pro-active voice on issues like health care reform, education and environmental protection. For more information on the Cutler Campaign, call 741-9889 or visit our web site at www.jcutler.com.

Mary Jeanette Murray talks taxes

Invigorated by campaigning and by the opportunity to talk about "issues and ideas for the 21st century," State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (3rd Plymouth District, Hingham, Cohasset, Hull) has spent her summer traveling the triangle, as she calls her three-town district.

And what's on the minds of constituents? Taxes, she says. The failure of the Legislature to honor a promise to roll back the state income tax rate has Murray reiterating her pledge to make "easing the tax burden on the working men and women of Massachusetts and encouraging a tax climate that is hospitable to business a cornerstone of my next term."

She's been there before, championing tax cuts and reminding her colleagues that the increase in the tax rate from 5% to 5.95% was supposed to be temporary.

"We took then Gov. Dukakis at his word, that the increase would be temporary to help us through the fiscal crisis of the eighties. But taxes are like bee stings. Long after the fiscal crisis — and the bee — are gone, the sting lingers. The moral of the story is don't let the bee get too close. That's my job. Don't let tax increases even have a chance of getting near us."Murray touts her record of lower taxes.

She has voted to lower the meals tax, eliminate the state income tax surcharge and against an increase in the gas tax. She has called on the Legislature to cap state spending, to increase local aid and to limit mandated programs which strain local budgets.

"Like any household, the Legislature has to live within its budget and stop charging frivolous purchases to the taxpayers. The taxpayers have become the state's Visa and Mastercard. Well, it's time the state cut up its cards," she said.

Murray invites your thoughts and comments. She can be contacted at (781) 383-1000 or at her State House Office, (617) 722-2400.

State Police Association endorses Locke for District Attorney

Norfolk District Attorney Jeffrey A. Locke has been endorsed in the Republican Primary for District Attorney by the State Police Association of Massachusetts (SPAM).

As District Attorney, Locke supervises a staff of 120 employees, including 22 state police detectives who are assigned to the District Attorney's Homicide and Major Crimes Unit, Sexual Assault Unit, and a county-wide Drug Unit. At the direction of the District Attorney, state police detectives have teamed up with local police since 1997 to jointly investigate all homicides and to identify and eliminate drugs at the local level.

New Osgood rings in first class Sept. 8

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The new Joseph Osgood Elementary School will have its delayed start Sept. 8.

Last-minute "punch list" items and carpeting and tiling for corridors, shelving for the library and the gym floor were some of the details that needed to be completed by work crews before the school could receive its first students.

Though still not entirely completed, the new elementary school will open its $9.9 million dollar doors for the '98-'99 school year Tuesday morning, 9 a.m.

"The school still isn't done," said Sarah Markert, who with Cassandra Rioux and a host of parent-volunteers has been assisting teachers with the move from the old to new school.

"What we're trying to do is do it set everything up efficiently so that the contractors can still work in there," she said.

The classrooms and cafeteria have been completed so that the returning students will not be much affected by the continued presence of work crews.

"It's absolutely beautiful, bright and cheery. The screened windows can all be opened for fresh air."

— Parent, Sarah Markert on the new Osgood School.

"It looks gorgeous, absolutely breath-taking gorgeous," gushed Markert. "I had to go pick something up at the old Osgood and with the exception of a sentimental pang — I've had children there and there is some charm to the school — I thought, holy-moly! Light in every classroom, the wood touches — even the ceilings are grooved wood, and all the blues and teals. It's absolutely beautiful, bright and cheery. The screened windows can all be opened for fresh air."

Markerts son, Zachary, agrees. "We used to only be able to open one window in my class at the old school last year."

The gym floor is being used to hold all the work equipment. Once the crew is finished with the rest of the school, a new gym floor will be put down.

"Everyone that worked on it needs to be commended," said Markert. "This is really something that Cohasset should be proud of."

Male volunteers will be needed to finish the last of the move from the old to new Osgood from 6-10 p.m., Sept. 3 to help move heavier objects such as desks and chairs. More volunteers will be needed for Friday, Sept. 4. To volunteer, call Sarah Markert at 383-6124 or Rioux at 383-2856.

Seafaring past comes alive at Maritime Museum

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Ship models, Minot's Lighthouse memorabilia and other seaworthy items are visible reminders of Cohasset's nautical history that await visitors to Elm Street's Maritime Museum, now in its 38th year of operation.

"We're kind of off the beaten path so we don't get as many guests as other museums that are perhaps somewhat better known than we are," said curator David Wadsworth. "But we have about 800 or so visitors per summer form June through September. One year I think we went over 1,000. We very seldom have more than a half-dozen at a time in here. It's not a good assembly hall—it's far too old for that."

Despite the lack of space, Wadsworth particularly likes to see family groups comprised of three generations arrive at the front door. So much so that the museum has stopped charging admission fees. "A father would come in, see the sign and then quickly calculate the cost for his parents and children," he said. "We don't want people to feel the price is too steep to bring their family in."

Depending on the influx of summer visitors drawn by Harborfest or other local events, Wadsworth might keep as many as 100 visitors entertained through any given weekend with his talk of codfishing schooners, the Portuguese sailors who once manned them, Cohasset genealogy, town history and local legend. Better yet, he's accurate.

Many of the pamphlets on display near the museum's front door were penned by Wadsworth, who is the Historical Society's curator and a member of the town's Historical Commission. Wadsworth himself can trace his mother's Cohasset genealogy (back tot he 1630s before the town made the 1770 separation from Hingham) and claims he picked up all his historical information "through osmosis." He can even trace visitors' local genealogy, if they have one to find.

Before taking over as curator, Wadsworth had been organizing town archives with financial assistance provided by a federal job-training grant. He has been serving in his curator post since 1982 when the Historical Society extended an invitation to replace outgoing curator Robert Fraser. He knows the museum from top to bottom—literally.

The downstairs of the wide-board floored museum is the maritime section. Nets, paintings, lanterns, early photographs, compasses and other seafaring items adorn the walls, ceiling and several glass-topped curio tables.

Upstairs, reminders of Cohasset's earliest residents, the Conohasset Indian tribe for whom the town is named, are on display. Prehistoric Indian stone tools sit behind glass cabinets, as do two Conohasset dolls that must have delighted at least one little girl centuries ago.

"We found the arrowheads on Government Island, near the entrance of Cunningham's Bridge at Little Harbor and at the marshes at the gulf," said Wadsworth. "Those were summer encampments apparently. In the colder weather, the Conohasset must have tried to get away from the winds by staying up in the hills then."

Further back in the upper level are early Cohasseters' desks, writing implements and other daily items. "I sometimes refer to it more as an attic than a museum," joked Wadsworth.

The wooden building, originally situated by the Cove on Border Street at Bates Wharf, was built by colonist Samuel Bates. The 18th century structure had originally been an old ship chandlery (a marine supplies store). For a time, the Bates' family business passed along from one family member to the next, with a short period of ownership by the Stockbridge brothers, Hector and Samuel, in the early 1800s.

Sometime later, John Bates, a Boston-based fur dealer, may have pored over his fishing fleet records at the desk that now sits on the second floor of the museum.

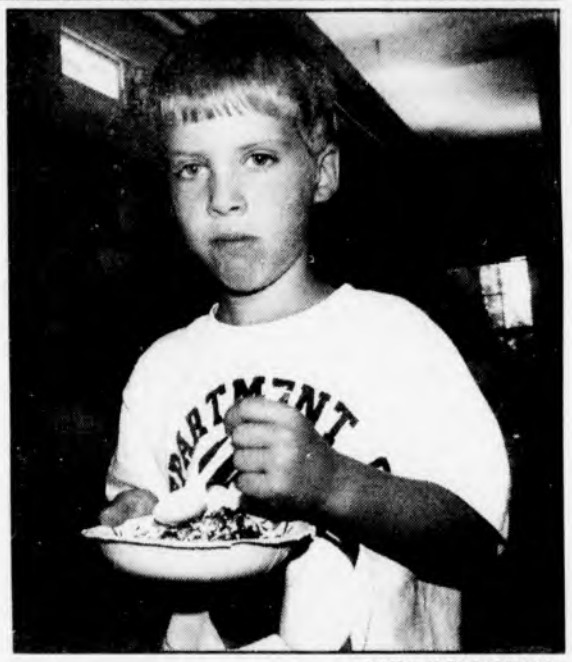
LIBRARY CORNER

Chairs needed at library



If your office or place of business has surplus equipment to donate to a non-profit organization, please consider the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. At present the library needs eight stenographer's chairs to use at computer workstations.

"We could also use a few computers," said Library Director Janet Husband. "They'd have to be Power Macs or PC's with Windows to be useful." These computers could be used as word processors by library users who may not have access to a computer otherwise. For more information, call Janet Husband, Library Director at (781) 383-1348.

Library user surveys

Library user surveys are coming back to the library with some interesting comments and responses. This survey is being conducted by the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library as a part of their long-range plan. The questions being asked include reasons you use the library, how often you use the library and whether or not library services should be expanded, maintained or reduced.

If you haven't filled out a survey yet, stop by the library and pick one up at the front desk.

Seafaring past comes alive

With his death and the end of the maritime industry's heyday, the building saw various owners before it was donated to the historical society by Mr. and Mrs. William Cox in the mid 1950s. It was then that the structure was moved to its Elm Street location next to the John Wilson House.

"We still get things," he said. "Most of our pieces come from people who either live here in Cohasset or have lived here. We don't get the really early things any more like from the 1700s and so forth. We're apt to get things from the latter 1800s—books, maps and artifacts—or early 1900s now, which is starting to get historical.

Visitors to the museum may leave with an increased understanding of the maritime ear of the 19th and later 18th centuries. "This is where the population spread across the United States started," said Wadsworth. "Right here, and then to New York, the Midwest and then on to the Gold Rush of California. Most of them started here, the ones that first went across and expanded the nation."

Wadsworth is pleased with the current surge in interest in genealogy. "There are now computer programs and I've heard about some of them on the Net. Maybe that's encouraging people to look into the subject more. I'd like to see that for the maritime museum—to have it continue to expand, moving into the 21st century and so forth."

Visitors can stop in at the museum from 1:30-4:30 p.m. daily except Mondays through September, weather permitting, when the unheated museum shuts down for the winter.

"But that didn't stop our response," he said.

The first engine at the scene reported a fire on a first-floor porch and after a couple of minutes, it was determined the fire was in the ceiling, Lincoln explained. Shortly thereafter, firefighters discovered the fire had spread to the second floor.

Lincoln sounded the second alarm at 11:30 p.m. for additional assistance. That brought an engine from Scituate and the Hull ladder truck.

By this time the warm, humidity of the evening was taking its toll on the firefighters. Four Cohasset call firefighters — two suffering from exhaustion and two with smoke inhalation — had to be transported to the hospital. Private ambulances were called in to treat exhausted firefighters and the Red Cross was also on hand with special fluids to fight dehydration.

At about 12:15 a.m., the fire had spread to the main house and all manpower was ordered to vacate the building, Lincoln said.

"It was a very big, maze-like house," he said. "Once the fire was in the interior of the building, it was no longer safe for the men to be inside."

Then the third alarm was sounded which brought in additional manpower from Hingham, Scituate and Norwell plus the Hingham aerial ladder truck which joined those from Cohasset and Scituate.

A second Norwell engine covered the Cohasset fire station.

Once the firefighters were out of the house, ladder pipes which have very large nozzles attached to the end of the aerial ladders were used to provide a heavy stream of water on the fire.

By about 4:10 a.m., the fire was under control and units started to leave — beginning with those called in from the third alarm. Cohasset cleared the scene at 1:55 p.m. Friday.

Susan and Russell MacPherson, who have owned the house since 1995, had just arrived at their house in Maine when they got the phone call and returned immediately, arriving at about 4 a.m.

Friday morning they were back in Cohasset climbing up and down the front steps salvaging what they could from their home.

They praised the firefighters and were relieved no one was seriously injured.

"No house is worth that," Susan MacPherson said.

Local historian David Wadsworth said the 1895 house — which is on both the local and Mass. Historical Commission surveys — was built by Richard Lothrup, grandson of John Jacob Lothrup, a sea captain.

John Jacob Lothrup, Jr. married the daughter of an innkeeper, and they had several sons, including Richard, who built houses between Sandy Cove and Cunningham Bridge.

"This was a true historic house of the Victorian era," Wadsworth said.

He explained that "balloon frame" houses were cropping up "all over the place" because it was not possible to create these sprawling homes with the hand-hewn posts and beams used previously.

"It was lighter construction and made it possible to make multiple shapes," Wadsworth said. "They could do things never done before and be guided by their taste whether its Italian-style villas or English country cottages."

Massive house fires are relatively rare today but before the public water supply was developed at the end of the 19th century, there was no way to save a house.

"Every house had a leather fire bucket and fires were fought with bucket brigades and hand-tub pumpers," Wadsworth said.

Lincoln praised the efforts of all the firefighters involved.

"I have a great deal of praise for my men as well as the officers and firefighters from the other towns and respect for the work they did," he said.

A neighbor, who asked not to be identified, said the MacPhersons plan to rebuild the house the way it was. The MacPhersons could not be reached for further comment.

Building Inspector Robert Egan said the house is not inhabitable but could be rebuilt.

"The way I look at it if it weren't such a unique house, not such a beautiful house, there would be no question that it would be a total loss," he said. "But with this house it may be worth it to at least explore salvaging (what's left) and rebuilding from the first floor up."

Broadcaster continues the sportscasting legacy of his dad

Casey Coleman making a name for himself in Cleveland

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

Everyone had jobs as a youngster they'd sometimes like to forget.

That's not the case for former Cohasset resident Casey Coleman who spent part of his youth as a ballboy for the Cleveland Browns of the National Football League and as a vendor in Fenway Park during the Impossible Dream season of 1967.

"Most kids spent their youth at the local park on the jungle gym. My playground was Municipal Stadium in Cleveland. I really loved that place," said Coleman of the since demolished stadium. "My play areas growing up were the locker rooms and everywhere else in that place. It was like a second home to me."

Such was life for the son of legendary sports announcer Ken Coleman, who Casey said is even more popular and well-known out in Ohio where he did play-by-play for the Browns and Ohio State football games and a local 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. sportscast than he is back here.

"Dad's a legend in Ohio," said Coleman's proud 47-year-old son. "At one point he won the Ohio Sportscaster of the Year nine straight years in a tremendously tough sports market.. He's one of the best ever."

The 1969 Cohasset High graduate is now making a name for himself as a sportscaster in Cleveland both on TV and the radio. Coleman hosts a weekly television show on the CBS affiliate Channel 19 and also a daily talk show on WTAM- 1100 AM, the flagship station of the Cleveland Indians.

In addition, he hosts the pre-game and the post-game wrap-up's for the Tribe and did the same for the Cleveland Browns before the franchise moved to Baltimore.

Former Cohasset resident Casey Coleman has made a name for himself as one of the top sports broadcasters in Ohio. Coleman is following in the footsteps of his father, Ken Coleman, the former Boston Red Sox broadcaster who also made a mark in the Midwest.

"They're both fun to do," said Coleman when asked about whether he preferred radio or television. "Radio is more creative, but there's better money in television. On TV you are just really providing captions for the pictures. In radio you are setting the scene as well as painting a picture for your audience."

"It's like being involved in the toy store of life,' said Coleman about the business of sports broadcasting. "I tagged along with my dad for all those years that he was in Cleveland and Boston and I just seemed to be destined for this business. Opportunity just kept hitting me in the face until I couldn't ignore it any longer."

The CHS class president for 1969, Coleman earned nine varsity letters in his three years at the school- three each in football and baseball, two in basketball and one in hockey.

"I wasn't much of a hockey player, but that season was the most fun I had of all," he said. "We had a great team and were able to go a long way in the state tourney."

"Sports was like night and day when you looked at high school sports in Ohio and Cohasset," he continued. "Freshman year we'd get 130 kids to go out for the football team, but here you were looking at maybe 30 kids if you were lucky. It's a totally different following."

Coleman was especially dissatisfied with his senior year football experience. After tying their first game 0-0 against Duxbury, the Skippers would not win or tie a game for the rest of the season.

"It's tough when the highlight of the year was a 0-0 tie, but what made it much worse was it was the last season for Everett Doorr," who had been a football coach for years at the school. "We wanted to send him out with something special but we weren't able to get it done."

All that said, Coleman is really

THE FISH STORY

MARK TRASK

The sun was setting low in the crisp air of the last night of August and a solitary customer ruminated over the rows of lures.

Harry stepped out back as he is want to do on occasion with a rod and reel in hand. A solitary shiner twinkled in the low light. Passing cars beeped hello as he took up his spot behind the store.

The customer had selected a Rebel, a broken-back Rebel with a blue back destined for some ultralight fishing near Minot's Light.

How's the fishing he asked as I made change. Well, the biggest fish of the year came in yesterday I smiled, pointing to the Polaroid adorning the top of the register.

Suddenly we were interrupted by Harry standing in the door way. The biggest one just got away Harry exclaimed holding a wrinkled thread of monofiliment in his hand, a Zebco combo in the other. "What happened," I asked. The fish took it down around the corner, then the line snapped. What's the test the customer chimed in. Fifteen pounds!

With that Harry dipped out another shiner and went back at it. In the meantime I had pulled the Polaroid off the register and we were admiring the 37 pound 47 inch striper that Peter Abbott had captured off the shore in Scituate the previous day. Peter's prizewinner scoffed a pogie chunk and the battle was on. Peter is the current leader in the Beachcomber Bass Tournament Shore Division.

The store had filled up with shoppers picking out odds and ends and excited voices could be hear outside.

Yes, it was Harry again. This time a hefty catfish was swinging from the line as everyone crowded around for a look.

A customer who'd stopped in on his way back from Yarmouth to Boston claimed it for dinner. His fiancee couldn't stop giggling as they drive off.

Joe Durkin and Joe Jr. of Cohasset spent some time on the waters off Humarock drowning mackerel chunks. Their efforts paid off with a nice 37 inch bass that took the weekly prize in the boat division of the Beachcomber. The Beachcomber

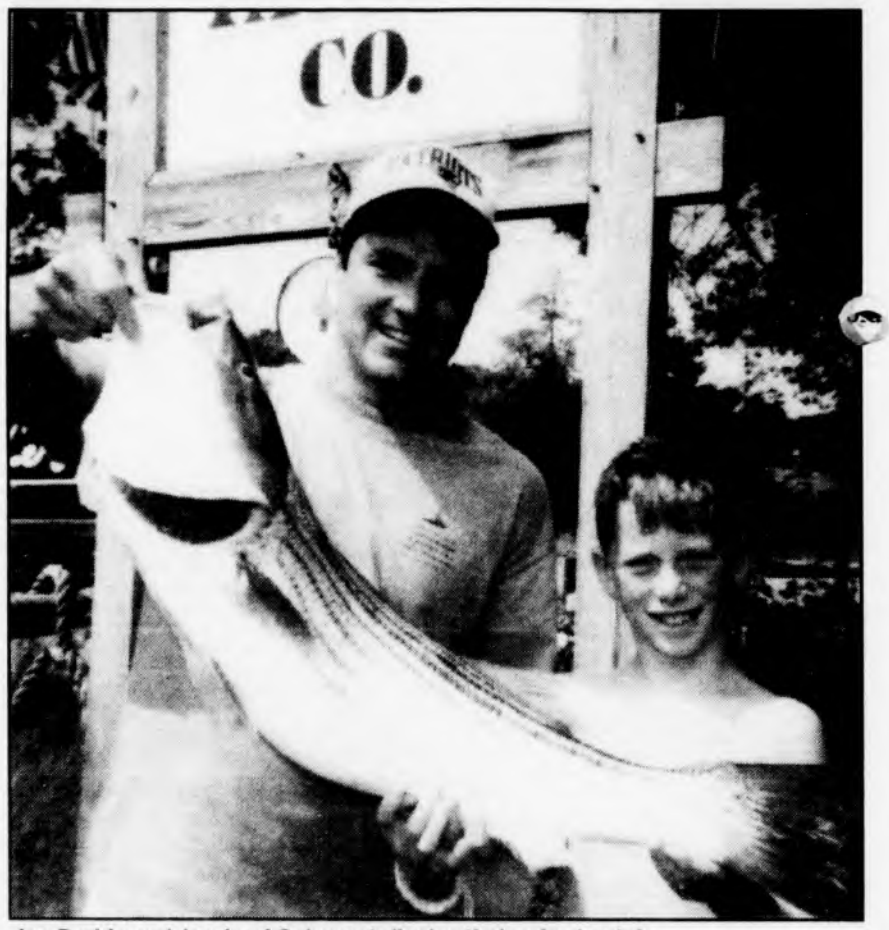
Bass Tournament is now at its halfway mark having begun August 1 and running through Sept. 30.

Jamie Jackson is holding onto the top spot in the Boat Division with his 28 and 3/4 pound 44 inch striper. Peter Abbott has vaulted the crowd in the shore division as mentioned earlier. Plenty of good fishing time remains during this tournament.

Entry can be made at Trask Tackle Company, North Scituate or Ellen's Ocean Place Restaurant at Nantasket Beach. Your $20 entry donation gets you a fine tournament T-shirt as well.

Ray Davis laid claim to the previous week's prize, fishing in the teeth of hurricane Bonnie. A fish a day rate he was catching them at. Now he's scrambling for a spot to tie up. A victim of the dredging blues in Cohasset. I was on my way down to Cohasset Harbor on a recent evening to toss herring into the outflow of the Gulph.

As I rounded the corner by the Veteran's Park, I could see two youngsters fishing off the sidewalk halfway to Lawrence Wharf. As I drew closer the older kid fell from his perch, backwards, just catching himself before knocking his head on the asphalt.



By now the older brother had regained his feet and took over the rod from his little brother who kept jumping up and down I got a trout! I got a trout! His enthusiasm was spectacular. I stopped the truck and walked over in time to see the older brother (age 9?) swing a 2 foot striper over the rail.

The commotion had attracted quite a crowd, including the boys' Dad from across the street. I got a trout the kiddo screamed into his Dad's ear as Dad crouched, bass in hand admiring the fish.

This is a striper he told his son. Moments later the boy's Mom called from across the street, inquiring.

Without hesitation the youngster yelled, Mom...I got a TROUT!

Enjoy your holiday weekend and catch one that's hard to carry.

Harry Trask is more than happy with his haul, a catfish.

Soccer registrations

The Cohasset Recreation Department and Soccer Club will conduct registrations for boys and girls in grades K-6, on Saturday, Sept. 5, from 9-11 a.m. at Cohasset Town Hall.

Son continues the sportscasting legacy of his father looking forward to coming back to Cohasset next year for his 30th class reunion.

A self-professed "child of the 60s" who was searching for his niche in life, Coleman went to Norwich University for a while but it was while a student at UMass-Boston that he got his break into the business; a full-time job producing at WITS-AM, the old Red Sox flagship station.

After stops in Fall River at WSAR and in Philadelphia Coleman found a home in Cleveland and hasn't left since.

The basic things he learned while being around his father and some of the other great announcers of the day still apply said Coleman, although some other things have changed.

"There's more writing and reporting these days in sports broadcasting," said Coleman, adding that the days of "rip and read" were now a thing of the past.

"The great thing about this business is that you can report and report all you want, but the next day the sun is going to come up and it's a brand new day," he added.

That same hopeful attitude is now infused in the hearts of the Cleveland Browns followers, who are less than a year away from having their football team back.

Part of the promise from the NFL when Art Model took his team to Baltimore was that in a short period Cleveland would be awarded another football team. They don't have owners yet and a still unnamed new stadium is now under construction, but the Cleveland Browns get back into business with a Aug. 21, 1999 pre-season football contest.

"I think the paint is still going to be wet on the stadium come next August, but the whole area is excited about brining the Browns back to Cleveland next season," said Coleman. "Everyone is geared up."

The same cannot be said for Indians fans, said Coleman, who are lamenting the fact that their team has played horrible baseball since the All-Star break yet still is leading the Central Division of the American League by a comfortable margin.

"Sports was like night and day when you looked at high school sports in Ohio and Cohasset. Freshman year we'd get 130 kids to go out for the football team, but here you were looking at maybe 30 kids if you were lucky. It's a totally different following."

OHIO SPORTSCASTER AND FORMER COHASSET RESIDENT CASEY COLEMAN

"We're not looking forward to the playoffs," said Coleman. "Our team is not playing well at all."

That could be a good thing for the Red Sox, who look to be on a collision course with Cleveland for a meeting in the playoffs.

"Boston has really put it to us this season. Fans around here expect the Indians to get their butts kicked when it comes to the playoffs," said Coleman. "There's not much hope out here at all for the Indians."

Although Cleveland and Boston may not be similar at all, their sports fans can commiserate. Both group have had enough ups and down to fill up Heartbreak Hotel all year long.

"Both towns have had more than their fair share of heartbreak," said Coleman, including such Cleveland tragedies as the loss of the Browns, John Elway's last minute 98-yard drive to take away Cleveland's chance at a Super Bowl, the numerous things that Michael Jordan did to keep the Cavaliers from moving on in the playoffs and, most recently, not being able to close the deal in last year's World Series when they were only two outs away from victory.

Yeah, it does sound just like Boston.

Coleman lives in Ohio with his wife Emilie and their two children, Chelsea and Kayla.

YMCA starts a U-13 boys soccer team

The South Shore YMCA, located on the Hanover/Norwell border (across the street from the Hanover Mall) introduced its new soccer team for Under 13 boys on Monday, July 20. This team will compete in the Massachusetts Premier League (MAPLE) for the 1998/99 season. The program includes membership to the Y, use of the facilities for both team and individual training including the new health facilities at the Hanover and Quincy facilities for the fall, winter and spring season, quality coaching and fun.

In a supportive and motivating environment the program will develop and improve the individual player skill, game strategies and tactics in the context team play. The Y chose players that are serious in developing their individual skills as well as competing as team players for playing soccer at the highest level of competition in the state. The head coach, Kevin Orcutt, of Weymouth, is a B licensed coach who has played professional soccer for over 10 years, coached Division I and II teams in the MAPLE league and at private schools in the area. The Y coaching staff also includes licensed physical trainers. The coaching staff is dedicated to doing their best to develop already talented players to higher levels of play and skill.

The team name is The South Shore YMCA DASH Soccer Club, and consists of players from the towns of Cohasset, Dorchester, Halifax, Marshfield, Norwell and Pembroke. Practices will begin in Aug. for the 14 players chosen. The South Shore YMCA is a not-for-profit association of individuals dedicated to improving the quality of life for all through programs that promote a healthy body, mind and spirit.

Coach Orcutt is still looking for a few quality players. If you think you might be interested in playing for the Y call (781) 829-8585 and leave a message.

Mrs. Daniels' piano lessons resume

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, resumes her lesson schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset. Her personalized instruction has attracted students who have had careers in music, while others play just for pleasure.

Mrs. Daniels is a graduate of the New-England Conservatory of Music of Boston, magna cum laude. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She has taught in Swampscott, Lincoln, Norwood and currently in Cohasset.

As part of each lesson she incorporates music theory, harmony, rhythm study and expression. She encourages her students to improvise and compose, and strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

WEDDINGS & ENGAGEMENTS

Thornell/Quemere wedding

Julienne Renee Quemere, daughter of Kathleen Talarico of Cohasset, and Peter Gerard Thornell, son of Gerard and Carol Thornell of Norwell, were married May 23. The ceremony and reception were held at the historic Winslow House in Marshfield.

The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Sarena Quemere. The best person was Kathy Josselyn.

The marriage was officiated by The Rev. Judith Campbell of Pembroke.

Julienne is a 1992 graduate of Cohasset High School. In 1996, she graduated magna cum laude from Hartwick College with a B.S. in music education. Julienne is currently the band director at Scituate High School, and is pursuing her masters degree.

Peter is a 1989 graduate of Norwell High School. He is completing an English degree from Bridgewater State College and will then pursue a masters degree in library science. Peter currently works at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset.

The couple will continue to live in Scituate.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Thornell

Hoffman/Seay wedding

Kristin Seay, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Seay of Eastham, was married to James Hoffman, son of Joseph and Joyce Hoffman of Cohasset. The ceremony, officiated by The Rev. Jim Robinson and Father Mulvehill, was held May 16 at the Chapel in the Pines in Eastham. A reception followed at the Captain Linnell House.

The bride is a graduate of Nauset Regional High School and attended Cape Cod Community College and the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She is employed by the Captain Linnell House as the manager's assistant, Kadee's Lobster and Clambar as the operations director, Cape Cod Community College as a culinary teacher in the Project Forward program and Cape Cod Photo and Art.

The groom is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Saint Michael's College, Vermont. He is employed by ADP as a sales district manager of the Cape Cod region.

The couple honeymooned in the Caribbean and now resides in Orleans.

Shish kabobs on the barbecue

MAY I PRESENT

SALLYANN CHATTERTON

As summer comes to an end, don't you make a plan to have a barbecue? Usually we do ours on Labor Day weekend; we say goodbye to summer and "hello" to the beginning of another school year ... here is an idea that will take you away from the "norm," make shish kabobs! It does take preparation, but the end results will get rave reviews! Get the man of the house to do the grilling, serve nice soft rolls or the bread of your choice, whip up a batch of rice, and you've got it! A memorable meal!

SHISH KABOBS

Marinade sauce:
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1/2 cup soy sauce
1/2 cup red wine
1 tsp. ground ginger
2 small garlic cloves, crushed
1-1/2 tsp. curry powder
2 tbsp. ketchup
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. Tabasco sauce

Kabobs:
1 lb. sirloin steak, 1" thick
1 lb. boneless lamb, 1" thick
1 lb. pork tenderloin,1/2" thick
1 eggplant
4 apples
1 green pepper, seeded
12 large mushrooms
1/2 lb. sliced bacon

Prepare marinade sauce; set aside. Cut beef, lamb and pork into 1-1/2 inch pieces. Place meat in a shallow dish, keeping each type of meat separate. Pour 3/4 of the marinade over meat. Cover and refrigerate 24 hours, stirring once or twice. A few hours before serving, peel and slice eggplant 1/2 inch thick; cut into 1-1/2 inch squares. Peel apples and cut into six wedges. Cut green pepper in 1-1/2 inch squares. Place eggplant, apples, green pepper and mushrooms in a medium bowl. Add remaining marinade. Marinate 2 to 3 hours at room temperature, stirring occasionally.

To cook kabobs, on eight skewers, wrap a half slice of bacon around each piece of lamb. On large skewers, alternate beef, mushrooms, lamb, eggplant, pork, green pepper and apple. Barbecue (or broil) 5 to 10 minutes on each side. Makes 8 servings.

Girl Scout registration

Girls Scout registration will be held Monday, Sept. 14, from 6:30 to 8 p.m., at the Deer Hill School cafeteria.

Girl Scouts are separated by grades: Daisy (Kindergarten), Brownie (Grades 1-3), Junior (Grades 4-6), Cadette (Grades 7-9), and Senior (Grades 10-12).

Seven dollars and a parent are all that is needed to register. Parents, consider being a volunteer in your daughter's troop.

For more information on Girl Scouts, call Terry James at 383-9173 or Mary McElroy at 383-0505.

Hingham Symphony calls for musicians

The revitalized Hingham Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Jin Kim, will audition prospective members of the orchestra by appointment Sept. 5, 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., at Old Ship Parish House, Hingham. Also, Sept. 12, 13, 19, 20, 1 to 5 p.m., at B.U. and New England Conservatory. The HSO is a partnership between accomplished amateur musicians and professionals, performing six concerts, October to May. Regular rehearsals are fun and rewarding. Howie Carr comes to the Circus for teen idols show

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

WRKO's radio host Howie Carr broadcast his show live from the Music Circus last week, drawn no doubt by the appearance of teen idols Davy Jones, Bobby Sherman and Peter Noone.

"Last year, WRKO did a live broadcast from Kimball's when we had the Monkees here," said general manager of the Music Circus Vince Longo. "This year, they said, 'Why don't we do it at the Circus?'"

Noone, as the lead singer for Herman's Hermits, sang such hits as "There's A Kind of Hush," and "I'm Henry VIII, I Am." Since his solo career began in 1973, Noone has written for the likes of David Bowie and Debbie Boone.

"Last year, WRKO did a live broadcast from Kimball's when we had the Monkees here. This year, they said, 'Why don't we do it at the Circus?'"
—general manager Vince Longo

Bobby Sherman, whose "groovy" image once wallpapered the bedroom of many an early 1970's girl, still tours occasionally.

Davy Jones performs, too, in shows with a reunited Monkees.

"WRKO was our sponsor for the entire season," said Longo. "They seemed a polite crew, and Carr was a polite guy—easy to work with. Some of the different topics he covered that day—you never know what Howie Carr is going to do. He did a 20-minute interview with Peter Noone, which is kind of neat. People heard it on the radio and they drove in on their way home. The 20 seats we set up for a live audience were full most of the time."

District gears up for Sept. 15 primary battle

Rep. race creates interest

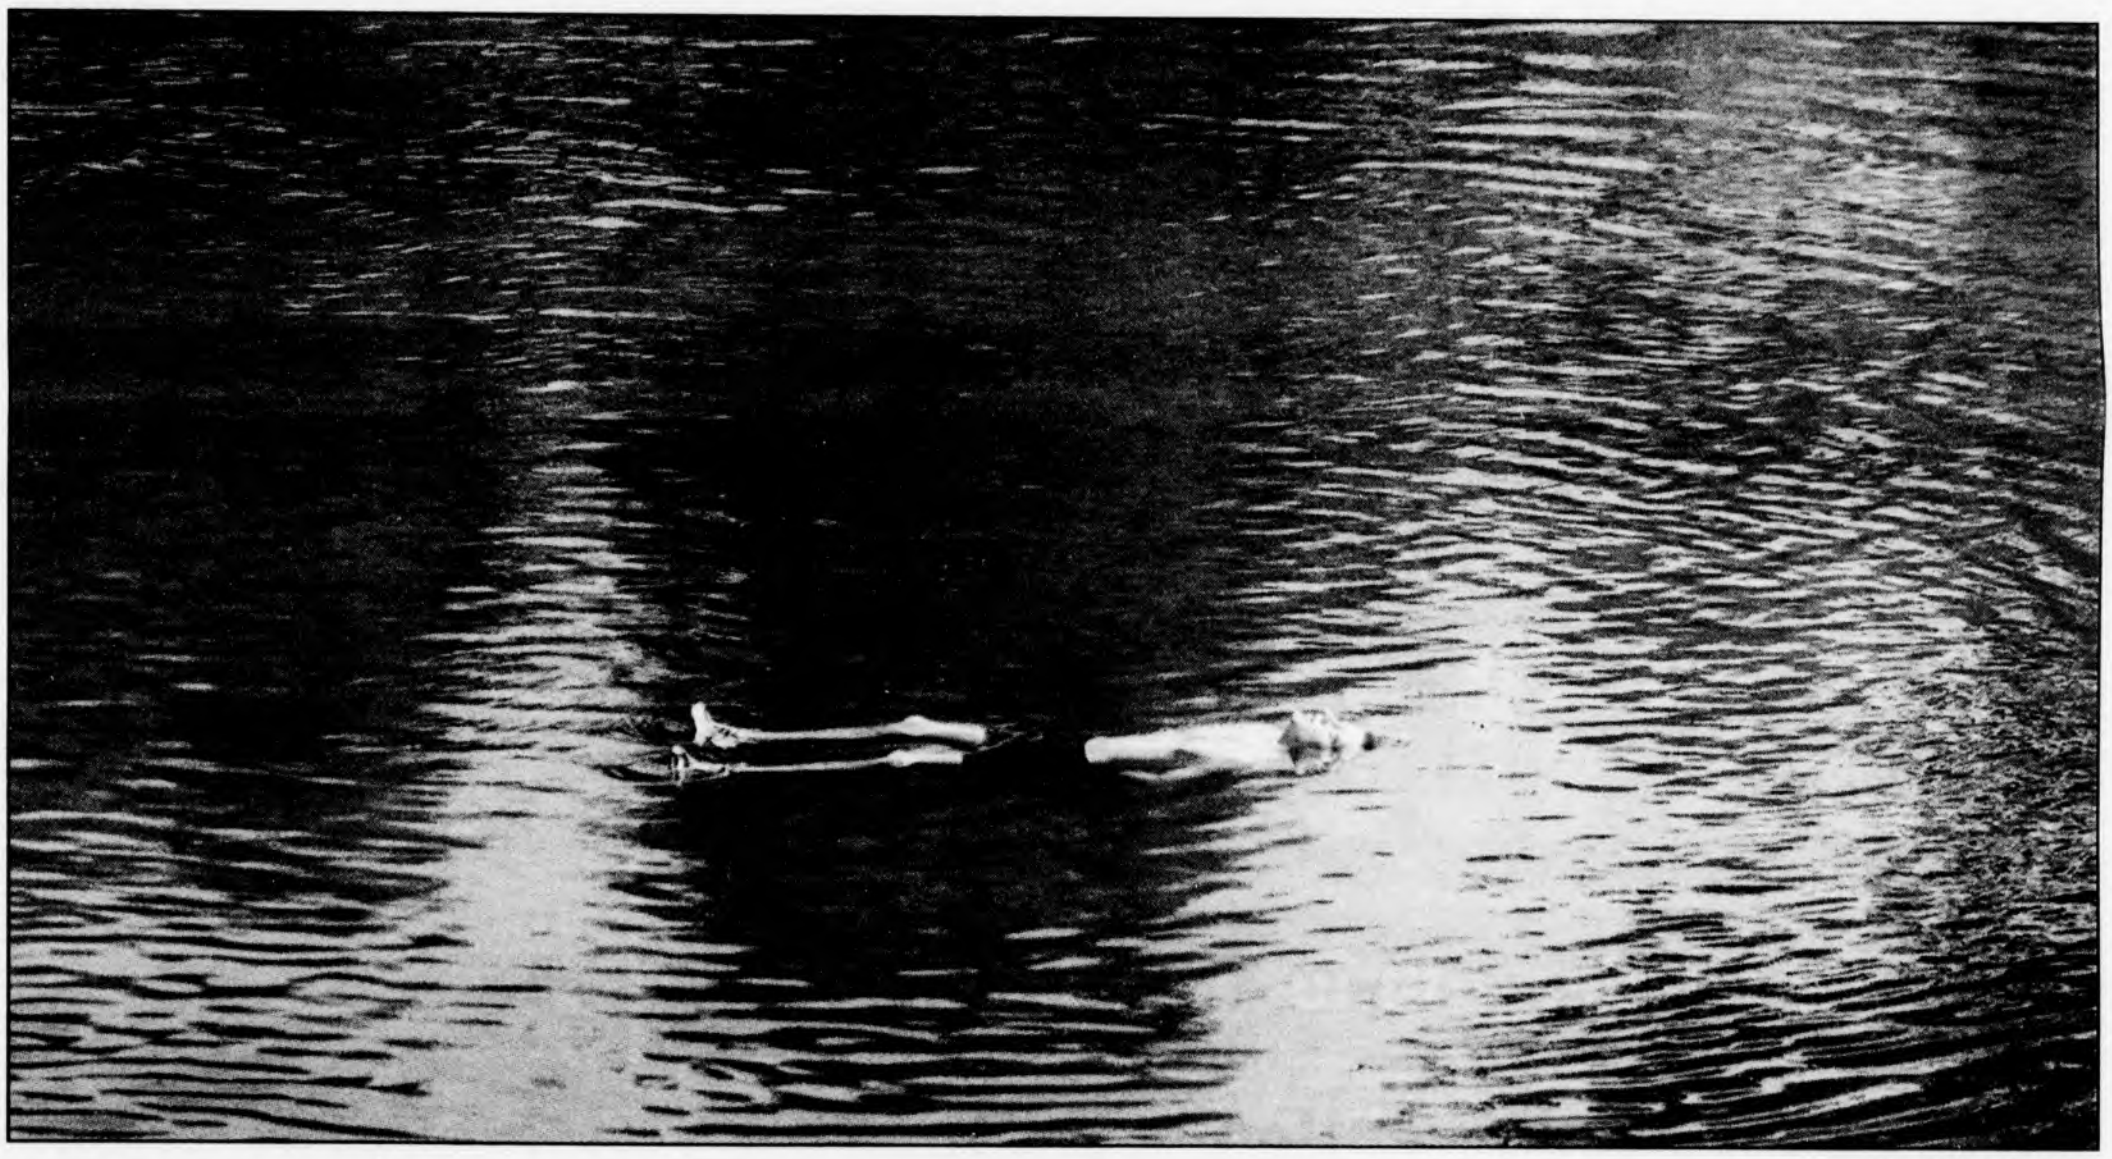
By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

While across the state, primary races for Democratic and Republican Party nominations for governor and attorney general grab the headlines, closer to home the contest for state representative is generating interest.

In Cohasset, Hull and Hingham, voters will choose among three, young Democrats who are vying for the right to go head to head with 22-year incumbent Mary Jeanette Murray, a Republican, in the state election in November.

The polls are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday at Cohasset Town Hall, the Hingham Middle School and Hull High School.

Some election watchers say Hingham with its nearly 15,000 registered voters — including about 8,500 unenrolled — is the real battleground.



Hingham Town Clerk Eileen McCracken said historically Hingham voters turn out in droves when local candidates are on the ballot.

"I think the state rep's race with draw them in," said McCracken who expects 30 percent of Hingham's voters will make a trip to the polls Tuesday.

Cohasset Town Clerk Marion Douglas is a bit more modest in her prediction. She said she expects about a 15 percent turnout, which is the percentage state officials are predicting throughout the Commonwealth. As for the 30

Could a credit card be in Cohasset's future?

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

More and more, town officials are seeking ways to raise money outside the local tax levy to fund extra programs and public needs. Towns lease out property, conduct fund-raisers, and embark on a host of schemes to bring in more revenue. One of the money-raising methods that some towns are using involves issuing town credit cards — usually called "affinity cards" — in partnership with a bank, credit union or other financial institution. At a recent board of selectmen's meeting, selectman Tom Callahan suggested the that the town explore the possibility of creating a Town of Cohasset Affinity Card.

Town Manager Mark Haddad and Treasurer Joe Buckley are looking into the feasibility of establishing an affinity card for the Cohasset. Buckley said the idea is feasible, but he has much research to perform before he can present selectmen with a recommendation.

Cohasset is not the first town on the South Shore to look into a town credit card. Hanover created a Town of Hanover card about a year-and-a-half ago with Hibernia Savings Bank. The town of Canton is in the final stages of creating a local affinity card in partnership with a local bank, the Bank of Canton.

The appeal of affinity cards is the lure of easy money. The bank which issues the card does most of the work, advertising the cards for the town, performing credit checks and issuing

ASK! gains momentum with support of officials

Traffic suggestions to be on town meeting warrant

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

A 44-member group made up of King Street residents appears to have met with the backing of selectmen and the planning board in its quest to lessen the sometimes speeding motorists that use the narrow and winding street as an alternative route to 3A.

Selectmen voted to put the ASK! (A Safer King Street) article on the town meeting warrant even though the group did not have the normally required 100 signatures of support. They have yet to vote on the matter. Town manager Mark Haddad will help leading group members Heidi Salerno, Betsy Connolly, Louis Harvey and Debbie Cook with the written proposal.

"Diverting traffic will alleviate volume, speed and safety issues."
— Betsy Connolly of ASK!

What it comes down to is that voters at the Oct. 26 town meeting will be voting on whether to close off a section of the King-Beechwood intersection in order to force traffic back to 3A.

ASK! also gained nearly unanimous support from the planning board members, but for one nay-sayer, Bob Sturdy -

THIS WEEK IN COHASSET

Absentee ballots for State Primary

Absentee ballots for the State Primary Sept. 15 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime Monday, Sept. 14. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls are open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs which prevent voting at the polls on election day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, fax or hand-delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, which ballot is requested, Democrat, Republican, or Reform Party, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant. A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absent voter, sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand-deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Sept. 15 to be counted.

The Ace-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used.

Reception for Hart slated

Former school committee members Maureen Jerz and JoAnn Chittick have scheduled a reception for recently retired school Supt. Stephen Hart at 7 p.m., Sept. 17 at the Barker Tavern in Scituate. Tickets are $25 each and checks should be made payable to Cohasset High School. Call Jerz at 383-6592 or Chittick at 383-9220 or stop by the high school to purchase tickets.

Appointed to advisory committee

Galt Grant, 388 King St.; Susan Turgiss, 96 Jerusalem Road; and Maureen Jerz, 133 N. Main St. have been appointed to three year terms on the advisory committee, Town Moderator George Marlette said. The advisory committee advises the town on financial matters and makes recommendations on articles at town meeting.

More lighting at library

Librarian Janet Husband wrote to Town Manager Mark Haddad last week seeking his help in getting the street lights turned back on by the library.

She said the lack of outside lighting at the library's main entrance at closing time at 9 p.m. presents a potential hazard for staff and library users.

Ambulance billing update

In August the fire department billed for 39 ambulance transports for a total due of $14,415.60. During the same period, the town collected $14,145 in ambulance bills. So far in fiscal year 2000, which started July 1, the town has ambulance bills totalling $26,693.61 and has collected $22,012.54, some of which may apply to past fiscal years.

Sandy Beach tickets

Cohasset police issued 224 tickets last month for a total due of $3,460 of which 108 ($1,620) were parking tickets at Sandy Beach. Selectmen are considering increasing parking fines at Sandy Beach to deter unauthorized parking there.

Verc to appeal liquor license denial

Verc Enterprises, Inc. which operates the Mobil mart and gas station at Sohier Street and Route 3A is appealing selectmen's denial of a wine and malt package store license at the convenience store.

A hearing before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) on the matter will be held at 11:30 a.m., Oct. 14 in the Saltonstall Building on Cambridge Street in Boston.

Selectmen denied Verc's request for a liquor license earlier this summer. At the time, Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said it was not in the public interest to be selling beer and wine in a convenience store on a state highway.

Malvey begins by listening

New school chief steps up to the plate

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

New superintendent Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey has spent his first week on the job touring the schools and listening to anyone and everyone who has something to say.

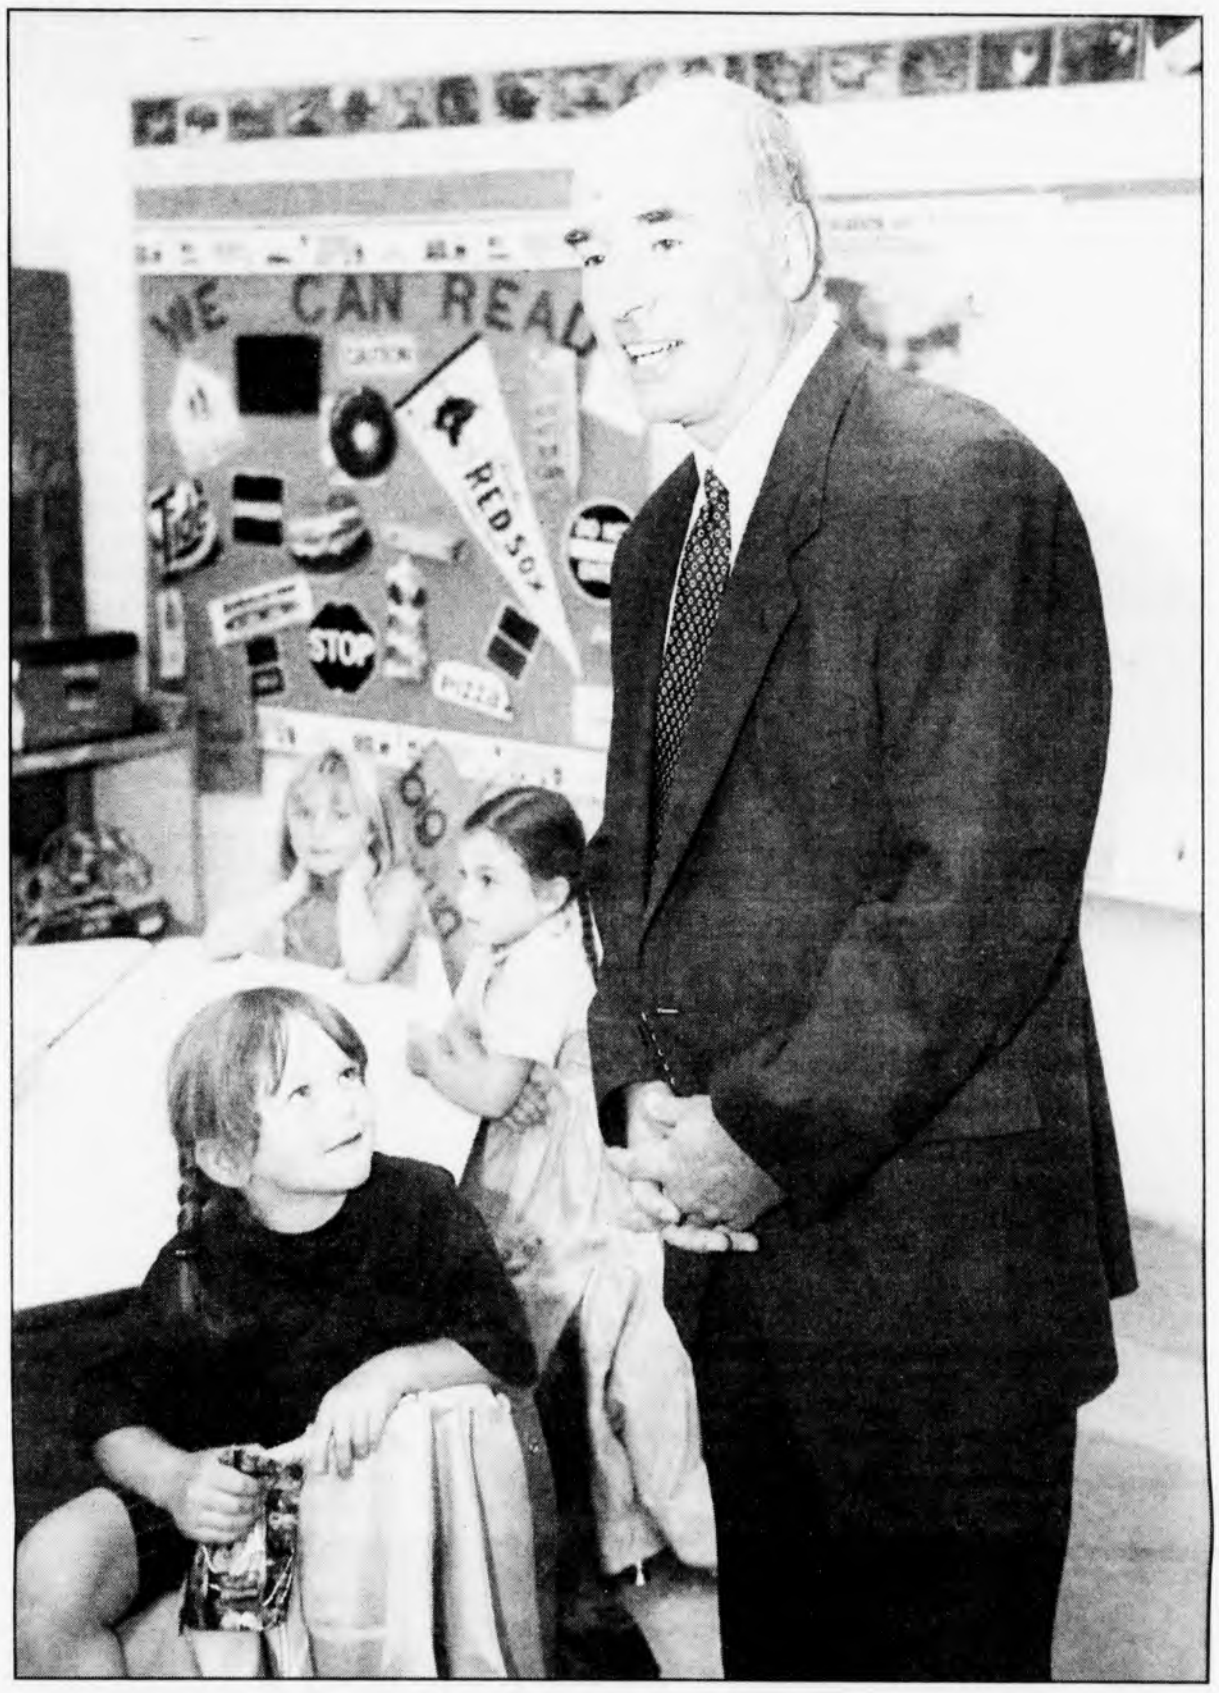
"An analogy to what my first four days has been like is catching meteorites," he said last week. "They're coming past you—some loaded with information, some with facts and some with opinions. You have to decide which ones to catch."

Malvey's introduction to his new faculty officially began with a continental-style breakfast Sept. 3. There he met with staff members and they got a chance to form their first impression of him during his first speech.

"It's always difficult coming in," said Malvey. "Nonetheless, I felt accepted right away and tried to deliver an optimistic message to staff."

His staff may have cause for optimism. The 50-year-old educator's 28 years in the field of education most recently included six years as a superintendent in Griswold, Conn.—a position he accepted because several new facilities were undergoing construction there and he felt that that newness might more easily accommodate innovative methods. It should come as no surprise that Malvey's "construction" background was a strong deciding factor in the school board's unanimous choice of Malvey to take over for departing superintendent Stephen Hart. That background may be useful in a school system which will not only be wired for computers but also has a brand-new school, the new Joseph Osgood Elementary school.

"An analogy to what my first four days has been like is catching meteorites. They're coming past you — some loaded with information, some with facts and some with opinions. You have to decide which ones to catch."
—Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey



"We went through a long search process and got to know Ted during that time," said school board chairman Rick Shea. "I've also worked with him in finalizing his contract with the department. So far, I find him a pleasure to work with. He's direct and professional, has a lot of experience and I think he'll be an asset to the Cohasset schools. I'm sure it will take us some time to work out exactly what direction Ted wants us to go into as he learns about the system and what our issues and needs are. We're working together and I have no doubt that things will go very well."

Malvey hasn't met with the school committee as a group yet. The committee's Sept. 10 meeting will be his first.

School committee members Kathy Ofsthun and Joe McElroy had traveled to Griswold to talk with people about Malvey's work there. "They were very enthusiastic about his background in facilities improvements and technology," said Shea. "He's done a lot of school building construction

Cohasset history in the making

Group tackles last 50 years

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Proms, parades and barbecues — they're history. Or will be. That's why the Committee on Town History wants photographs depicting such events through the years 1950 to 2000 for its third volume of Cohasset's history, due for release in 2001.

The idea initially surfaced in a proposal to the board of selectmen made by the members of the American Legion. Later, the idea was presented in an article at town meeting by historical commission chairman Noel Ripley. It was on the agenda and unanimously approved at the special town meeting in October, 1996.

The committee, once numbering 20 and now down to a more manageable 11, appointed Cohasset's Jackie Dormitzer as author a couple of months ago. E. Victor Bigelow wrote the first volume in 1898 and Burt Pratt's volume left off where Dormitzer's will begin. The late 40s through the yet-to-occur history up to the year 2000 will be covered.

Dormitzer — whose writing skills, interest in things historical and patience about the funding issues surrounding the undertaking impressed the committee enough to hire her — has now put those same people to work for her.

"We're an operative part of Jackie's committee," said committee vice chairman Ernest Grassey, who also serves as president of the town's historical society. Molly Hochkeppel will serve as the book's editor.

Once a month, the group meets up

"We have to realize that a CD-ROM may be a luxury we can't afford. However, if we can get moving pictures of a town meeting in action and the opening ceremonies of the new school, for example, why not?"
— Ernest Grassey, committee member at Lothrop House with its completed "homework assignments" on Little League, the Music Circus and other such town features. Most recently, members have been searching for old copies of the Cottager, a forerunner of the Mariner, but haven't yet met with success.

"It really is a very interesting town to research," Dormitzer said. "People have been wonderful. They've offered materials, photographs — some people have collected articles and given me their clippings. Just in general, people have come forward with information. It makes it fun because you feel you're doing it with the town. It's a community effort."

Photographer David Congalton of Pembroke will take photographs of various sites and certain events in Cohasset during the next couple of years for possible inclusion in the book. Committee members also hope that more people will come forward to donate their photographs or send in anecdotal stories of town characters and town history for the compilation.

"We want to have it be as much anecdotal and lively as we possibly can," explained Wigmore Pierson, chairman of the committee. "Sometimes, history can appear to be boring if it's simply a summation of facts and figures. We're hoping to interview a wide range of individuals with a wide range of backgrounds and interests, all being done by Jackie, to have a lively retelling of the story of our town."

The third volume of Cohasset's history, covering years 1950 to 2000 and due for publication in 2001, will be roughly similar in appearance to the previous two issues. But this time

County plan to add cash to town coffers

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Like most towns in Norfolk County, Cohasset needs more cash for everything from hiring new school teachers to repairing old buildings. But finding the money to meet all municipal needs is difficult given the limits imposed by Proposition 2-1/2, and the inability of many residents to pay higher taxes. The Norfolk County Commissioners have come up with a plan to re-direct a county, home sale excise tax from the state general fund to local communities.

The board of selectmen have thrown their support behind the plan, which would require the approval of the legislature. At last week's meeting, selectmen did not take a formal vote on the proposal but they agreed to send a letter of support to the county commissioners. In a letter to the selectmen, the county commissioners state that the plan could bring an additional $8 million in revenue to Norfolk County alone.

The state collects approximately $50 million per year from the tax, which is paid by home sellers when they sell their houses. The state assesses a tax of $4.56 per thousand of property value on every home sold in the state. The money is paid to the County Registry of Deeds, which sends the revenue to the state. The state places the tax revenue in the general fund.

"The tax is paid at the closing to the Registry of Deeds and then disappears in the black hole of the state general fund," said selectman Tom Callahan, a strong supporter of the county plan. "One thing I talked about during my campaign was landbanks, which assesses a certain percentage of every house sale for land acquisition. A lot of people don't like the idea of that kind of tax, but it's already happening."

The county plan would allow each town to keep the tax for every sale within its borders. Towns would be able to use the money in any way approved by taxpayers.

"If a Cohasset house sells for $100,000, the seller pays a $456 title transfer tax and all that money goes to the state," Callahan said. "With this plan, all that money would flow back to the town, and it could be used for any purpose: land acquisition, education, capital programs— whatever the town wants."

The county plan requires town leaders to acquire at least a majority percent turnout, Douglas said, "I hope that's the case. It would be wonderful if it did."

All three state representative candidates — Garrett Bradley, 28; Josh Cutler, 27; and Walter Murray, 34 — have close ties to Hingham. Bradley spent part of his childhood growing up in Hingham and now lives in town with his wife, Heather. Cutler, a bachelor and Hull resident, has also lived in Hingham where his mother, Suzanne Cutler, still resides. And Murray of Hull, another bachelor, grew up in Hingham and is an HHS graduate.

While all three give incumbent Murray high marks for her constituent service and fault her legislative record — the three men have taken a page from the state representative's book by taking their campaigns directly to the voters. They have worn out shoe leather campaigning door to door and have shaken thousands of hands at local community events.

The stresses of the campaign reached the boiling point on a WATD radio debate last week. Tempers flared as the candidates challenged each other over campaign finances with Bradley's war chest of more than $60,000 getting the most scrutiny from his opponents. Cutler has raised about $30,000 and Murray about $5,000.

"I think the state rep's race with draw them in."

— Hingham Town Clerk Eileen McCracken

There are just under 5,300 registered voters in Cohasset, including about 3,000 unenrolled. Unenrolled voters may specify which ballot — Republican, Democrat or Reform Party — on election day. There are no contests on the Reform Party Ballot. Voters who are registered in a specific party must stick with their party's ballot on primary day.

Hull has 8,700 registered voters with about 5,000 unenrolled. While Hingham and Cohasset have nearly equal numbers of registered Republicans and Democrats — Hull has 740 registered Republicans and 2,717 Democrats.

Hull Town Clerk Janet Bennett said absentee ballots, which are often a gauge of interest, were running ahead of usual for a primary.

"I think it will be a better primary than normal," she said. Bennett said weather is a big factor in Hull because the high school is way out at one end of the town.

McCracken said the middle school could be a deterrent in Hingham where voters are used to the high school, which is under construction. The middle school is on Main St., not far from Queen Ann's Corner.

Bradley, Cutler and Murray list education among their priorities. Bradley puts public safety and tax relief on his top three list; Cutler places the environment and healthcare as top priorities; and Murray said if elected he will push for water rate relief and fairness for car insurance rates. Cutler and Murray support restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad while Bradley opposes it.

vote at town meeting to use the money for any project that would normally requiring borrowing. A two-thirds vote would be required for all other projects. The money would be delivered to the towns monthly from the Registry of Deeds.

The one major obstacle to the plan could be the state's reluctance to part with $50 million in annual tax revenue.

"This would work a lot better for the towns on the local level, but I don't know what the impact would be on the state," Callahan said. "The county wasn't using it, yet it's buildings were falling apart. As far as I know, the state has taken over the maintenance of all county courthouses and Registries of Deeds. The state may argue it needs the money to maintain those buildings."

Stabilization funds are an important tool for towns to have money in reserve for unforeseen events. Recently, the state increased its own stabilization fund to five percent of total revenues. Yet, few towns can afford to set aside that much money.

Of the 27 municipalities in Norfolk County, only Bell, Foxboro, Plymouth, and Wrentham have stabilization funds close to five percent. Most towns maintain stabilization funds less than two percent of total revenue, with many towns unable to set aside more than 0.5 percent. Cohasset's stabilization fund for fiscal year 1997 was $305,500, or 1.7 percent of a total budget of $18.08 million.

In a letter to the commissioners, Town Manager Mark Haddad said the fund would assist the town maintain its buildings and infrastructure.

"Any increase in revenues provided by the state would lessen the need to increase taxes under Proposition 2-1/2 and provide some relief to our taxpayers," he wrote. "The Town strongly supports this legislation and would offer any assistance to the County Commissioners that you feel is necessary to ensure its passage."

Local lobsterman fined for employment practices

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Dana Salvador, a local lobsterman, has been fined $55,600 in penalties for his violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act which protects minors from unfair employment practices, according to published reports.

The fine stems from an Aug. 22, 1995 accident on Salvador's boat, Bessie S., in Cohasset Harbor when a 13-year-old Hull boy nearly severed his foot in the fishing line of a lobster pot trawl.

"I got the call from Salvador when it happened," recalled assistant Cohasset harbormaster Bob Baggs. "He called here to say that he was bringing in a badly injured person. I called the fire and rescue departments so that they would be waiting for him when he came in. Then they med-flighted the boy to Boston."

The U.S. Department of Labor began its investigation of Salvador after the accident and allegedly found that he employed youths for work considered hazardous, such as handling a power-driven hoist on his boat.

Under state law, children aged 14- and 15-years-old may legally work outside school hours, but not before 7 a.m. or after 7 p.m. when school is in session and not after 9 p.m. over summer vacation.

The youths were allegedly working during restricted hours.

"Most of the kids who work on these boats are high school or college students working for the summer," said Baggs. "There's not much need for them in the winter so the lobstermen will usually operate without a sternman to help with the trap."

Under state law, children aged 14- and 15-years-old may legally work outside school hours, but not before 7 a.m. or after 7 p.m. when school is in session and not after 9 p.m. over summer vacation.

Helpers usually empty and re-bait about 10 lobster trawls per boat trip. The bait bag is removed as are the lobsters prior to putting in a new bait bag.

"When they got ready to pull off, this kid got hung up in the line as they were pulling out," said Baggs. "It was a good thing it was a closed transom boat because he got jammed in the back corner and wasn't taken overboard. You have to pay attention. These lines are going in and out all the time and you have to be very careful of what you're doing."

Salvador, an Elm Street resident, could not be reached for comment.

projects. Also, the state of Connecticut provides funding to the school districts for technology and he's been able to oversee the process of adding technology to Griswold for the past several years. That can only help in our setting up our schools technologically."

Malvey worked as a teacher and then assistant principal for 18 years. He then moved up the ranks to assistant superintendent and, finally, superintendent.

Malvey was graduated from Boston State College (now U Mass Boston) in 1970. He then received his master's degree in education from Northeastern University and earned his doctorate in education from George Washington.

Though he has moved to Massachusetts, his family remains behind in Connecticut where the youngest of his five sons is finishing his senior year of high school. "We don't want to uproot him," Malvey explained. "As I've moved through my career, I've always lived where my job is. My family has understood this. Luckily for me, I have family in the area." (Malvey was born in Brighton, Mass., and was graduated from Watertown High School.)

Another bit of luck: Stephen Hart. "I have the utmost respect and compliments to him for helping me understand where to go in the system," said Malvey. "He took the time to chat with me and is an all around true gentleman—a true professional who put a lot of blood, sweat and tears into his work. He's a tough act to follow. Steve has made himself available to me for future questions and I feel that is a real asset to a future superintendent."

Still, Malvey believes there is always room for improvement, both in his new school district and the one he left behind.

Some of the first impressions he picked up while touring his new province:

The town-wide facilities audit will need to be reviewed, analyzed and discussed. Issues surrounding technology will also have to be taken up, including at the fall town meeting.

"There will be some confusion with the opening of any new school," said Malvey, referring to Osgood's late opening due to ongoing construction there. "There may be some confusion but it will work out. We need to stay calm. It's a historic event and it's okay if everything isn't done yet. We can move along from that if people keep a positive attitude about it."

For now, Malvey is concentrating on making the rounds and getting to know key and peripheral players in the school system whose talent and expertise he plans to draw on.

"It's tremendously exciting, coming into a district like Cohasset with such good quality people," he said. "We need to regroup, which may take some time. Things may have been tried in the past and failed, but that doesn't mean we can't try again. The bottom line is I've been hearing a lot from people and want to hear more."

around, the history will sport a dust cover and, in keeping with the advent of the millennium, a CD-ROM.

"We have to realize that a CD-ROM may be a luxury we can't afford," said Grassey. "However, if we can get moving pictures of a town meeting in action and the opening ceremonies of the new school, for example, why not?"

At this time, the committee is working with the initial $5,000 granted at town meeting for the project. Additional funds to be provided by town meeting toward the estimated $80,000 it will cost to produce the latest history will be mitigated, in part, by sales of the book. According to Grassey, the books are expected to cost about $30 each . One thousand sales would bring $30,000 back to the town.

Town manager Mark Haddad will place an article on October's special town meeting warrant for $30,000 to be applied to producing the book. The committee will need two more installments of $30,000 in October of next year and $6,000 in 2000 to keep the project running.

Another aspect of the history that should prove beneficial is its potential use in the classroom for the mandatory local history required by the state.

"This isn't a take-take situation," said Grassey, referring to what the town stands to gain in return on their investment in the book.

Minutes are kept of the sometimes lengthy committee meetings in Lothrop house where, several months ago, Grassey found the 1956 publication notes and minutes from the 1898 publication in the historical society's files, handwritten.

The files may serve as a reminder to Grassey about the historical process as history.

"There's kind of an eerie feeling of power here that we're not taking lightly," he said. "We're deciding what is to be historically preserved. That's the kind of things that you feel nervous about, when you consider what you're including or excluding.

"This would be too much responsibility for one person," Grassey said. "The Hatfields could conceivably write the McCoys out of the book for whatever personal reasons they have and that would be wrong. We're fortunate to have a very open minded committee who is aware that there are certainly different points of view that may seem innocent and innocuous, but not to those who see it differently."

Grassey has gathered 1975 Centennial slides which he is sorting through to choose some for the committee to view. Anyone interested in donating photos can contact Pierson at 383-6940.

"We'll find out in October if we can do this on a shoestring or if we can do it properly," Grassey said. "I think that's important. It's an extinction thing. Once the opportunity is lost, it may be lost forever. We're talking about interviewing contemporary people now, while they're alive. We need that, and if we don't have that, it may be lost forever. It is important for the committee, the town and future residents to save Cohasset forever."

Cohasset Harbor dredging project will begin any day

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

It took years of hard work, special enabling legislation and $1.2 million of federal funding, but the dredging of Cohasset Harbor is set to begin. More than 200 boats have been moved from the harbor to temporary quarters, mainly at the Cohasset Yacht Club and Peter Roy's new dock. The equipment for dredging has been mobilized and moved to the harbor with the exception of a dredge scow which will remove material to a disposal site. And the harbor is strangely empty for late summer.

"It's really like a ghost harbor out there," said Harbormaster John Winters. "It's really too early in the season for the harbor to be this empty."

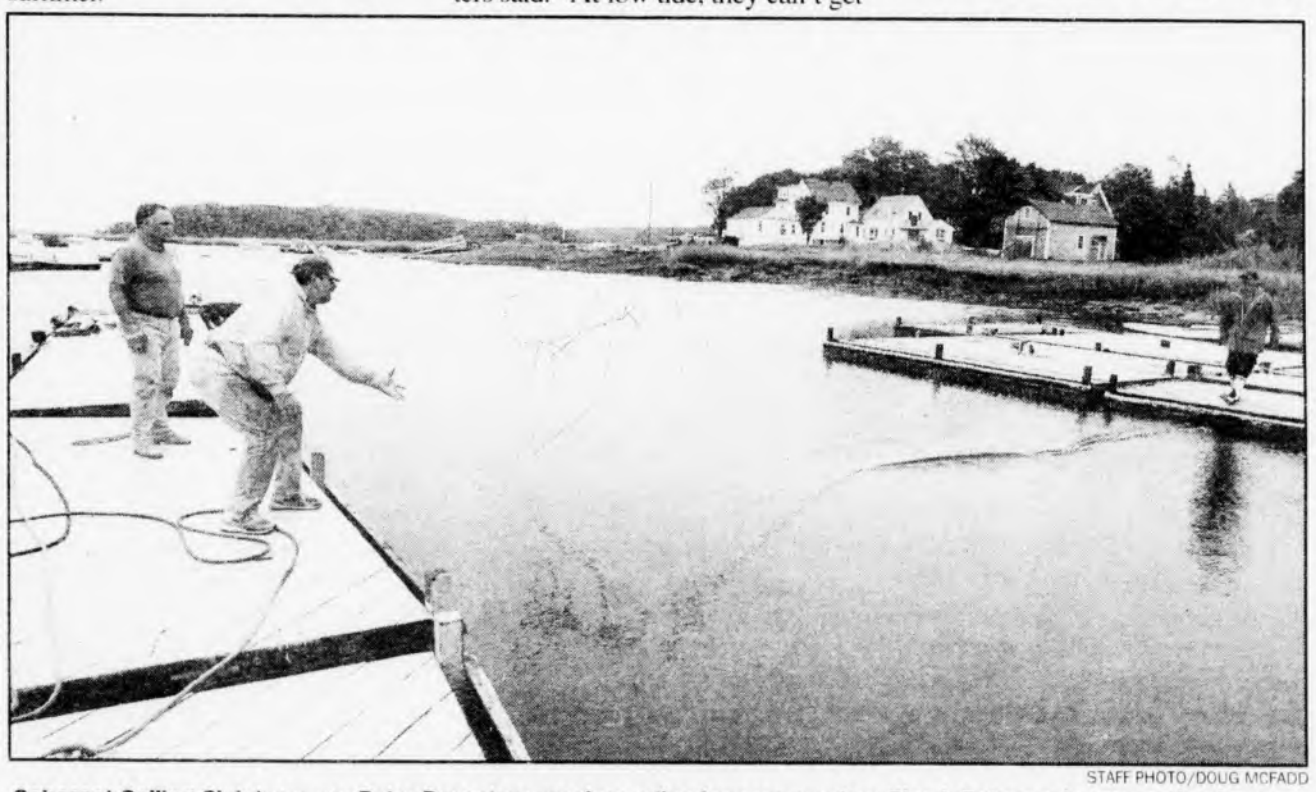
Winters said dredging could begin as early as Friday, although he isn't sure when work will begin. Burnham Associates of Salem will perform the dredging beginning in the channel for the first two weeks of dredging. While dredging is performed in the channel, 15 lobster boats will remain moored in the harbor.

"The lobster fishermen are the reason we're dredging the harbor," Winters said. "At low tide, they can't get their boats out."

"The boats are out, the contractor has finished removing the moorings, and the equipment is mobilized."

— Town Manager Mark Haddad

Burnham Associates submitted the lowest bid for the project. Five companies bid on the dredging, with the highest coming in at $2.5 million. The dredging project will remove approximately 115,000 cubic yards of sediment, including the removal of 8,000 cubic yards of material outside the federal navigation area at the town's request. The dredged material will be taken to a Massachusetts Bay Disposal Site 28 miles out to sea.



The material will be capped with coarse sand as an experiment to see the effects of underwater capping.

The project must be completed by Jan. 15 because of problems in the winter with the cold weather and winter conditions. If the job isn't finished on time, its completion will have to be delayed until next autumn, although Winters didn't think that would happen.

Winters said everyone had provided "an extreme amount of cooperation" helping the town clear the boats out of the water and preparing for the project.

Town Manager Mark Haddad was equally pleased with the cooperation from everyone.

"The boats are out, the contractor has finished removing the moorings, and the equipment is mobilized," Haddad said. "It's fantastic. Everything has gone extremely well and everyone cooperated tremendously. Dredging should begin any day now."

With the exception of lobster boats all boats and docks are now out of the harbor to facilitate the long-awaited dredging project.

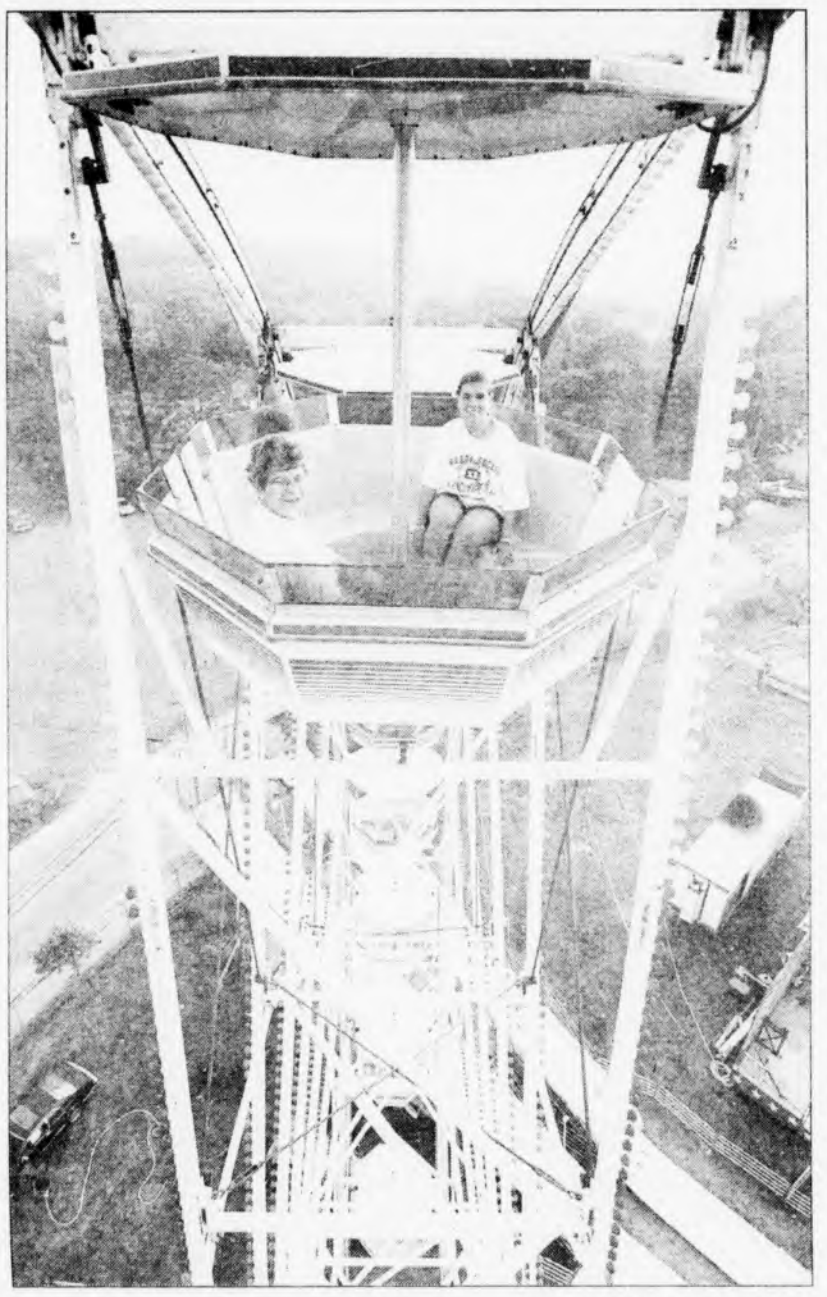
AROUND TOWN

PROUD GRANDPATRENTS

Phyllis and Steve Leighton have wonderful news to share with all, they are the proud grandparents of a baby girl! Her name is Haley Leighton Ducey, she was born on July 29 at 10:32 a.m. and she weighed 8 lbs. 8 oz. Hayley's mom and dad, Janice and Paul Ducey of Watch Hill Drive in Scituate, are thrilled of course, but we'll bet that her big sister, Hanna, is just as happy! We hear that she is already a big help with Hanna and just loves her like mad! Of course Hayley's maternal grandmother Frances Ducey of Scituate, is just bursting with pride too. Congratulations to all of you, what a wonderful family!

CLASS OF 1973 REUNION



Can you believe that there is going to be another CHS reunion? This time it is the Class of 1973, and Rick Sawyer is heading the committee to make it a success! It is to take place on Oct. 10, at the Cohasset Community Center at 7 p.m. Rick gave me a call the other day, he really needs your help — there were classmates that he couldn't find current addresses for, or that he may have an incorrect address for, and he hopes that when you see a name that you can help with, you'll be in touch with him, here they are: Randy Boscow, Andy Cifrino, Susan Coleman, Suzanne Cone, Vaughn Deal, Jill Dunaen, Anne Enos, Karen Farrell, Susan Frenald, Joe Fisher, Kathy Fox, John Francis, Thomas Glynn, Marianne Haskell, Bob Higgins, Steve Hubbell, Marcia Jordan, David Karoff, Bill Kearney, Stephen Keefe, Linda Kraft, Joan Lantz, Karen Linsley, Bill Lord, Amy Maclure, Valerie Madge, Beverly McLaughlin, Bryan Miller, Stephern Moulton, Kathy Oliver, Carol Pine, Patty Paterson, Rebecca Patrolia, Brian Prendergast, Stephen Smith, John Spinzola, Eileen Sullivan, Frank Sullivan, Linda Thayer Nason, Phil Thayer, Debbie Thompson, Judy Topper, Greta Towle, Liz Viola, Ron Watkins, Willie White, Jean Willwerth, Robin Wilmore and Alison Woods. I know that several of you will know there whereabouts, give Rick some help in getting in touch with them so that he can make a huge success out of their 25th reunion. You can write him at 39 Black Duck Cart way, Brewster, 02631; or email h grouper@capecod.net; or call him days at (508) 790-0032, evenings at (508) 385-7561; or Fax him at (508) 771-8991.

DEAN'S LIST

Nicole L. Peterson, a member of the William Smith Class of '00, has been named to the Dean's List for the 1997-1998 academic year. Nicole is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peterson, and we congratulate you for all of your hard work!

HONORS GRADUATE

On the subject of academics, have you heard about Diane Saldi? Well, her extremely proud Aunt, Maria Saldi is so excited to tell all about her — Diane graduated from Suffolk University Summa Cum Laude! She was an Archer Fellow (honor society) and admitted to Delta Alpha Phi Honor Society. Not only that, she was Valedictorian of the School of Communication and Journalism. WOW!

And if you think that Diane's Aunt Maria is proud of her, how do you think that her Grandmother, Gustina Saldi must be — yep, bursting with pride too! Congratulations to you Diane, we know that your life in the business world will be productive indeed.

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

We extend happy belated birthday greetings to Babe Trott — she was 95 on Sept. 7 and we surely hope that the event was a wonderful one (for a wonderful lady).

BERKLEE GRADUATE

Singer, composer and lyricist Carly Simon congratulated 535 graduates from 43 countries at Berlkee College of Music's 1998 Commencement at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston. Brendan Kendall Kinchla received a bachelor of music in performance, a major designed to equip him with the necessary skills to thrive in the competitive music industry market. We are certain to hear more about Brendan in the future, and wish him well in all of his endeavors.

PERSONALIZED INSTRUCTION

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, resumes her lesson-schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset. Her personalized instruction has attracted students who have had careers in music, while others play just for pleasure. Mrs. Daniels is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, magna cum laude. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She has taught in Swampscott, Lincoln, Norwood and currently in Cohasset. As part of each lesson, she incorporates music theory, harmony, rhythm study and expression. She encourages her students to improvise and compose, and strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts through the medium of piano. For further information, call 383-1487

Summer readers honored

Suzanne Terry, children's librarian at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, announces that a total of 111 children participated in this summer's "Unlock the Mystery-Read" program. Fifty-eight children (to date) received a free paperback book of their choice for achieving their summer reading goal.

Children who participated are listed as follows alphabetically with siblings: Lauren Allen, Ellie Baumgarten, Lindsay Blake, Austin and Logan Breslow, Johanna and Michaela Brophy, Thomas, Ana and Maria Buckley, Hannah Burgess, Katie Callahan, Alyssa and Ben Campbell, Laura, Sara and Melissa Campedelli, Alex and John Coffey, Cameron Pope, Alison and Amy Costa, Michele Daniels, Margaux and Chris Donze, Emily Dormitzer, Brittany Dunn, Kenzie Durkin, Rebecca and William Evans, Elizabeth and Mary Fegreus, Andrew and Stephanie Fewsmith, Samantha and Sydney Fortin, Phillip Galligan, Sam Game, Jamie Genovese, Margaret and Tara Goodwin, Aisling Guinee, Mackenzie and Torey Hart, Katie and Robbie Hillman, Lesen Haracz, Brendan and Patrick Horigan, Alexander and Natalie Hunt, Vi Huynh, Thompson and Whitney Jaffe, Michael King, Caitlin, Mimi and Robbie Mahoney, Katina Martone, Kate McBride, James and Kate McKelvey, Ryan McLellan, Keith and Neil Mier, Kristin and Michael Monaco, Alexander and Katie Muir, Alyssa Mullen, Polly and Wis Murray, Emily Nash, Callie and Charlie Neaves, Caitlin and Kevin O'Connell, Megan Parnell, Maggie Pilczak, Claire, Grace and Paul Pozniak, Colleen and Megan Richardson, Dominique and Gabrielle Rioux, Carly and Jay Salerno, Emily and Nicholas Savage, Emilie Schmidt, Alex, Kiki and Max Shipp, Graham and Mollie Sinclaire, Tim Smith, Jennifer and Virginia Spofford, John Sturino, Kaleigh, Mariel and McKenna Teague, Amanda Thompson, Molly Trisler, Chelsea Uhl, and Frank and Jessica Wheelwright.

All children of the reading program are encouraged to pick up their keyrings at this time and those who have earned a free paperback book should come in now and select one. A certificate signed by the Massachusetts governor will be issued in school sometime in September to every child who participated. See you next summer!

Guess the Keys contest

There were five children who won by coming in close for the "Guess How Many Keys?" contest. Those who came closest were announced at the closing ice cream activities. The exact total was 208 keys. Four winners from Cohasset receiving prizes for their tied guess of 206 were: Evan Deutsch, Philip Galligan, Alexander Hunt and Michael Monaco. Katherine Tavares, another prize winner from Weymouth, guessed 210 and was the fifth tying individual. Congratulations to all!

Story hour sign-up

Registration for the preschool story hour at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are still being accepted by the children's librarian. Story hours will be held Thursday afternoons at 1 p.m., Sept. 17 and 24, Oct. 1, 22, 29 and Nov. 5. Another session will be held Friday mornings at 10 a.m., Sept. 18 and 25, Oct. 2, 23, 30 and Nov. 6. Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories, songs and crafts. Children must be at least 3-1/2 years old to participate. To register, call the children's room at 383-1348.

OPINION

Primary considerations

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of this and 110 other newspapers in Massachusetts, has a local focus and a broad reach. Our local focus keeps us in close touch with the concerns of Eastern Massachusetts residents. Our reach, serving communities from Central Massachusetts to Boston, from the Cape to the New Hampshire line, puts us in a unique position to comment on issues facing all citizens of the Commonwealth.

We have — by a wide margin — more reporters on the streets than any news organization in Massachusetts. With the ability to report on statewide issues comes the opportunity, in fact, the obligation, to offer our reasoned judgment on decisions that face state officials and voters.

With that part of our mission in mind, CNC's editorial board, consisting of the CNC president, CNC's editor-in-chief and the senior editors of all our newspapers, has met with all the candidates for governor and attorney general in the September 15 primary. After careful consideration, we offer these endorsements as a service to our readers.

Republican for governor: Cellucci

These last eight years have been good for Massachusetts. The economy is as strong, with rising wages and low unemployment. Taxes have been cut and welfare rolls trimmed. Anyone who remembers the financial and political ills that had paralyzed state government in 1990 has witnessed a remarkable turnaround.

This success owes much to the team we elected to the governor's office eight years ago. Gov. William Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci imposed the fiscal discipline that righted a foundering state treasury. They worked effectively with a Legislature dominated by Democrats to launch significant initiatives on crime, welfare, the environment and education. Most important, they worked diligently, changing state laws and bureaucratic attitudes, to remedy the state economy's greatest weakness: the high cost of doing business in Massachusetts.

This administration should be proud of its accomplishments, and Paul Cellucci, who hopes to continue its work, takes a strong case to Republican voters in the September 15 primary.

Not that Cellucci's record has been flawless, as his challenger, state Treasurer Joe Malone, has strived to point out. Spending on the Big Dig is out of control. Weld and Cellucci tamed the budget busters, but they haven't tamed the bureaucracy. In his first year as acting governor, too many of Cellucci's decisions seem to have been made by a candidate, not a leader.

Malone, personable and articulate, has shown sound fiscal management in the treasurer's office and dramatically downsized the bloated operations he took over in 1990. But his negative campaign against Cellucci has hurt his good-guy image and his attacks on state spending over the last four years are disingenuous. The increases he decries are in fact long-deferred investments in education, infrastructure and the state's rainy day fund that are, for the most part, responsible and overdue.

Cellucci has a tough act to follow. Bill Weld's engaging personality earned him respect and affection, even from voters who didn't care for his politics. Cellucci doesn't have Weld's wry wit, but he has his record. Never has a lieutenant governor been closer to the action. Cellucci was there for every meeting, in on every decision, part of every crisis.

Cellucci is more than the second half of Weld/Cellucci. He has a proud record of public service dating back to his start as a Hudson selectman. He has been a fiscal conservative and a moderate on social issues throughout his career, in the tradition of this state's most successful Republican office-holders. He's a hard-worker who knows every corner of state government, and a man of commitment and integrity.

Paul Cellucci is no accidental governor. He has been at the heart of the administration that has done remarkable things for Massachusetts over the last eight years. He has earned the right to bring the Weld-Cellucci record before voters in November, and we are pleased to give him Community Newspaper Company's endorsement.

Democrat for governor: Harshbarger

If Bill Weld casts a shadow on the Republican race, the Democratic field is haunted by the ghost of Michael Dukakis. The Republican nominee can be expected to warn, as Cellucci did in the Springfield debate, of a Democratic governor who'll "try to outspend the Legislature."

To exorcise that ghost, the Democratic nominee must be more than bright, capable and well-intentioned. He or she must have the conviction, ability and strength of character to set an agenda, challenge the Legislature and push an often-balky bureaucracy. The quality most needed in a Democratic nominee: leadership.

Scott Harshbarger is such a leader. As Middlesex County district attorney and state attorney general, he has built a record of accomplishment on issues like domestic violence, white collar crime, victim assistance and juvenile crime prevention. His executive experience is strong, his policy proposals are well thought-out.

More important than his policy prescriptions is his record of character and integrity. We give him some credit for standing up to Big Tobacco, but more for taking on the old-line Democrats who threatened to cut his career short for investigating public corruption by one of their own. He is independent, hard-working and serious-minded — and we've never seen him betray his principles.

There are other good candidates in this race, particularly former state Sen. Pat McGovern. As Senate Ways & Means Committee chair in the Dukakis era, she impressed many with her grasp of the state's fiscal predicament, but it fell to others to tame the "budget busters" she identified. Since leaving office in 1992, she has done little to broaden her resume. We welcome her back to state politics, and hope she'll stay involved in public service, but we cannot offer her our endorsement.

CNC's vote must go to Scott Harshbarger, whose experience, ability and character make him clearly the best candidate to carry the Democrats' banner in the governor's race

Democrat for attorney general: Reilly

The two Democrats competing for their party's nomination for state Attorney General offer distinct visions of the job that are as different as their resumes.

Middlesex County District Attorney Tom Reilly is a prosecutor. He sees the Attorney General's office as a law firm, not that much larger than the one he's been running since 1990, to be used first to bring criminals to justice and relief to their victims. State Sen. Lois Pines is a legislator who has spent her career formulating public policy. She sees the Attorney General's office as a regulatory agency, with broad powers that can be used on behalf of Massachusetts consumers.

The Attorney General's office is, of course, all of the above. It is a law firm, involved in both civil and criminal litigation. It is a regulatory agency with responsibilities ranging from public charities, consumer protection and health care. And it's a public policy organization, which can bring legal and regulatory authority to bear on a wide range of issues.

The question facing Democratic voters is which of these talented individuals can make the office function effectively in all of its roles. In our view, Tom Reilly has the knowledge, experience and character to be an excellent Attorney General.

Reilly is a straight-arrow prosecutor, with an unquestioned commitment to justice. That dedication, more than any quest for political advantage, prompted his high-profile involvement in the Eddie O'Brien and Louise Woodward cases. He's also an experienced administrator, having run a firm of 120 lawyers handling 35,000 new cases a year, serving a quarter of the state's population. He's a policy innovator as well. His Community Based Justice program, which brings police, prosecutors, school administrators and guidance counselors in Middlesex towns together once a week to identify at-risk youths and intervene before they become crime statistics, is a model for the state and nation. We have no doubt he'd bring this same creativity to bear on the wider range of issues facing the Attorney General.

Pines speaks with authority on public policy issues like the environment, consumer protection, economic development and women's rights. The emphasis on health care regulation in her campaign has struck a nerve among voters nervous about the power now wielded by HMOs. But hers is the record of a legislator, not an executive, and we fear she'll be unable to build the coalitions needed to translate her position papers into action.

We have no such hesitation with her opponent. Tom Reilly would continue the strong, principled leadership Scott Harshbarger brought to the Attorney General's office, and we offer him CNC's endorsement for the Democratic nomination.

Social Service League held in high regard

Ms. Motoko Deane, President
Social Service League
16 Highland Ave.

DEAR PRESIDENT DEANE:

As Executive Director of the Cohasset Housing Authority, I have had many occasions over the last four years to benefit in numerous ways from skills of the staff of the Social Service League.

The League itself is such a unique organization in its far-reaching services, compassion and longevity. I don't believe there is another caregiver quite like you.

The housing authority staff and particularly the residents have received individual care in their homes, education and health maintenance techniques through the "Keep Well Clinics," a willing ear when times are troubled, always with a loving touch.

Our staff can count on the League when there is concern for an individual's mental or physical well-being and during each visit a comforting climate is created that endures long after the visit is over.

From the Authority there is such high regard for the League's people and its programs that words cannot convey our deepest feelings. So often kindness can be taken for granted and we would like your caregivers to know just how much they are appreciated. Please accept our long-overdue salute for a job well done with the very sincerest gratitude of the Board of Commissioners and staff of the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Marilyn A. LeBlanc
Executive Director

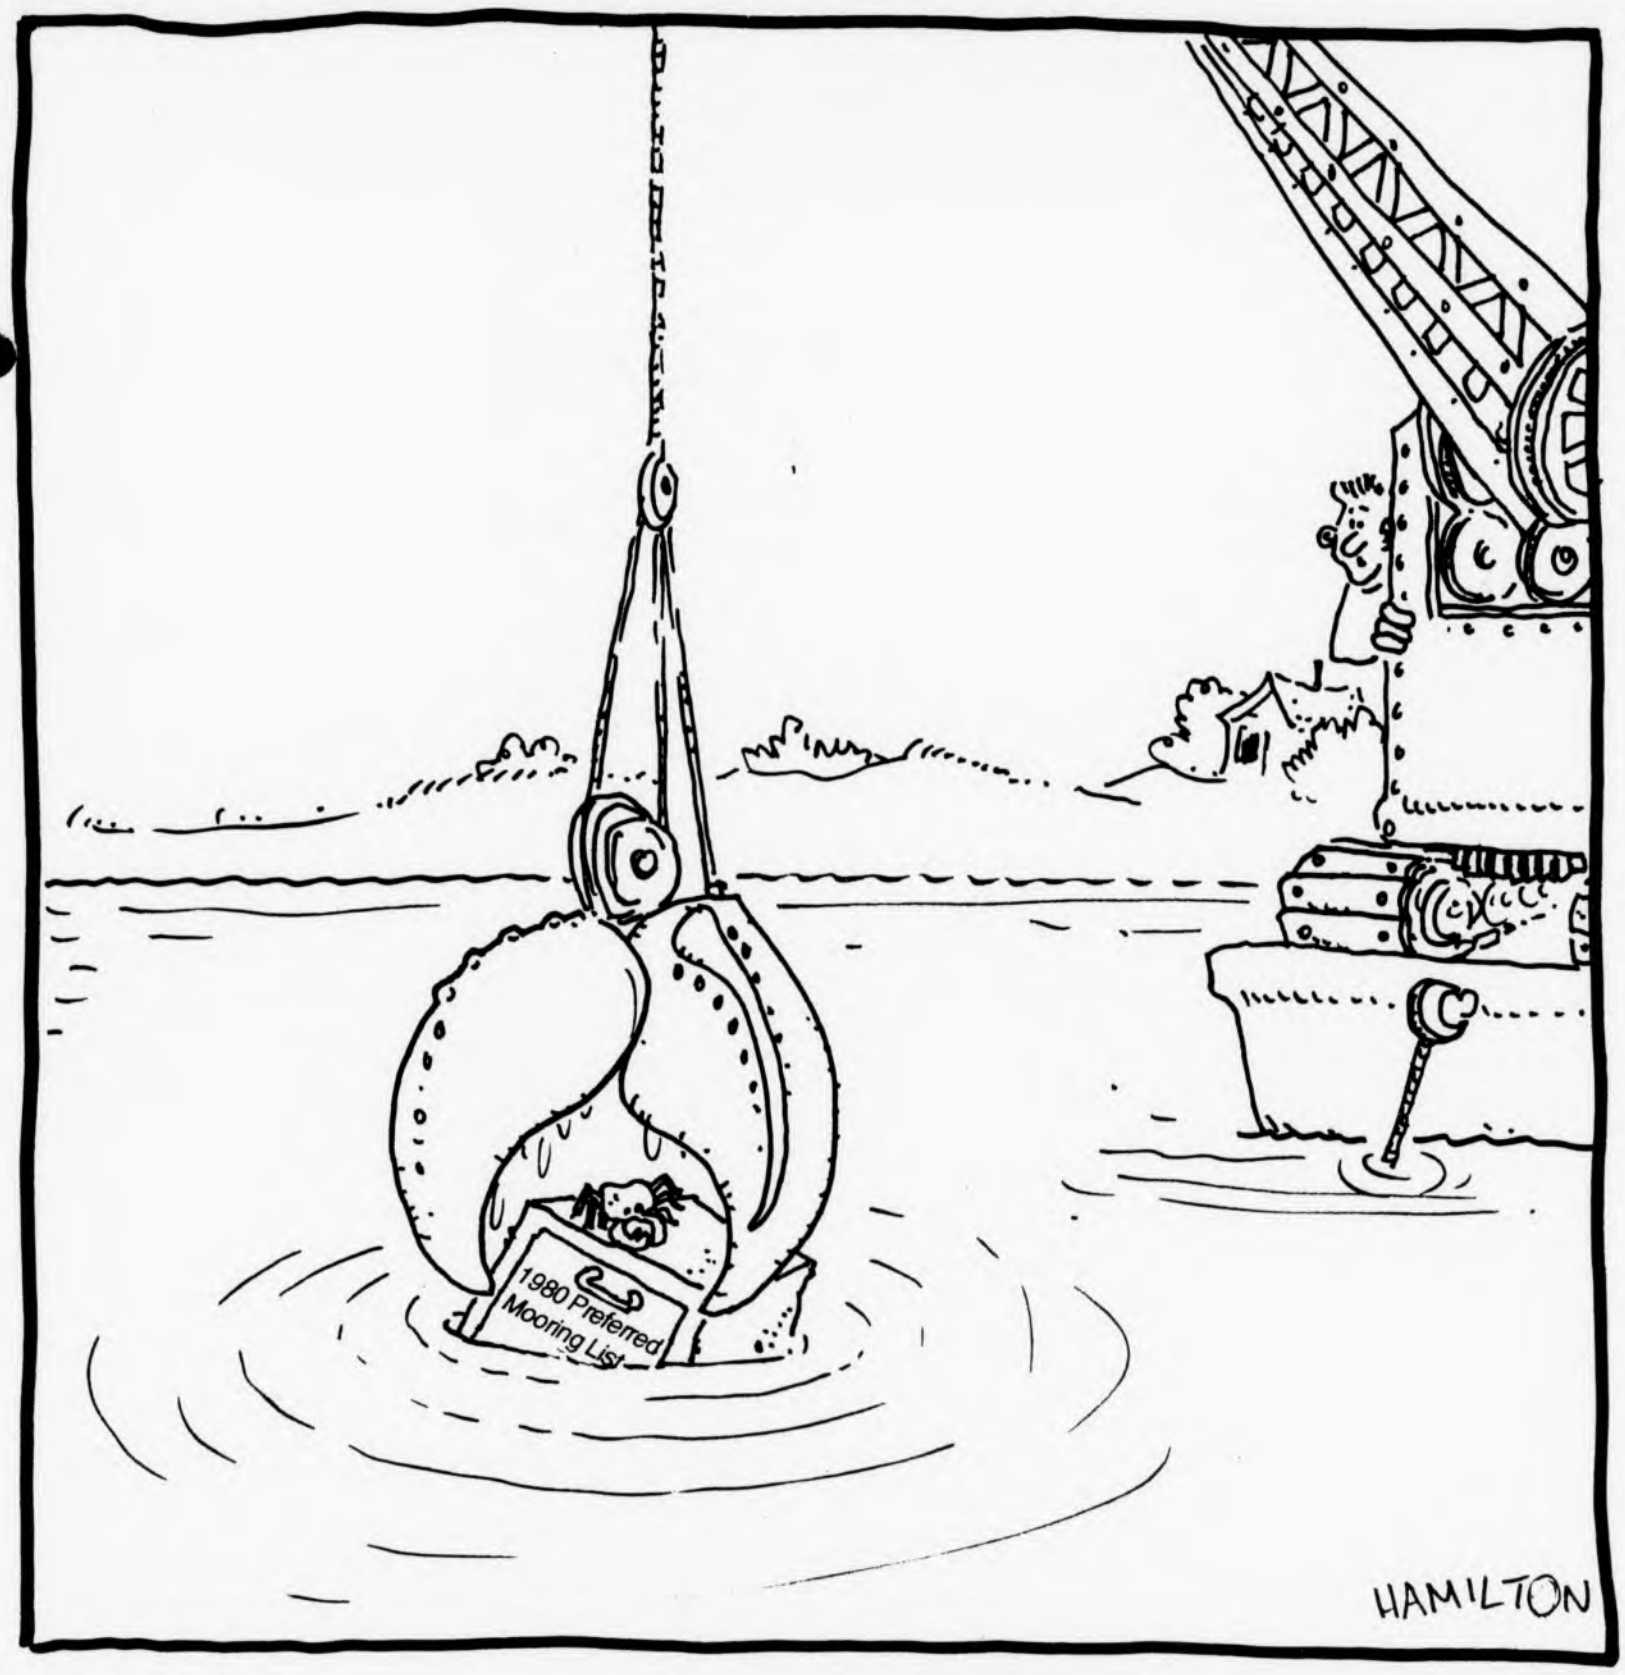
Workshop on wastewater alternatives

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to those of you who voted for me for the Board of Health during Cohasset's last election. I won with a plurality of more than three to one, perhaps because I ran unopposed, which always helps. Nevertheless, I am grateful that so many voted for me. I take it as an expression of good will, and since my campaign contained several promises, I would like to update you on my progress in keeping them.

One of my campaign pledges contained the following statement:

It is important for elected officials to promote the creation of an educated citizenry aware of the responsibilities and dangers as well as benefits of living in a modern suburban community. There's an appropriate solution for most of the problems Cohasset faces. As members of the important sewer and health committees, we must:



1. know the available real options; otherwise we run the risk of expensive litigation.

2. present these options so the citizens make up an informed populace.

3. have an accurate notion of the costs of acting on the options.

In response to this pledge, the Health Board has initiated a periodic newsletter called Health Notes, which is available at the board's office in the Town Hall, and in some local media. In addition, we are sponsoring a workshop on wastewater alternatives at the Cohasset

What to do with a million dollar baseball

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I don't know about you but Jason Duncan and Michael Pitt have given me a new appreciation of people.

Jason, 11, is the youngster who ran down Mark McGwire's record-tying 56th home run ball in the center field stands at Miami's Pro-Player Park the other day and gave it back to the Cardinal slugger.

"I knew it would mean a lot to him," he said.

Michael, 17, is the young man who, two innings later, came up with McGwire's record-breaking 57th home run ball 20 feet from the same spot in the stands and, after turning down $5,000 for it, gave it back also.

It gives you a new perspective on your fellow man, doesn't it"

Maybe we're not all as greedy as the fan who held for a $5,000 ransom the ball that Barry Bonds socked for his 400th career home run or the folks in New York who priced themselves out of the market for the balls that McGwire hit for his 50th and 51st homers.

If McGwire's 56th and 57th four-baggers simply tied and surpassed Hack Wilson's National League record what price the balls that Mark slugs out of the park for his 61st and 62nd homers to tie and break Roger Maris' record for all the major leagues?

(He may have done it by now so pretend he didn't and read on.)

Some of the sports talk shows have placed the value at $1 million, the equivalent of the gross national product of a number of third world nations, which is enough to turn many otherwise honest minds to larcenous thoughts.

How many fans are going to turn up at the next St. Louis Cardinal's game and sit in left center field armed with an official National League baseball to be pulled out and waved for the TV cameras as soon as McGwire hits one near them?

How do you know you've got the real ball or are you like the actor Charlie Sheen, who paid $92,000 for the ball that was said to have gone through Bill Buckner's wickets in the 1986 World Series only to learn that it wasn't?

But the larger question is this:

What do you do with a baseball after you've spent $1 million, or even a cut-rate $5,000, for it?

Do you put it on display in your living room and charge a buck or so just to let people look at it?

Do you lock it in a bank vault and take it out to look at once a year on the anniversary of its acquisition?

I can be safely said to be an authority on this because I got a ball once, a foul, not a homer, at Fenway Park.

I was there with a group of Quincy Patriot Ledger boys and we had seats in the grandstand because the Sox didn't even come close to selling out the park in those days.

A Cleveland Indian outfielder of no particular distinction named Julius "Moose" Solters hit this enormous foul ball that bounced off the facade of the park roof and came to rest in the seat beside me.

Quickly, I put my hand over it and it was mine.

For a couple of days, I was the big attraction in the neighborhood as friends and strangers dropped by to see the kid who got a ball at Fenway and perhaps even heft the official big league ball themselves.

I think I even recounted for them the incredible diving catch I made to get it.

But, for 13-yer-old boys, shiny new baseballs are hard to resist.

Within the week, we had the ball outside and were tossing it around the yard, the same ball Fritz Ostermueller or Rube Walberg or Lefty Grove or whoever had served up to the Moose that day.

Then it was introduced into one of our intermediate sandlot ball games (unsupervised by adults, I may point out) and, by the end of the season, the cover was off and it was wrapped in black friction tape like the rest of our balls.

At least it didn't cost us a million dollars.

HEALTH NOTES

Septics, Sewers, or Something else

A newsletter created by a volunteer staff issued periodically by the Board of Health.

A reminder about next week's Workshop on wastewater management at 7 pm at the Cohasset High School on Wednesday Sept. 16. There's something for everyone in Cohasset in this informative and novel accumulation of talent about wastewater. A brief listing of the speakers and their topics is given below.

Topic		Name
Choices in On-Site Wastewater Management		John Rowland

John currently represents J&R Sales & Service, a manufacturer's representative to the wastewater treatment industry He works with, and coordinates the needs of engineers developing wastewater disposal solutions. his presentation will discuss the impact on economics environment, appearance and utility of the various wastewater choices available.

Alternative Wastewater Treatment Systems; The 100 Pond Street Experience	F.H. Mahoney - E-Systems	Kieth Dobie
Wastewater and the Environment.	Sitec	Rod Gaskill
Perkable Land, Cohasset's Untapped Resource. Septic Maintainance; Septic additives; .		Joe Godzik

Joe, Health Officer for the Cohasset Board of Health will be talking about Cohasset's unique wastewater treatment opportunities as well as some ways you can ensure proper operation of your system.

We're from the DEP and we're here to help you	DEP Bureau of Resource Protection	John Higgins
Wastewater treatment, A Town Wide problem.		Ginny Roach

Ginny is with Camp Dresser McKee, and will be talking about wastewater studies in other towns where exploration of treatment options led to the least costly and most efficient solutions.

Engineering your Wastewater Treatment Needs.	Neil Murphy Associates	Neil Murphy
Biologically Accelerated Wastewater Treatment		Stephen Nelson

Steve is currently president of Clearwater Recovery in Rockland, which installs and repairs septic systems. His experience includes operating wastewater treatment plants, including the Cohasset facility. His specialty is installing and servicing innovative/alternative Title 5 wastewater treatment systems. He distributes the "Jet" septic treatment system. Steve says that a shared system may have advantages over a town wide sewer system.

Decentralized Wastewater Management; Do we really need an inspection every time we sell a house? Wayne Sawchuk

Wayne is president of Olde Forge Builders, and has proposed and developed innovative alternatives to conventional wastewater treatment strategies. He has broad familiarity with the politics of waste removal and understands the economics of initiating changes in a town to realize cost effective solutions to wastewater problems. He will be talking about Decentralized wastewater management strategies and implementing them in a town like Cohasset.

Septic Systems to Fit the Property	Rosano Davis	Bryan Davis
Just Exactly What is Under Your Lawn	Scituate Ray Precast	Dean Dwyer
Zero Effluent Discharge Alternatives and the Wastewater Garden		David Del Porto

David is President of Sustainable Strategies which develops systems for drastically reducing the amount of effluent which is returned to the environment by various methods of conservation and treatment. He has been in the business for 25 years, and also manages ECCO which distributes components for building zero discharge alternatives to current systems.

In defense of Nancy Buckley

In a letter to the Mariner (August 27), Cohasset resident Agnes McCann expressed the view that Nancy Buckley was exploiting the death of the Abington teenager killed on the Old Colony Line in order to promote her own cause.

If Buckley's cause is to look out for the health and well-being of our children, then I find it hard to understand how McCann can object to her crusade against Greenbush. Buckley knows, as all parents do, that children do not always exercise the best judgment in dangerous situations. She is only pointing to the obvious; if a grade crossing accident could happen in Abington, imagine the potential danger from 43 Greenbush grade crossings.

As parents, we often use the argument, "let this be an example to you", which is a far better argument than, "I told you so." Whenever a young person is killed in a high-speed auto accident, we are quick to remind our own children that "speed kills." If alcohol is involved, we tell them not to drink and drive. Rarely are we so cavalier as to refer to an auto accident involving young people as "human error", as McCann does in referring to the tragedy in Abington. It is far more complex than that and there is no parent among us who would not do everything in his or her power to prevent such accidents from happening. And yet McCann fails to see that Nancy Buckley's motive is to simply keep our children out of harm's way.

Does McCann realize that 43 grade crossings in 17.2 miles is the second highest concentration of grade crossings in the country on a commuter rail line? Has she ever looked at the fatality statistics for the other line? Nancy Buckley has, and I'm sure it is one of the underlying reasons why she is so committed to resisting Greenbush. I, for one, have nothing but admiration for her efforts to get South Shore residents to better understand the dangers of grade crossings. She has compiled a great deal of very compelling data and I believe it is the responsibility of all South Shore residents to factor information of this type into their decision on Greenbush.

One of the continuing problems with the Greenbush controversy is that most train proponents take McCann's simplistic view that all public transportation is good and that those who resist Greenbush are NIMBY's standing in the way of progress. In so doing they turn their minds off to any opposing arguments, however cogent they might be. McCann's comparison of Greenbush to the Wellesley line, for example, totally overlooks the fact that the rail line in Wellesley travels through a submerged corridor through much of the town. Without grade crossings, constant whistle blowing is avoided and, most importantly, the potential for accidents is greatly reduced.

On the South Shore, and particularly in Hingham, the impact of commuter rail would be vastly different. With its numerous grade crossings, Greenbush would pose a far greater risk to young people who, despite our best efforts, will continue to exercise poor judgment when it comes to beating the odds. Call it human error if you will, but, what really matters is that tragedies such as the one that took the life of the young girl in Abington will most certainly follow in the wake of Greenbush.

McCann's argument that trains are a "perfectly civilized method of public transportation" is another oversimplification. In point of fact, "electric-powered" trains traveling through safe corridors are a civilized mode of transportation. Diesel-powered trains passing at ground level through densely populated American communities are not. Greenbush proponents, who often refer to the success of rail systems in Europe, would be hard pressed to identify one "diesel-powered" public transportation system built in Europe or Japan in the past ten years. Nor would they find any system with such a high concentration of grade crossings.

The EPA's recent crack-down on the diesel locomotive industry and the federal government's program to pay the railroads to eliminate grade crossings should be proof enough to McCann and other train proponents that Greenbush is far from the best transportation alternative for the South Shore. It is, without question, the quick fix, but, if the past has taught us anything about safety and environmental issues, it is that we will pay dearly in the long run for having opted for the easy way out.

Years from now, when Greenbush has hopefully been laid to rest in the dinosaur's graveyard it deserves, I suspect that a more well-thought-out transportation solution will be serving the needs of South Shore residents. Perhaps then the efforts of Nancy Buckley and people like her will be more appreciated.

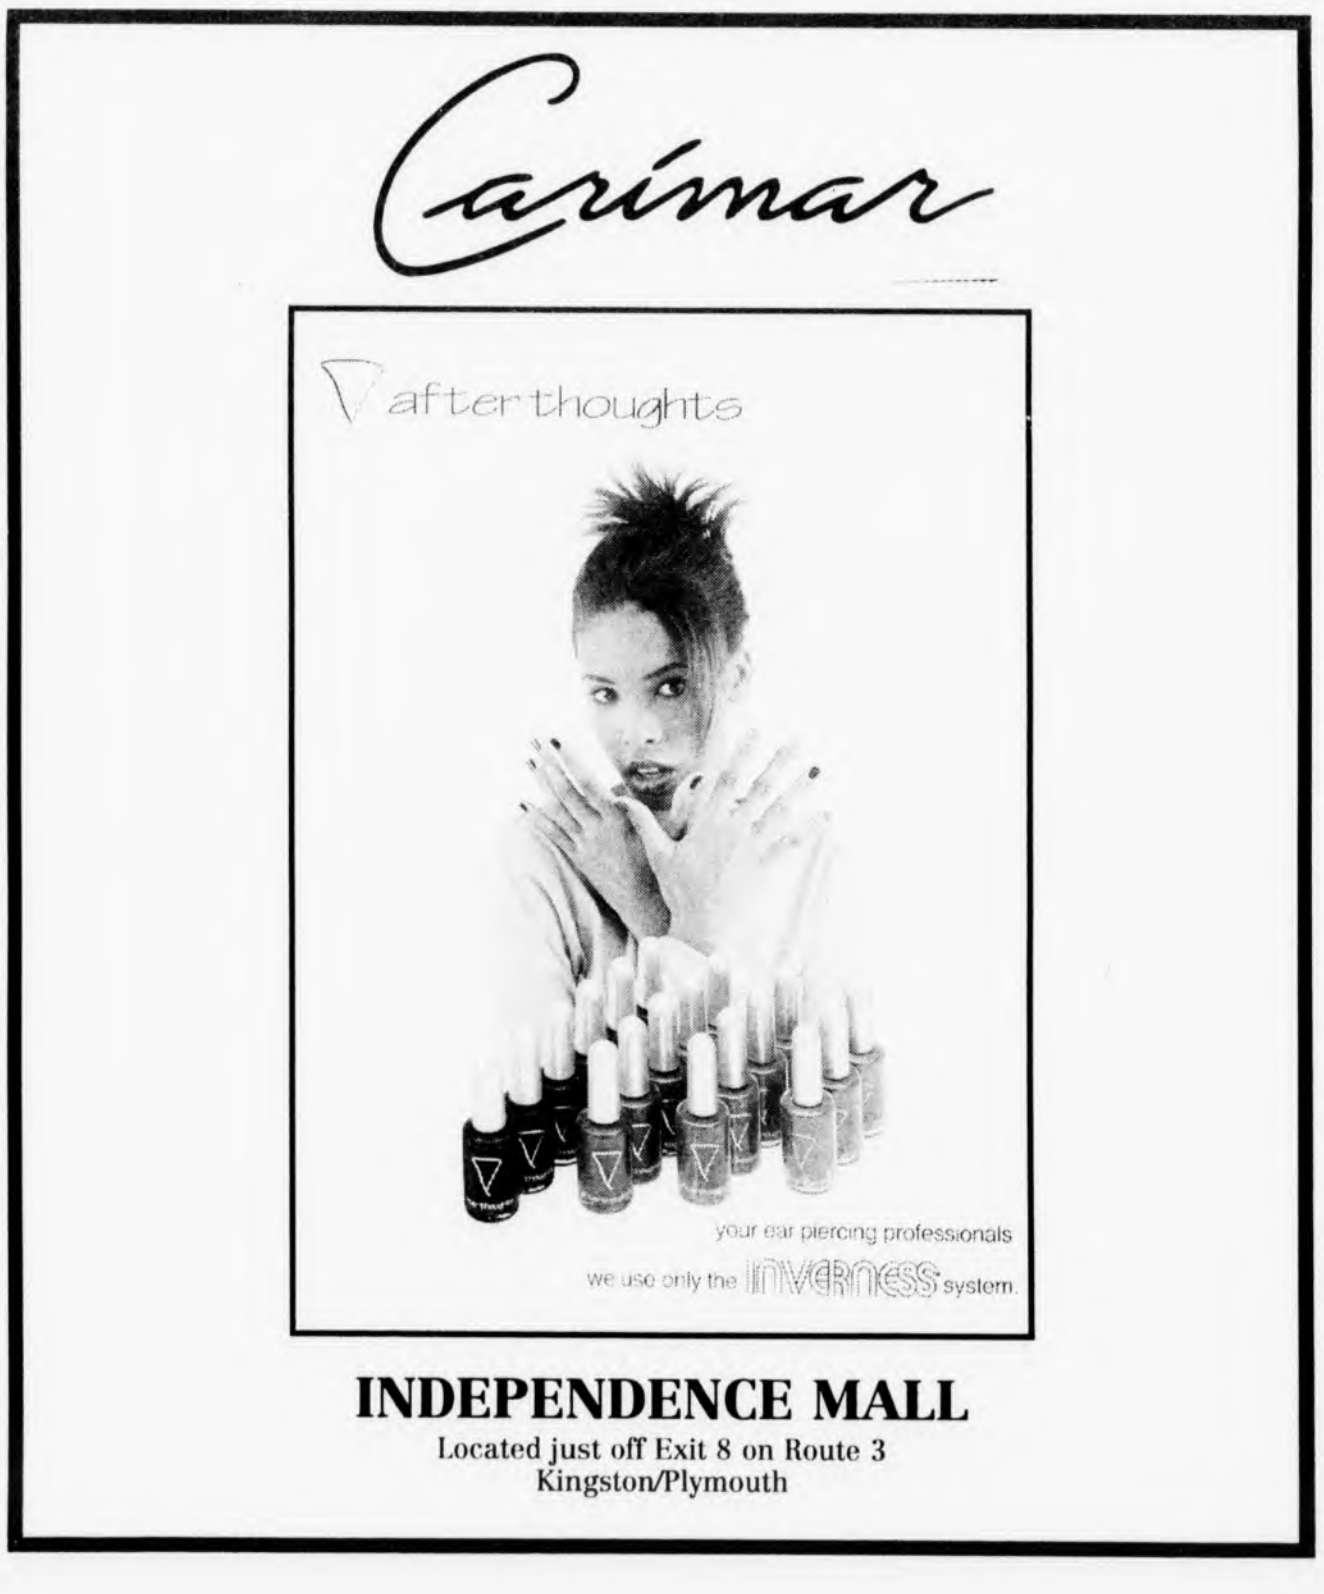
Signs proposed for dangerous sidewalk

To Selectmen:

Two points stand out from the July 30 public hearing on the Village Sidewalk project.

First, most everyone agreed that the current narrow sloped pavement is dangerous for pedestrian traffic. Secondly, the project, subject to approval, will be delayed until 1999 at the earliest.



I would suggest that this delay offers an opportunity to try to address the safety issue. To discourage pedestrian traffic I would propose two signs; one mounted on the tree after the stairway at the Independence building and the other mounted on the utility pole between the bus stop and St. Stephen's stairway. The signs would read "Narrow Walkway Ahead, For Your Safety Please Cross Over."

This would allow Cohasset residents, at minimal cost, the opportunity to evaluate the need for the proposed sidewalk.

If pedestrians cooperate, then perhaps other approaches to improving this section of South Main Street will surface. Perhaps small flower tubs could be spotted along a narrow "shelf" adjoining the paved roadway in place of the sloped paved area. Perhaps the grant money could be redirected to other projects to revitalize the Village.

Town credit card...

cards. Towns help with the advertising, but mostly focus on getting a good deal, ensuring that the card offers a good interest rate, and making sure the face of the card reflects the character of the town and is immediately recognizable to locals. Towns generally get one percent of all purchases made with the credit card, although cash advances and balance transfers usually are not included in the town's percentage.

Callahan got the idea for a Cohasset affinity card while visiting a friend in the village of South Orange, New Jersey where a local affinity card has been quite successful. South Orange has raised an average of $40,000 per year with its credit card, Callahan said.

"South Orange is using their money from the credit card to create a little grant program for village businesses," Callahan said. "If a business wants to make an improvement like remodeling, it can apply for a grant."

Callahan said the proceeds from affinity cards can be used for any purpose the town chooses. He feels Cohasset is a good location for an affinity card because it is a fairly affluent community.

"I think it would be nice if people used a credit card that benefited the town," Callahan said. "It's all a function of who uses the card, and I think in Cohasset, people who have the card would use it."

Callahan said South Orange has also received backing from the local chamber of commerce with the card. Local businesses offer discounts to residents who use their affinity card.

Although the affinity card sounds like a sure bet, many towns have been disappointed by low returns from the credit card. Hanover Treasurer Bob Haley said the only 250 people have the cards, which has given the town $14,000 in 18 months. Haley said he has learned that many towns have had problems finding banks to sponsor cards.

"I have to admit that I'm a little disappointed — I thought it would take off," Haley said. "When I found out that banks weren't interested in sponsoring cards in much bigger cities like Cambridge, Quincy and Springfield, I knew something was wrong. One problem is that there are a lot of credit cards out there already and people get a lot of offers. Banks are getting into affinity cards less."

Haley said Hanover has had other problems. Hibernia was purchased by Eastern Bank, which then sold its portfolio to the National City Bank of Ohio. There has been no new advertising for the Hanover card, even though it has one of the lowest interest rates available, which is the prime interest rate plus three percent. The current rate on the Hanover card is about 11.25 percent, Haley said.

Haley also pointed to a story in The New York Times which reported that most New Jersey towns that had an affinity card received were not making that much money.

Haley said Cohasset may have problems because although it is an affluent community, it has a small population. Credit card companies are most interested in high-volume business. He said the towns that have been able to get affinity cards in place have had to rely on small, local banks, which is the case in Canton.

"Quincy had no bidders for its card and its population is more than 80,000 people," Haley said. "Cohasset's biggest problem will probably be finding a bank. If they don't have a local bank that will support the card, I don't think they'll be able to succeed."

But some towns, like South Orange, have been successful with affinity cards. Haley said Citizen's Bank offers a "Good Citizen's Card" which is similar to an affinity card. He said Cohasset may want to explore that option as well. And as Haley points out, he was hoping the town would make more money, but $14,000 for doing nothing isn't such a bad thing.

ASK! gains momentum with support of officials who felt the King Street group was operating on "the NIMBY (Not In My Backyard) factor.

"I can't see how we can embark on blocking off bits of Cohasset like Boston, where you can't even figure out which way you can go every time you turn a corner," argued Sturdy. "You're saying, 'Let 3A take the traffic,' but sometimes it can't really take it. Before 3A, King Street was the route. That's how you got from that section to North Main. Everybody wants to protect their own turf but use others'."

But planning board member Terry Atherton pointed out that Quincy has closed off certain streets to traffic during rush hour for the same reasons ASK! is addressing.

Still, Sturdy has his supporters on this issue.

"There have been a bunch of bad accidents on Forest Avenue, where I live, but it's used as a cut-through for people to get to Hull or from Hull to other places," said Judy Volungis. "You can't shut it off because it's a cut-through — not when it's a public way. The answer for us was to put up speed limit signs and set up some speed traps. I think the selectmen should be ruling against it and not bringing it up as a town meeting article. They are supposed to be protecting the rights of all citizens, and not just the ones that live on one street.

"Everybody has problems with speeding on their street," she continued. "You don't shut a street down just because an unfortunate accident happens." (Volungis was referring to the death in early June of a Cohasset high School senior just days before graduation. Speed was believed to be the factor.)

King Street residents did, in fact, form as a group earlier this summer. "Over the years, residents have tried to get together to counteract speeding and volume issues on King Street," said ASK! member Heidi Salerno. "We've been trying to come up with solutions for 10 years now, at least."

This summer, the group found 20 possible solutions to its problem. The group decided one remedy was to remove one of the two accesses at the intersection of King and Beechwood streets. That would mean that there would be no access to King Street from Beechwood for regular traffic.

The intersection fans out onto Beechwood from King Street with an island between two lanes. The access which ASK! is not seeking to close off entirely, would remain open for emergency vehicles, school buses and snowplows only. This lane is not at an angle that encourages motorists to shortcut there anyway.

As it stands now, drivers traveling east on Beechwood toward 3A take a left onto King Street in order to avoid two traffic lights on 3A (by Beechwood and Pond). The shortcut also brings motorists further north on 3A once they exit King Street.

There have been a disproportionate number of accidents — 21 in two years — on once peaceful King Street.

Problems began on the one- and-a-quarter-mile street more than a decade ago, when the Super Stop & Shop was built nearby. Drivers soon discovered the winding way as an alternative to the increased congestion from the new shopping area on Route 3A. Because King Street runs nearly parallel to it, residents say it has proven enticing to speedsters, unhindered by traffic lights, stop signs or speed limit signs there.

The result as ASK! reports it : King Street has a 40 percent share in the town's accident rate; the average motor vehicle speed as recorded by police this July is 41 mph; 10 percent of the town's speeding tickets are written on King Street; and 2,500 cars traverse the road daily.

ASK! would like several remedies to be considered: making one end of King Street a cul de sac and the Beechwood end closed off to traffic except for snow plows, emergency vehicles and school buses; installing speed bumps, speed limit signs and stop signs at Pond and Schofield, as well as prohibiting right turns onto King Street from Route 3A between 5-9 p.m. and left turns from Beechwood from 6-9 a.m.; and installing speed limit signs, stop signs and a traffic circle at the intersection of King and Pond streets.

"We think we've talked to everyone who abuts the area," said Betsy Connolly of ASK!. "Diverting traffic will alleviate volume, speed and safety issues."

A Sept. 3 meeting was held at the Lightkeepers Residence by ASK! to discuss the issue with area residents so that they are up-to-date and in agreement on the proposed changes. "We wanted to make sure that we had the majority agreement of street dwellers to agree with this plan, and that worked out," said Salerno. "We're set to meet with the selectmen on Sept. 14."

Chairman Al Moore, "in principal," agreed with Sturdy's comments. "You have to be careful about shutting down roads willy-nilly, but I don't think that applies to this situation."

11 private roads may soon go public

Layout plans and legal descriptions of 11 private ways to be considered as public roads is under review by the planning board.

A Sept. 29 public hearing on the matter has been scheduled by the board of selectmen.

The Private Ways Committee and the board of selectmen worked together in putting together the list of private ways to potentially undergo change. The Norfolk County Engineering Department provided layout plans and legal descriptions of the roads to the town for individual boards' perusal.

State highway money can't be used to maintain private ways some of which have fallen into disrepair angering residents who live along them.

But accepting private ways as public roads can present another problem.

"The problem with private ways that become public ones," explained planning board chairman Al Moore, "is that it becomes fair frontage for subdivision. So you have to think in terms of whether or not there's a chunk of acreage on that spot that could have frontage grabbed off it to create as subdivision."

According to Moore, there are a number of parcels of land in Cohasset that can't be developed because they have no frontage. "As long as someone has 50 feet of frontage, they can apply for a subdivision. We'd have to make sure that that doesn't happen before we recommend anything."

The roads that will be weighed for change are: Bates Lane; Forest Notch; Lantern Lane; Locust Road; Norfolk Road; Notch Lane; Oa Street; Reservoir Road; Riverview Road; Short Street; and Whitney Woods Lane.

Bates Lane is an issue because it adjoins Heather Drive and would open an area for development. "I'm not so sure that the town would be served by that," said Moore.

OBITUARIES

Robert B. Smith

Robert B. Smith, 77, of Cohasset, a meteorologist, retired earth science professor and a World War II veteran, died Sunday, Sept. 6, at the Lahey Clinic Medical Center in Burlington.

Mr. Smith was a professor at Babson College in Wellesley before retiring. He also was a research meteorologist and was associated with many companies during his career in Alaska, Peru, Canada, New Hampshire, Montana and the Virgin Islands. He was involved in the research and development of the first weather satellites, "Tiros" and "Nimbus."

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., Mr. Smith lived in Douglaston, N.Y., before moving to Cohasset 40 years ago. He attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he received his bachelor's degree in physics and a master's degree in meteorology. He later received a master's degree in earth science from Bridgewater State College in 1972.

He served in the Navy during World War II.

Mr. Smith leaves his wife, Mabel E. (Barnes) Smith; two sons, Roger A. Smith of Lexington and Stephen B. Smith of Burlington; and two grandchildren.

A funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 10, at the Downing Cottage Funeral Home in Hingham. Interment will be in Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset.

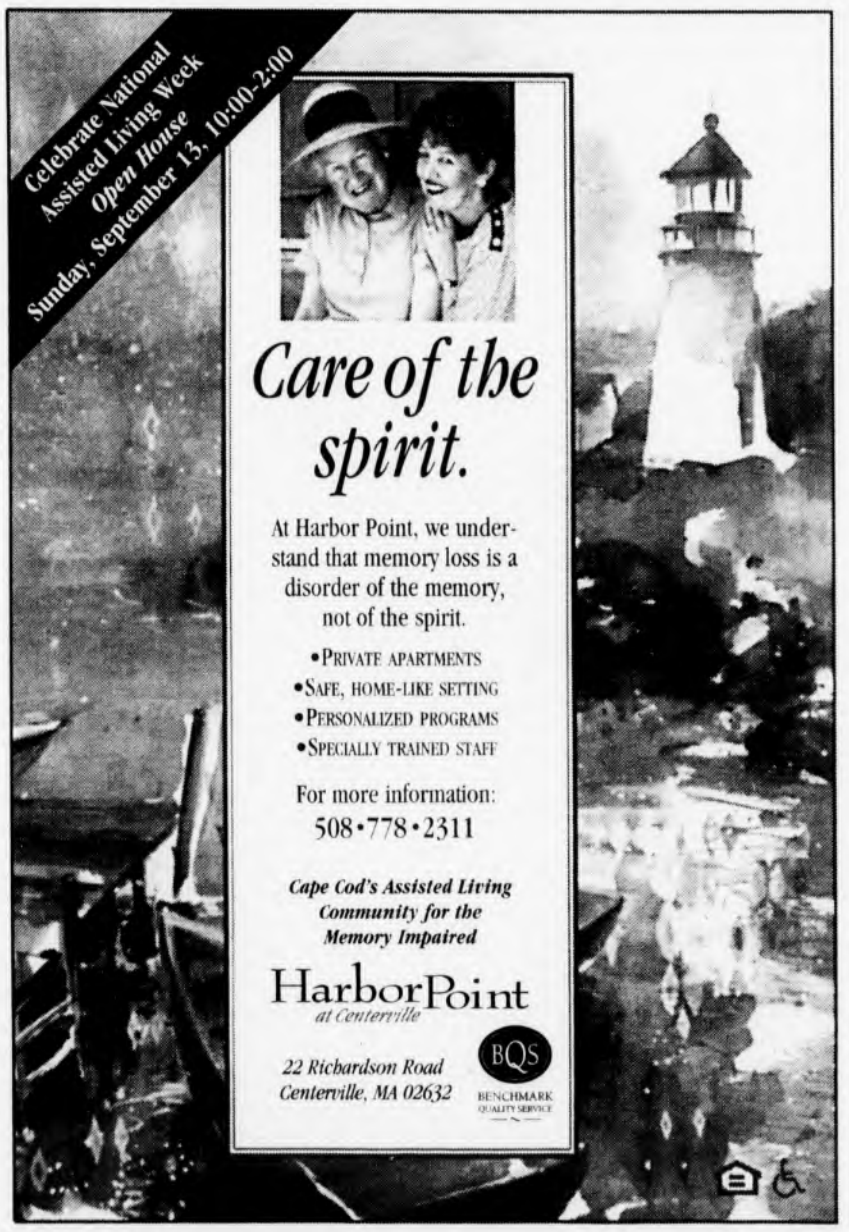
☆ Top Ten Reasons to Vote for Josh Cutler ☆



#6 - Josh represents your interests, not special interests

Lots of politicians like to talk about reform, but Josh is doing something about it. That's why he is the first candidate in the history of the state to disclose financial reports on the Internet. That's why, unlike his opponent, he doesn't accept special interest money from lobbyists. And it's why he's helping spearhead local efforts to put a campaign finance reform measure on the ballot in November.

Owner is stranded in attempts to build on land

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

A standing-room-only audience, many of them Beach Street abutters, crowded in to the small room where Ellen Morrisey took her six-year argument to build a home on her Beach Street property before the conservation commission.

Aside from Morrissey's lawyer, most in the room were concerned about potential water run-off problems onto their land, should Morrissey be allowed to remove vegetation to build a new home there.

Unbeknownst to Morrissey, a letter from building inspector Richard Egan had already been received by commission members only several hours before the scheduled meeting. The letter stated that until access issues on the Beach Street property were resolved, there could be no legal building there.

Needless to say, Morrissey was visibly upset when vice chairman Sue Cope read the letter aloud.

"Sometimes it's not clear to people that there are other issues involved in what they think is a simple project," said Cope. "The building inspector realized that the driveway issue will need fixing. It's unfortunately a difficult site—it's not that we're trying to be difficult."

According to those familiar with the issue, Morrissey purchased 20 acres of land in 1976, most of which she still owns. Her property starts at the parking lot of the town hall and goes all the way to the Mohawk ditch where a stream runs through. "It's land-locked property," noted one in attendance at the meeting.

"The only way to get to her land is by a road that runs along the Mohawk Ditch. If you drive down Beach Street toward the ocean, it's the dirt road that turns to the right. That's the only access," the bystander added.

Morrissey told commission members that she would use Highland Avenue to access her property. But according to at least one onlooker, the Highland Avenue access is an old cart path that has never been used — especially not now when it runs between two houses and has hedges growing along the proposed entrance.

"Sometimes it's not clear to people that there are other issues involved in what they think is a simple project. The building inspector realized that the driveway issue will need fixing. It's unfortunately a difficult site—it's not that we're trying to be difficult."

— Sue Cope, conservation commissioner

"The Highland Avenue access didn't show on her plans," said Cope. "Besides, this is a planning board issue. She wants to access her property with a road that is already used by two others."

Another bugaboo for Morrissey is additional land she bought because it was the only purchasable property near hers that would perk.

"The problem is that Morrissey now has some frontage on Beach Street which, over time, has proved illusory," explained planning board chairman Al Moore. "The three lots there are legal. The problem is that the frontage exists as land, but it's a cliff. As a practical matter, it doesn't work."

Nonetheless, Morrissey has been trying to develop the three lots on her property. She sold one of her Beach Street lots to Don Ostenberg about a year and a half ago. (Ostenberg, who would like to make changes to his driveway, went before the conservation commission immediately after Morrissey.)

Commission consultant Paul Shea advised Ostenberg to go to the building inspector directly to find out how to proceed with work on his driveway that runs near wetlands.

Both Morrissey and Ostenberg will come before the commission again Sept. 17 to discuss their separate issues.

"If Morrisey had sufficient frontage for her lot, she would not be having any problem with the various boards she's gone before," said Moore. "We have a regulation in town that says if you have sufficient frontage for your lot, that's fine—you can build. But if you're going to access the new home(s) by means of a common driveway, you can only do 2 houses on that driveway and for the third, it must be built to subdivision standards. The reason for that bylaw is that otherwise, people could circumvent the subdivision regulations and could create all their lots to have frontage. They could create a subdivision with one big, long driveway that didn't meet any standards. So we don't allow that to happen. You have to meet the subdivision standard for the road."

"It's a difficult site to access because of the topography and wetlands," explained Cope. "We're not trying to prevent projects, but we do have to follow the law."

Creatine 'craze' reaches schools and local gyms

But legal muscle supplement has many questions

By Bob Croce
CORRESPONDENT

Major league athletes swear by its benefits. John Elway, Mike Piazza and 80 percent of NFL players are users. So too are the Los Angeles Lakers, who have a barrel of the stuff in the middle of their locker room.

The "craze" has suddenly hit home too, becoming overwhelmingly popular in local gyms and especially among high school athletes.

It's called creatine, an amino acid derivative that's used to boost muscle performance during intense workouts, allowing for more efficient muscle growth. Testimony to creatine's wondrous results are beginning to mount from Muscle Beach to Revere Beach.

Creatine's proponents say the supplement allows the muscles to bounce back quicker, and paves the way for longer workouts and greater results.

Bruce Warren, an avid weight trainer who starred the past four years as a defenseman on Framingham High's hockey team, is a faithful user. So too, he says, are "most" of the athletes and even some non-athletes at Framingham High School.

This has become a boom period for the supplement, which has been a $100 million a year seller for the past two years. A report in USA Today lists creatine second only to vitamins in supplement sales nationwide.

"It's probably the best selling of any of the products we have in here," says Steve, a manager for a local General Nutrition Centers (GNC) store, who didn't want his last name used for this story. "I get people of all ages. Kids in high school. A lot of high school football players. I try to tell wrestlers not to use it, because it can dry them up fast. But I've gotten people in their 50s wanting to use it."

Unlike anabolic steroids, creatine is legal, and can be easily purchased over the counter. It's not on the banned substance lists of the NCAA or the International Olympic Committee.

Can this andro stuff help me write a better column?

EXTRA POINTS

DAVID WOLCOTT

Pretty soon I should be able to bench press my cubicle.

Remember the good old days when we all thought androstenedione was either an exciting goaltending prospect with Peterborough of the Ontario Hockey League or Celine's lesser known sister. Thanks to Mark McGwire those days are now longer gone than any of the 400 dingers he's cracked this month.

As we all know by now McGwire's use of the controversial training supplement androstenedione has become an issue in the past month after an Associated Press reporter was caught snooping through the St. Louis Cardinals sluggers locker and found the testosterone enhancing pills.

In an era where the media as well as the public in general wants to build someone up to be a hero and then immediately tear them down just because we can, everyone jumped on this as the single and only reason that McGwire is about to destroy one baseball's most cherished records: Roger Maris' single-season homerun mark of 61, set in 1961.

In fact, if he keeps up his present pace it may very well be McGwire's 98 in 1998 that sluggers may be trying to reach in the new millennium.

OK friends, we need to get a grip on this. McGwire's use of andro is not the only reason he has shattered the record books. That's more to do with the fact that his swing is just about perfect, everyone ball thrown to him looks like an oversized pumpkin, he's become a much more selective hitter over the years and pitching overall in major league baseball is at an embarrassing all-time low.

What andro does do is allow McGwire to train longer and harder in the weight room. While sometimes lumped in with banned steroids, it's not. The reason that the NFL and the IOOC have banned it from their athletes is that it can be used to help mask the use of banned steroids.

But with all the good things everyone's said about andro recently, there's got to be something that we haven't found yet about its use that brings the dark cloud over it. It's kind of like me walking into a grocery store and meeting the most beautiful woman in the world who's filthy rich, can't start the morning without watching SportsCenter and has a thing for balding, pudgy sportswriters. It's a nice thought, but there's something inherently wrong with the picture.

McGwire's an adult and no doubt researched this legal over-the-counter supplement long before he started taking it

But with all the good things everyone's said about andro recently, logic dictates that there's got to be something that we haven't found yet about its use that brings the dark cloud over it. It's kind of like me walking into a grocery store and meeting the most beautiful woman in the world who's filthy rich, can't start the morning without watching Sportscenter and also has a thing for balding, pudgy sportswriters.

It's a nice thought, but there's something inherently wrong with the picture.

"The jury is still out on this right now. I don't think we have anywhere near all of the information on andro that we need to have," said Cohasset High health education coordinator Mike Gill. "Right now all the stories have glamorized the use of this particular supplement, which is dangerous when you're talking about impressionable young kids."

Another long-time coach and school administrator has his own reservations about the use of andro.

"Kids are kids and kids are followers by nature, which is the scary thing about this andro craze," said Rockland High athletic director Bob Fisher, who's been around long enough to know. "Kids know that McGwire is doing great things at bat and they know that he is using andro in his training. That can be scary because we still don't know enough about the long-term effects of using this supplement.

"We've always talked to the them about steroids, but this is a totally different animal," he added. "Andro is available over the counter and anyone from a kid in elementary school to an athlete at the high school can buy it at their local pharmacy."

Fisher said the key now was getting more information on andro and making it available to the public.

"Kids, parents, teachers and coaches included. Everyone needs to be education on this," stressed Fisher. "We've opened up a can of worms here and we need to look hard at andro and other supplements like it to make sure they're not going to be harmful in the long run."

I couldn't have said it better myself. Maybe being able to bench press my cubicle isn't such a hot thing, after all?

Creatine 'craze' reaches schools and local gyms

But there are questions too

Not much is known about the long-term side effects of creatine, since it's still relatively new to the mainstream.

So far, scientists studying creatine have found no serious side effects when it's taken in recommended doses. There have been some problems with cramping and dehydration, but trainers note that much of that has been the result of misuse.

"The problem is that you might have young athletes taking two grams of this, increasing their mass, and then figuring they're going to get better results by upping that to 15 or 20 grams," says local trainer and track coach Jeff Stone. "We don't have enough information right now on what side effects that could have long term. We already do know that creatine tends to over-promote insulin production. Can that be a detriment?"

We just don't know, and right now the Food and Drug Administration is cautioning consumers that they should consult a doctor before using creatine. The substance has already been the subject of more than 50 studies, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and 50 more studies are expected this year.

Recently, the FDA ruled that creatine "does not appear to be a major factor" in the deaths this past year of three college wrestlers, who were training with the supplement. But the research continues, both on the government level and on college campuses.

B.J. Baker, the strength and conditioning coordinator for the Boston Red Sox says major college athletic

#7 - Josh will fight for families

We've given large tax breaks to corporate industries, now it's time to focus our attention on the interests of hard-working families. As your next State Representative, Josh will fight to ensure that additional tax relief goes to families not stockholders. He'll also work to:

- Expand child care options for parents through "Child Care Bond Bill"
- Extend water and sewer rate relief and tax credits for Title V upgrades
- Ensure that energy deregulation benefits consumers, not just big business programs, and some athletes have been using creatine for years without seeing any long-term problems. But so far, that too is more anecdotal than [redacted]ntific.

"We make sure they take it in specific doses, which is what the literature recommends," says Baker of the several Sox players who use creatine. "I think the people who start to get into trouble with the cramping and muscle problems are people who take more. People who think more is better."

Baker does caution against casual use of creatine by uninformed younger athletes.

"Whether pre-college aged athletes should be using it is a philosophical as well as a physiological issue," he says. "At what cost do you want to win? What kind of mentality are you trying to produce for a high school athlete? Are you taking it with a win at all cost mentality? Or, are they taking it to get bigger so they can win a scholarship? So many of those things have to be sorted out with parents and coaches. I would never make a recommendation for a pre-college athlete because what we do here (with the Red Sox) is so different."

Finding the right dose

Creatine monohydrate, the official moniker for the most popular type of the substance, is a white powder that's consumed one heaping teaspoon at a time and washed down with grape juice and massive amounts of water. It occurs naturally in red meat, and the human body needs a certain amount for muscle development.

But the doses used in supplement form usually go far beyond what the body needs for normal function, says William Kraemer, director of research at the Center for Sports Medicine at Penn State.

Even so, Kraemer feels that creatine shouldn't be dismissed just because of what we don't know right now. "I'm sure we'll find things in the future on how better to use it, and who should use it," he says.

Tucker says a trainer at Delaware revealed at the symposium that their players use creatine in limited (3 to 5 gram) doses, and avoid cramping by drinking 32 ounces of extra water and then 32 ounces of milk.

"Anytime you add any kind of supplement or nutrient-dense type supplement to your diet, the recommendation is to take more water," Baker says. "Even if you take a protein drink, or a multivitamin, you should hydrate because you need to dilute that. You need to give your body what it needs to process that. So if you couple creatine on top of all these other things athletes are taking, dehydration is an issue."

A recent article in the Penn State Sports Medicine Newsletter revealed that athletes using creatine experienced 60 percent greater results when chasing it down with high carbohydrate sports drinks. Some sports drink manufacturers are beginning to incorporate creatine into their ingredients, which will soon make the substance more mainstream than ever.

"Everyone uses it. I think the risks aren't that great if you don't abuse it. Just like a lot of things," says GNC's Steve. "I think it works. I've used plenty of it and never had a problem. I think it's one of the best products ever made."

Certainly creatine has been a boon to GNC's success. It isn't cheap, with prices ranging from $21.99 for 4.2 ounces to $54.99 for 16 ounces. On average, says Steve, the responsible creatine user will go through about $60 worth per month.

Warren says he can buy it more cheaply in bulk, and not long ago he purchased two pounds for $120. Creatine has become a perfect match for the Internet, where there are hundreds of sites selling the supplement in various forms and at various prices. There are creatine sports drinks and gum.

"I can honestly say I've never seen anything sell quite like this. This stuff has been hot from the first day I walked into the store," Steve says.

No one really knows how this creatine phenomenon began, but it's assumed that it picked up steam initially in the gyms of Southern California about five years ago. Successful results were followed by word of mouth, and suddenly creatine became the hot supplement.

The future of creatine, no doubt, will be shaped by further study. But for now, the believers are winning out over those who preach caution, and creatine remains a very hot commodity.

There will be one final registration for the youth soccer league on Thursday (Sept. 10) from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Top Ten Reasons to Vote for Josh Cutler ☆ Democrat for State Representative

#1 - Don't take our word for it, here's what other people say

"I'm impressed by Josh's commitment to working with kids." – Lauren Auchincloss, Main St, Hingham

"Josh has the integrity we need in government today." – Melissa Buis, Water St, Hingham

"I know Josh will provide first-rate constituent service. He also understands the need to bring more of our tax dollars back to the district and implement new laws in the critical areas of education and health care. I firmly beleive that Josh is the best candidate to accomplish these two important goals." – Ralph Kidder, former Chairman, Cohasset School Committee

"Josh will make an outstanding representative." – Fred Koed, Pleasant St, Cohasset

Josh has experience solving problems through the legislative process. He is also the candidate who most appreciates the benefits of thoughtful planning and of protecting our open spaces." – Sarah Corey, Hingham Planning Board

"Josh Cutler is a candidate I am proud to support and help. He has an excellent grasp of the issues of importance to the South Shore and is committed to making government work for us." – Chartis Tebbetts, Jerusalem Rd Dr., Cohasset

"I firmly believe Josh is the best candidate to represent us." – Pat Laugelle, King St, Cohasset

"Josh is just what this district needs -- a bright and energetic leader who will bring new ideas and new purpose to the State Legislature." – Phil Johnston, former Secretary of Health and Human Services

"Josh Cutler reminds us of what we as South Shore Democrats stand for: Good, honest government. Strong protection of our natural environment. Increased support for public education. Josh is committed to these issues that are so important to our three towns. He's exactly the new independent voice we need in the Legislature." – Peter Pratt, former Cohasset selectman and water commissioner

"Josh will work hard for us." – James L. Watson, Hingham Democratic Town Committee

"Josh is intelligent, thoughtful, hardworking and articulate. He knows what it takes to get things done at the state level. His knowledge, energy and vision will help protect the interest of all the residents of our district." – Shawn Worster, Harborview Dr., Hingham

Junior lacrosse program wishes for old equipment

The Cohasset Junior Lacrosse program is accepting donations of old sticks, gloves, helmets, arm pads and goaltending equipment, hoping to make life a bit easier for players and parents.

Currently, the team has no extra equipment to carry to games or lend to players. That has, in the past, meant that players who have forgotten some or all of their gear have wound up driving home — often from several towns away — or have been forced to sit out.

"We can't let a player on the field without proper equipment," says junior team coach Chuck Jaffe. "The best we can hope for is to share, which is tricky given how often kids come on and off the field."

The club is particularly interested in helmets, gloves, armpads and goaltending equipment. Jaffe noted that sticks are the one thing most players have when they start out in the game, "although we would accept stick donations too."

The youth program is hoping to secure enough equipment to help out players in its summer camp, so that children who are just testing out the sport won't go whole hog on gear, only to find out they would rather play something else.

"Lacrosse equipment isn't cheap," Jaffe says. "We're just hoping that people who have some of it lying around in their basement, or whose children have outgrown youth equipment, can help us move the game along and support the junior club and lacrosse booster program in the process."

To donate lacrosse equipment to the Cohasset Junior program, call Jaffe at 383-9858.

☆ Top Ten Reasons to Vote for Josh Cutler ☆

#3 - Josh will protect our natural resources

The South Shore is one of the most beautiful areas of our state and Josh will fight hard to keep it that way. Josh's experience and commitment to protecting our natural resources has earned him the endorsement of the Massachusetts League of Environmental Voters. As your next State Representative, Josh will work to:

- protect open spaces and prevent over-development
- repair sea walls and improve beach areas

EXCESS BAGGAGE

Women who carry heavy purses and bags should heed the warning of studies conducted with letter carriers that indicate that those who carried close to the 35-pound limit had more back, shoulder, and neck pain than those who carried less weight. When women carry heavy bags, their bodies compensate for the weight in one of four ways: women either draw up the shoulder on the affected side or drop the shoulder, they lean forward, they lean back, or they combine any of these patterns to balance the weight. As a result, carrying a heavy and asymmetrical load can bring pain, soreness, tenderness, and stiffness that can affect the lower back, as well as the upper body.

Try to eliminate some of the excess baggage you carry around. If you're suffering from back pain or other pain, try a safe, effective alternative: chiropractic care! Chiropractors are well trained to help you. At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, we're currently accepting new patients. Experience the natural health benefits of chiropractic care for your entire family. Call us at 545-7388 to schedule an appointment. Let us help you live life to its fullest. Our office is located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor. I offer presentations on such important topics as "Raising a Healthy Drug-Free Family." The goal of this program is to teach you how to keep your children as healthy as possible. Call to find out more.

starts at 9 a.m.; and the 25-mile ride starts at 10 a.m.

According to Sharon Turner, National MS Society, "You'll have fun and help raise money to benefit the Central New England Chapter of the MS Society whose goal is to end the devastating effects of multiple sclerosis."

Registration is $25 and riders will need to raise a minimum of $50 in pledges. All participants will receive an official 1998 tour T-shirt and a great day of cycling.

Prizes for top fundraisers include gift certificates and a weekend in the Berkshires. To register, call (508) 291-2169.

"We have many families and teams who come back year after year because Oceanside Bike Fest is a beautiful ride and they enjoy being out actively raising money for the cause," said Turner.

Oceanside Bike Fest '98 is sponsored by American Red Cross, CellularOne, Clif Bar, Colombia Turbana, Gondola Pasta, Pastene, Plymouth Savings Bank and Poland Spring. Media sponsors include River 92.5 radio and the Boston Herald.

The National MS Society suggests that friends, co-workers and family form teams to motivate each other, train and raise pledges to fight MS.

"Teams are made up of four or more fund -raisers including both cyclists and volunteers," said Adrienne Marani, team MS coordinator. "Be sure to include the name of your team and team captain when you register. As a team member you are entitled to team captain pins, prizes for top fund-raising teams, team photos, team parties and recognition in team updates."

Multiple sclerosis is a chronic, often disabling disease of the central nervous system affecting more than 9,000 families in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Typically striking between the ages of 20 and 40, multiple sclerosis can rob a person of the ability to walk, speak clearly or see. It can even paralyze. Each mile ridden at Oceanside Bike Fest '98 will raise funds for national research and support local programs for people affected with MS.

Coaching clinic set for Saturday

The Cohasset Soccer Club will have a coaching clinic at Miliken Field on Saturday, Sept. 13 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. for grades kindergarten through three. A session for grades four and higher will be held from 9 a.m. to noon.

Everyone is invited to participate.

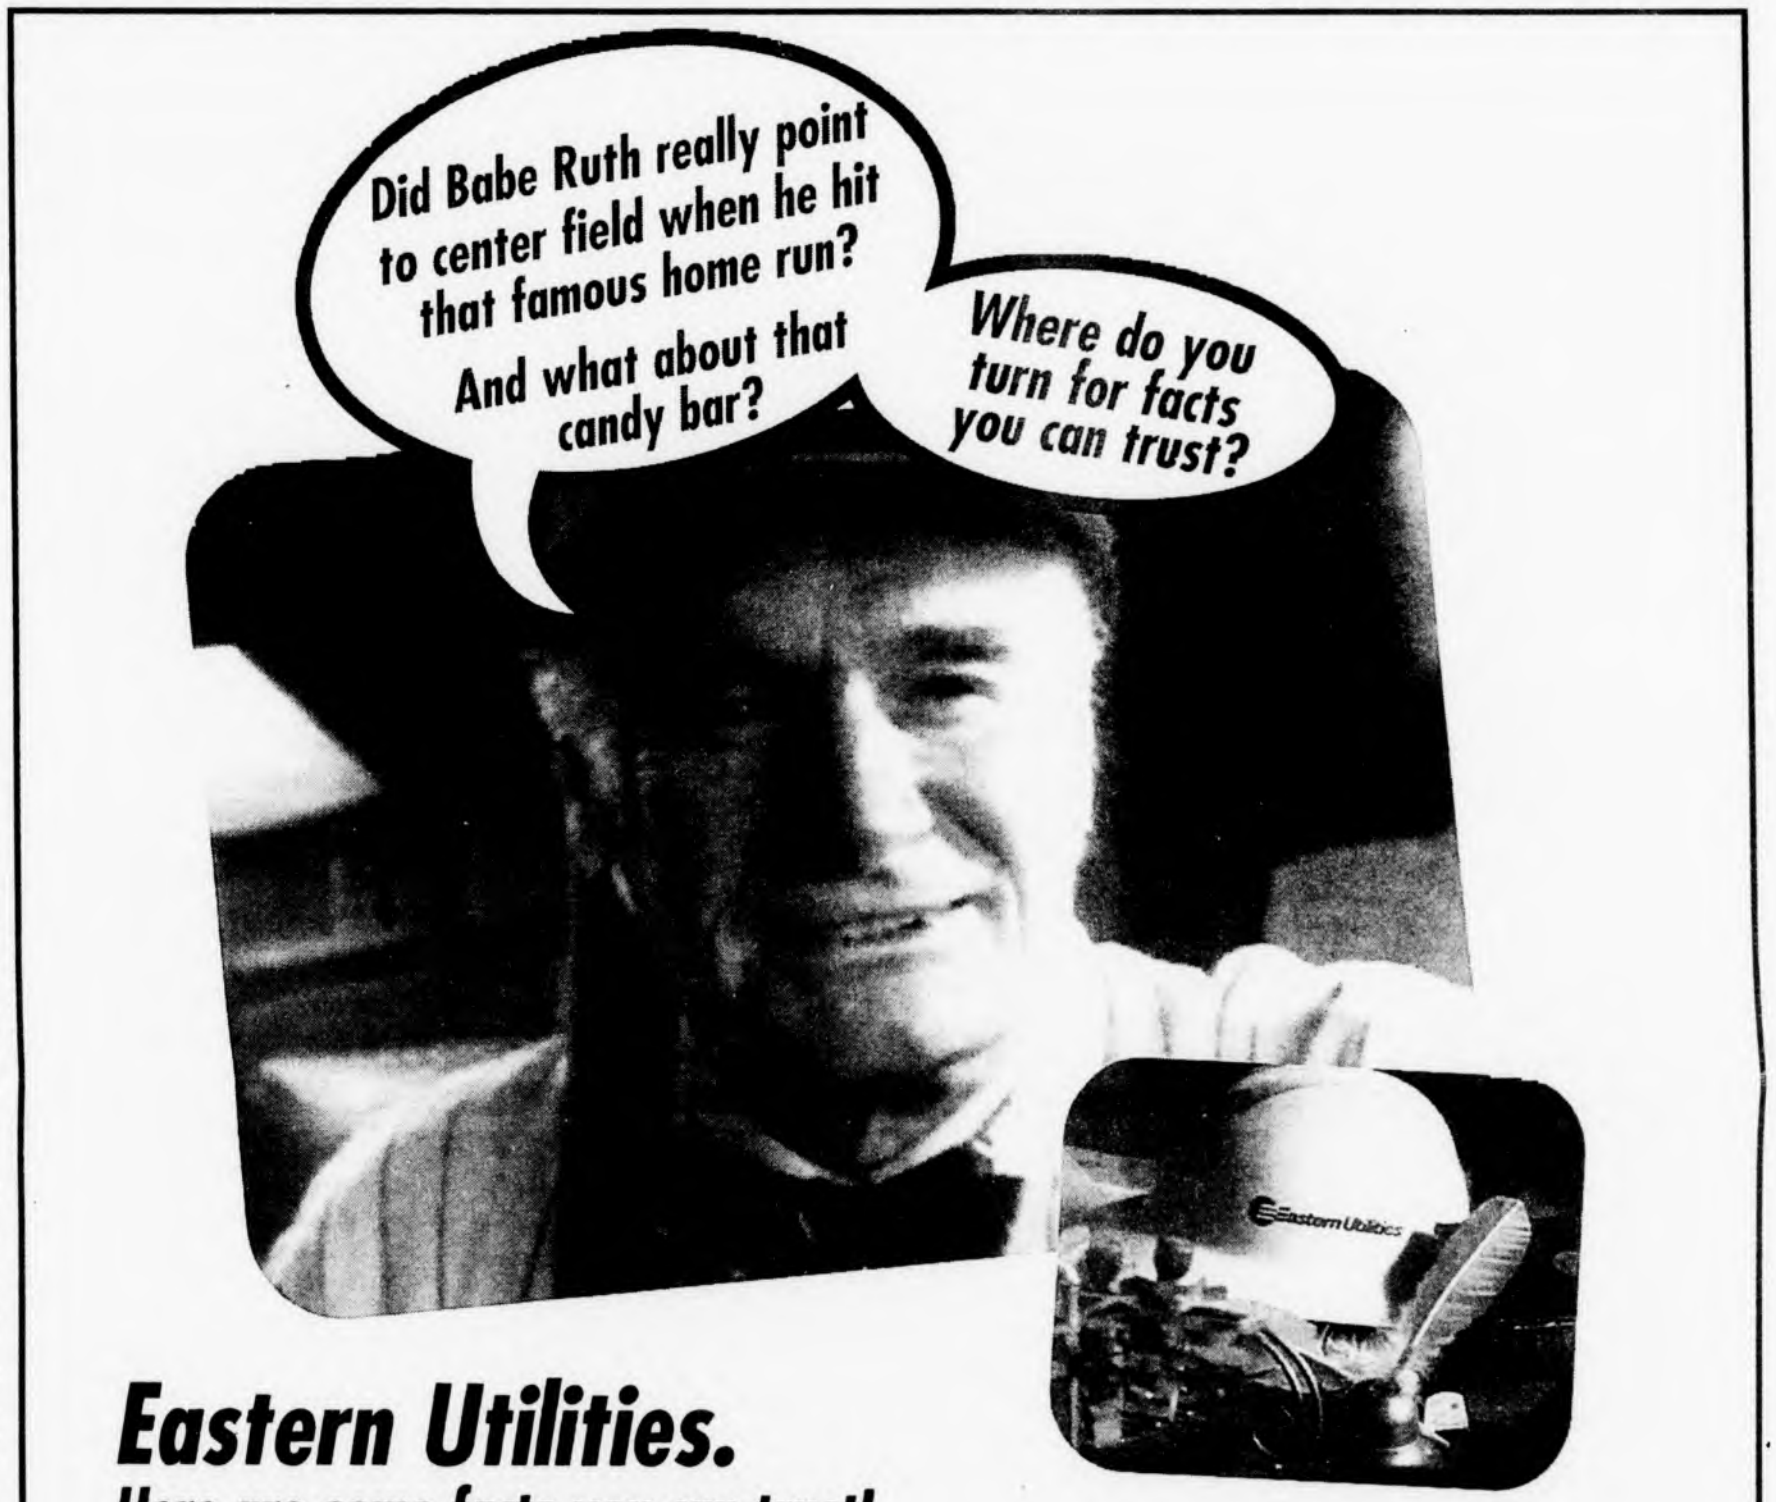
Golf Classic to benefit South Shore Habitat for Humanity

Golfers and sponsors are needed to help support the First Annual East Coast Community Golf Classic on Sept. 14 at the Blue Hills Country Club. This unique event will benefit South Shore Habitat for Humanity, which is involved in its busiest building season ever.

East Coast Petroleum of Quincy is sponsoring the Golf Classic, which is being presented by Delta Airlines.

The proceeds will aid South Shore Habitat for Humanity in its continuing effort to build affordable housing in partnership with families in need. South Shore Habitat is mid-way through a 10-home neighborhood in Quincy, and is about to begin new homes in Pembroke, Randolph, Rockland and Marshfield.

There are several ways to participate in the golf tournament and auction:



• Golfers - Blue Hills Country Club has 27 challenging holes. The Classic offers an 18-hole best ball tournament, whose first-place team wins round-trip tickets to Bermuda; this tournament is limited to 30 teams. For those wanting a shorter game, there is the 9-hole scramble, with a weekend in Vermont as top prize. The scramble is limited to 15 teams.

• Sponsors - Large and small sponsors are needed to underwrite tournament activities. Sponsorships range from $3,000 for a Golf Cart Sponsor or Dinner Co-Sponsor to $100 for a Green or Tee Sponsor and provide visibility for company names and logos throughout the tournament.

• Donations- Goods and services to be used as prizes or auction items are also needed. These can be tickets to events, gift certificates, use of vacation condos, sports equipment, special dinners, rounds of golf, etc.

Tournament space is limited, so golfers who wish to participate should register immediately. The need for donors and sponsors is unlimited, but time is not.

For more information on participation or sponsorship, please contact South Shore Habitat for Humanity, 28 River St., Braintree 02184, or (781) 843-9080.

Eastern Utilities.

Here are some facts you can trust!

- With deregulation, you will be able to buy electricity from a competitive supplier.
- But Eastern Utilities will still be your distribution or "wires" company.
- We'll still maintain power lines and provide safe reliable service.
- We'll still get you back in power after any storm or other emergency.
- We'll still manage billing and provide customer service.
- We'll still be in our communities — offering safety-education programs to children & adults.
- We'll still offer conservation programs to help you save energy and money.

By the way... As it usually is with legends, these two are a bit cloudy. As for pointing: It was the third game of the 1932 World Series; the Yankees playing at Chicago's Wrigley Field. There was no love lost between the teams - and the Cubs were taunting Ruth as he came to bat in the fifth inning. The Babe took two strikes and then held up two fingers - as if to say: "That's two!" And then he gestured out toward the mound - or maybe the center field bleachers. He hit the next pitch 500 feet into those bleachers - the longest home run ever hit at Wrigley Field. Ruth both denied and affirmed that he had indeed pointed. The acclaimed sportswriter Grantland Rice said that Ruth did point - did, indeed, "call the shot." [Source: New York Yankees home page: http://www.yankees.com/ruth.trib/br.story.p4.html] As for the candy bar: The Curtiss Candy Co. in Chicago claimed that the Baby Ruth bar was named for Ruth Cleveland, the daughter of President Grover Cleveland: she was the first baby ever born in the White House. (Ruth Cleveland tragically died of diphtheria at age 13.) However, many people (including the Babe himself) thought the candy bar was named after George Herman Ruth, the Yankee slugger. Openings available for Sept. for 3 and 4-year-olds. A program of South Shore Educational Collaborative to be housed at Osgood School., Cohasset. Two sessions: 9:15-11:30 a.m. or 12:15-3 p.m. Call (781) 749-0711 for additional information.

Back to school night

On Thursday, Sept. 24 Cohasset High School will hold its annual Back to School Night for parents. As part of that event, students in the Outdoor Education class are hosting an afternoon open house at the ropes course so that parents (and everyone else in the community) can come and see just what the ropes course is all about. Of course, the best way to "see what it's all about" is to climb, so come prepared to put on a helmet and harness and experience new heights in education. Better yet if a son/daughter is holding the other end of your climbing rope ensuring your safety. What a great way to learn about the ropes course and the trust inherent in climbing.

The "Open Ropes" will be held from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

The ropes course is located behind Alumni Field, in the woods near the water tower. The best way to reach it is to park at the high school gym and walk up to the water tower and down the path.

Questions may be directed to Jack Buckely at the CHS at (781) 383-6100.

First Parish welcomes acting minister

Expectation is high as First Parish in Cohasset, Unitarian Universalist, prepares to welcome Colin Leitch as Acting Minister. Colin will serve in that capacity for one year while Minister Elizabeth Tarbox is on medical leave.

Colin Leitch is a 1990 graduate of Harvard Divinity School and has obtained additional training in interim ministry. He has ministered to five churches since his ordination, and brings with him energy and compassion, as well as excellent pastoral skills. As Acting Minister he will oversee the administrative and spiritual needs of First Parish during the coming year.

First Parish will continue to benefit from Elizabeth Tarbox's extraordinary talents from time to time as her health permits. She has brought a spiritual energy to new and long-time members. It is with that energy that First Parish remains committed to the future and looks forward to welcoming Colin Leitch.

On Sunday, Sept. 13, First Parish will begin fall services, first with a pancake breakfast at 9 a.m. in the Parish House at 23 North Main St., followed by a service of worship, led by Colin Leitch, in the Meeting House on the Common at 10:30 a.m. All are welcome to join with a parish that, in Elizabeth Tarbox's words, "has been steadfast in times of trouble and is ready to face the future with hope, vision and enthusiasm."

Workshop on 'Tinkering' at Art Center

This fall the South Shore Art Center presents a two-day workshop entitled "Tinkering with Wire" by visiting artist Ellen Wieske. A working metalsmith for 22 years, and a teacher for the past 12, her studio is in Cambridge. She has taught workshops at the Massachusetts, Maine and Oregon Colleges of Art, as well as the Arrowmont School of Arts and Crafts and the Haystack Mountain School of Crafts, where she has taught for the last six summers. Her work has been exhibited both nationally and internationally and can be seen in numerous publications. She uses traditional style and techniques to make objects in wire with a whimsical quality.

In the workshop, students will create volume quickly, with three-dimensional line, to make an object of any size. From large forms to jewelry scale, students will learn to make any shape, using wire as the main or only material. Kinetic movement and drawing will also be addressed and approached, as the 18th century craft known as "Tinkering" is demonstrated. All wire will be provided. The workshop will take place at the SSAC in Cohasset Saturday, Sept. 12, and Saturday, Sept. 19, from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The cost is $90 for members and $105 for non-members.

To register or to receive a copy of the Art Center's fall course brochure including classes for pre-school through adult, call (781) 383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

Photos on exhibit at Conservatory

South Shore Conservatory's Staircase Gallery features the photographs of South Shore Art Center artist Richard Alemian from Sept. 1 through the end of October. His collection includes photographs from Martha's Vineyard, Portugal, Tuscany, Paris, Florence, Naples and Venice. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday, 9 a.m. to noon. Admission to the Staircase Gallery is free. South Shore Conservatory is located at One Conservatory Drive in Hingham. For more information, call (781) 749-7565, Ext. 16.

Children's fall art series

The fall session of the Children's Creativity Workshops is now open for registration. Children ages 5 to 6 years meet Saturdays from 9 to 10:30 a.m. for enriching art experiences. Also offered are the kindergarten workshops. This series has been especially designed for boys and girls who can easily enjoy 1-1/2 hours of a directed art activity. Basic skills will be integrated into the various artistic adventures.

For more information on the fall workshops and to register, call 749-2453.

Oil Painters of America show

The Christopher Gallery, Cohasset, announces the second Eastern and Southern Juried Exhibition of Oil Painters of America Show. The exhibition features artists from the East Coast and Canada. An opening reception will be held Saturday, Sept. 26, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The showing will run from Sept. 26 to Oct. 17. "Oil Painters of America" is a non-profit organization dedicated to keeping traditional oil painting and fine representational art thriving in American culture.

Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Collectors, students and browsers are always welcome.

For more information, call (800) 383-1801.

Collector's Choice: celebration of hidden treasures

On Sept. 25-27 the South Shore Art Center will host a weekend of extraordinary events celebrating Collectors' Choice: A Celebration of Hidden Treasures, an exhibition of significant works of art from private collections. The exhibition includes more than 60 works by historic and contemporary artists ranging from Rembrandt to Chagall, Motherwell to de Corbusier and more.

The weekend will begin Friday, Sept. 25, at 6:30 p.m. with a gala opening reception at the Art Center, followed by a dinner party at an oceanside estate in Cohasset. Admission to the event is $85.

On Saturday, Sept. 26, the Art Center will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for public viewing of the exhibition for a $5 admission charge.

Collector's Choice will close Sunday after brunch and a noontime concert with the Boston Trio. The Trio brings together three musicians of uncommon ability, insight and commitment. The Boston Symphony Orchestra members Lucia Lin on violin and Andrew Pearce on cello join with the exceptional pianist Heng-Jin Park Ellsworth to explore the great repertoire for trio — powerful music on an intimate scale. Admission to the brunch is at 10:30 a.m. and the concert at noon is $35, and $20 for the noontime concert only.

All proceeds from the weekend will benefit the South Shore Art Center. Please call (781) 383-2787 for more information.

Police make 20 arrests in August

August was a busy month for the Police Department.

The Police Department made a total of 20 arrests during August. Seven were for warrants. Three were for motor vehicle violations. Two arrests were for Operating Under the Influence and two for Minors in Possession of Alcohol. There was one arrest each for the following: Trafficking in Cocaine, Possession of an Instrument to administer a controlled substance, Possession of a Class B Substance, Assault and Battery (two counts) on a Police Officer, Assault and Battery and, finally, Protective Custody.

During August, there were 687 calls to the department that required a police response. Included in the 687 calls for service were 114, 9-1-1 calls.

There was one Breaking and Entering reported during August, a non-residence.

During the month of August the department issued 131 traffic citations for fines totaling $5,080 and 224 parking tickets for fines totaling $3,460.

During August the department continued the Marine Patrol utilizing funding from the Community Policing Grant.

On Aug. 27, a three-alarm fire destroyed a dwelling at 124 Atlantic Ave., keeping the department busy.

Finally, dispatcher Kathleen McGuire successfully completed a two-day certification school for 9-1-1 operation and assumed her full-time shift effective Aug. 22.

Daily rosary show recorded in Cohasset

As part of its eighth annual telethon, Boston Catholic Television will premier two new episodes of its daily show, "The Rosary." The new programs, featuring BCTV's director, Monsignor Frank McFarland, were recorded at the Sisters of St. Joseph retreat house in Cohasset Aug. 27.

The first program, "Sorrowful Mysteries," will premiere during the first day of the telethon, Friday, Sept. 18, at 10 a.m. and will be aired again that evening at 7 p.m. The second new episode, "Joyful Mysteries," will air for the first time Saturday, Sept. 19, at 10 a.m. and will be rebroadcast at 7 p.m. that night.

Media One will carry the telethon in its entirety on channel 56 in Cohasset Friday, Sept. 18, and Saturday, Sept. 19, from 9 a.m. until 11 p.m. each day. The telethon features two days of entertainment from local musicians and interviews with the "stars" of BCTV's spiritual and educational religious programs. The station is entirely viewer supported and relies on the September telethon to boost funding for production the following year.

☆ Top Ten Reasons to Vote for Josh Cutler ☆

#4 - Josh believes in health care that's always there

As a legislative aide at the State House, Josh helped draft landmark legislation to expand health care coverage for thousands of uninsured children and help senior citizens pay for prescription medicine. Josh is the only candidate who offers a comprehensive health care plan to tackle managed care reform, hospital privatization, and cutbacks in community-based home care. That's why leading health care advocates like the former Secretary of Health and Human Services have endorsed Josh.

Democrat Joshua Cutler gives a warm handshake to opponent Garrett Bradley who won Tuesday night's Primary. Bradley now goes on to square off against Republican State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

Bradley to square off with Murray

By Carol Britton Meyer and Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITERS

His home turf of Hingham helped Garrett Bradley win the Democratic nod to challenge State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray in the November election.

The state representative hopeful beat out fellow opponents Josh Cutler and Walter Murray in Tuesday's primary election. Bradley had his strongest lead in Hingham, capturing 68 percent of the Democratic vote there, with 1,611 votes to Cutler's 658 and Murray's 85.

That lead was strong enough to lock Cutler out of the race, despite his three-vote Cohasset win and a 725 vote win in Hull, both not enough to defeat Bradley's 953 vote lead over Cutler in Hingham. In total of the three communities, only 225 votes separated Bradley and Cutler.

Walter Murray stayed consistently behind in the polls, never gaining even one-third of the votes.

"I'm happy, but not complacent," said Bradley as he mingled among supporters at Stars restaurant on Hingham Harbor following the election.

In fact, he plans to start knocking again on doors right away.

"Mary Jeanette has done a good job to date, but I have a different vision for the job," said Bradley. "I want to be able to do constituent

A night for political parties

By Constance Pittman Lindner

It was an ebullient group of well-wishers and supporters who partied at Stars on Hingham Harbor Tuesday night to celebrate Democratic state Rep. candidate Garrett Bradley's win in the primary elections.

Further down Route 228, it was a quieter group that filled the upper floor of Hull's Red Parrot on Nantasket Beach. "No tears, no tears," said an elegantly-coifed supporter to the crowd, shortly after Cutler's speech accepting defeat. Family, friends and supporters continued to mull about the room, some discussing what might have gone wrong.

As people gathered around the food set out in a buffet-style island, there was talk of the good turnout in Hull, a narrow three-vote win in Cohasset and a serious defeat in Hingham. Many attributed that to his pro-train stance in a community which has been vocal about its opposition to the Old Colony's plan to revive the Greenbush line

"I have a suspicion that the train issue really cost him," said Democratic town committee member John Ford. "But I'm proud how he was able to get people out, especially in Hull."

As for Cutler, he felt that the race had

Selectmen approve safety measures for King Street

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Many residents would agree that there are too many cars traveling too fast on Cohasset streets. Selectmen Chairman Roseanne McMorris said residents ask her continually about what the town can do to reduce traffic congestion and slow speeders.

The problem concerns residents of King Street so much that they recently formed a neighborhood group, ASK (A Safe King Street), to work on solutions to traffic problems on their busy street.

Members of ASK met with selectmen at their Sept. 14 meeting seeking support for a neighborhood plan to eliminate access to part of King Street to all traffic except for emergency vehicles, school buses and snow plows. Selectmen stopped short of endorsing the plan in favor of a lesser proposal to exclude truck traffic and place an all-way stop sign at the intersection of Pond and King Streets.

"Safety is a real problem. The average speed is 40 miles per hour, which means some cars are going 30 and some are going 50."

King Street resident and ASK member Louis Harvey presented his group's case to selectmen. Although the selectmen did not endorse the group's plan, they did agree to leave a spot open on the Oct. 27 town meeting warrant in case the group wants to ask voters to support its plan. Town meeting must approve any plan to restrict access to a public way.

ASK members asked selectmen to prohibit cars traveling along Beechwood Street from turning left onto King Street to get to Route 3A. According to members of ASK, commuters turn off Beechwood onto King Street to bypass two traffic lights on Route 3A.

"King Street is convenient, there are no traffic lights, no signs, little enforcement, and it makes a challenging, attractive speedway,"

THIS WEEK IN COHASSET

St. Anthony Parish hosts picnic

St. Anthony Parish in Cohasset will hold a parish picnic Oct. 4 at 2 p.m. This annual event will be held on the grounds of the rectory at South Main Street. There will be food, music, games for the children and fun for everyone. A dessert contest will be held for cakes, cookies and bars.

Tickets will be available at the doors of the church after the weekend Masses or by calling (781) 383-6363. A donation of $5 per person is requested.

Bring your family and friends. There will be something for everyone!

Household hazardous waste day

Cohasset's household hazardous waste collection day is Saturday, Oct. 10, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., at Cohasset D.P.W. parking lot, 91 Cedar St.

If you have any questions, call the Cohasset D.P.W. at 383-0273.

Saint Paul's sponsors candy sale

The students at Saint Paul School began their annual fall candy sale Friday, Sept. 11. Funds raised through the sale support school activities throughout the school year.

The candy is provided through M&M/Mars Company. The children are rewarded for their sales with incentives donated by M&M/Mars Company. The class which sells the most candy is awarded with a pizza party.

For more information regarding the candy sale or to purchase candy, call Maureen Kenyon, 740-1998, or Amy Shea, 925-5874.

Fund-raiser set for Murray

Peter and Leah Roy will host a fall fund-raiser for Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray at their home, The Oaks, on Cohasset Harbor, Sunday, Sept. 27.

Tickets are available for $100 per person. Hors d'oeuvres and beverages will be served.

For more information and ticket sales, call Lillian Murray Curley (781) 383-0695, Carolyn Manning (781) 925-4375 or Bill Herman (781) 749-4894.

Ten minutes for walk-ins

Selectmen set aside 10 minutes early in their meetings, usually at 7:40 p.m., to address any concerns from members of the public who have issues that are not on the agenda.

If the matter cannot be handled briefly, it will be placed on a future agenda. Call Town Manager Mark Haddad at 383-4105 for more information. Selectmen's meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and are held on alternate Tuesdays.

The next selectmen's meeting is Tuesday, Sept. 1.

Title V, loans and credits

Selectmen want townspeople to know there are low-interest loans and state income tax credits available to residents who have upgraded a septic system that was in failure.

The loans — which can range from $1,000 to $25,000, at an interest rate of zero, three or five percent depending on the homeowner's income and market area — are available at various banks throughout the state.

The maximum tax credit is $6,000 and is limited to $1,500 in any tax year.

Homeowners with questions should call the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA) at (617) 854-1020 or 854-1333.

Volunteers answer the call

126 from Cohasset assist with Appalachian Service Project

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The Appalachian Mountains are a long way from Cohasset and hardly a popular vacation spot for a week-long summer trip. Most vacationers prefer Cape Cod, Florida, and other coastal areas.

Yet 126 Cohasset residents, many of them members of the Second Congregational Church, paid for a one-week trip to the Appalachian Mountains this summer. Those 126 people weren't on vacation — they were volunteers working on the ASP (Appalachia Service Project), an organized volunteer effort to help Americans in five states who are experiencing financial problems.

The Rev. Glenn "Tex" Henderson of Frakes, Kentcuky started the Appalachia Service Project in 1969 to help residents of Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina who have little money. The project volunteers focus on repairing houses and building new houses so people can live in a safe, warm home, especially in the sometimes harsh winters. Since the project's inception, more than 110,000 volunteers from across the country have repaired or built thousands of homes at no cost to the owners.

The Rev. Gary Ritts of Second Congregational Church led this year's group on the church's 10th consecutive trip to the Appalachians. Ritts said the areas ASP works in are mainly coal-mining regions affected by mine closures and strict federal clean air regulations. The people that ASP helps live in isolated pockets of poverty that are surrounded by more affluent areas.

Volunteers pay to go on the trip, and conduct fund-raising throughout the year for the project.

The Second Congregational Church coordinates the Cohasset volunteers from across the country

"It's become unprofitable to mine in these areas," said Judy Ritts, Gary's wife. "This is deep-vein mining, but many companies have turned to strip-mining out west. The deep-vein mines occasionally re-open and then close again, creating a cycle of poverty."

Judy pointed out that the volunteers who go on the trip work hard long before they get to the Appalachians. But she said it is an experience that is richly rewarding for anyone who participates in the project, but especially for teenagers from Cohasset.

"You realize that you can make the world a better place," Judy said. "At the end of the day, you can see a wheelchair ramp that you helped build, or a home foundation. I think it's a life-changing experience."

Many of the volunteers from this year's group agreed with Judy's assessment.

"I'd like to rave about the teens of this town," said volunteer Ed Connolly. "What an incredible, rich, hard-working group of kids we had that did things that would be difficult for adults to accomplish. They got dirty sweaty without complaining and they still come back year after year."

Sue McNamara, a six-year volunteer from Second Congregational, said the project was a chance to introduce high school students to living in circumstances far different than conditions in Cohasset.

"It's an opportunity for our high school students to work hard for someone else," McNamara said. "They also get an opportunity to meet other students and develop relationships with adults who can serve as mentors to them."

Margot Cheel began volunteering after her daughters went to the Appalachians three times. She said her daughters were so enthusiastic about the project that she decided to go herself.

"I feel it is very important to come and work with people less fortunate than ourselves," Cheel said. "They have a culture that is very special. They have very little and are not bothered by that. We receive more from the project than we give by experiencing this loving culture."

The project also has many rewards for the adults who volunteer for ASP.

Rhonda Meyers said the project teaches volunteers and especially teenagers how to work with something larger than themselves. The ASP project lasts eight weeks and different groups of volunteers rotate in and out each week to work on jobs that take several weeks to complete.

"The kids learn a lot about community service and public service, something that is not easy to learn," Meyers said. "The project is not always about instant gratification. You're part of a larger whole. We dug a hole for a foundation and then left. We had to realize that a good foundation would lay the base for the next group to build a good, solid home. You won't always be there at the end for the hooting and hollering when the job is done."Two years ago, Pam DeLorenzo helped put a roof on a house in W. Virginia. During this year's project, she returned to the house to see how the family was doing.

"We found their house and they remembered us," DeLorenzo said. "It was very exciting for the teenagers because we told them all about our previous experience and it was exciting for everyone to see this family and realize that our stories were real. It's very rare that we get to see one of the families we helped again."

Ritts said the church is always looking for new volunteers. The volunteers will hold a new member drive this Sunday, Sept. 20 upstairs at Second Congregational Church. The group also is trying to raise $40,000 for next summer's trip.

Taking a 12 by 18 foot foundation is hard work as Greg Bilton and Jake Motley discover. Here they take a break to gear up for more work.

Jim Runey and Chris Pratt frame an addition as part of their work experiences with ASP.

Carolyn Pratt, Caitlyn Stansell, Katie Whitehouse and Liz Meyers meet together at an evening gathering to discuss their experiences on he trip.

Weaving her way through the web

Computers click with teen

By Mike Campbell
CORRESPONDENT

In the age of the Internet, while many of the "old school" are still trying to set their VCR clock, it is not uncommon for a 14-year-old to know more than their parents about Web sites, HTML, baud and hits (not the physical kind). What is uncommon, is for a 14-year-old to be writing 750 word articles on the subject for national magazines.

Enter Julia Lovallo.

The Cohasset High School sophomore, who turns 15 on Monday (as she'll be quick to tell you), was bored last Christmas vacation and decided to try her hand at writing a computer tip for PC World magazine — a publication of which she is a subscriber.

"I was really, really bored," said Julia. The magazine offers $50 to anyone who sends in a tip and has it published. Her tip was turned down, but executive editor Donna Heiderstadt e-mailed her regardless. "They said, 'we've got something better for you,'" Julia said. How does $450 sound?

PC World and Family Circle, put together a special magazine, Computers Made Easy, twice a year and Heiderstadt wanted Julia to pen an article for the current Fall issue. She was given two weeks to write her piece, but was leaving in only one week for an exchange program in London. She sat down and started: "When you grab you're cereal box in the morning, you'll see one. Driving to work you'll notice one on a billboard. Sitting in traffic you'll catch a glimpse of one on the side of a bus. They are web site addresses . . ." Seven days and approximately 725 words later she was done.

"I waited a month and a half for them to get back to me," Julia said. Then she had to endure three or four hours of pictures by a local photographer to be used in the magazine. "They took over 250 photos. They picked the one I liked least!"

"I've always been interested in computers," Julia said. "I made my first web page in seventh grade."

Her article is a basic how-to on constructing a web site; something she loves to do. It is written in common language, with the usual peppering of now commonplace technical abbreviations - AOL, URL, FTP, JPEG - and earned the young journalist $500. "All of my friends said they made $400 dollars in part-time jobs over the summer," she said with a giggle.

Unlike the common computer-geek or loner stereotype that is often carried by someone holding as much Internet knowledge as Julia, she is a very articulate, confident, and intelligent girl. Her favorite subjects in school are art , drama and social studies. The exact opposite of shy, she is involved with the drama club and will be the fifth of Twelve Angry Jurors in the high school's October presentation.

Despite her literary talent, journalism is going to take a back seat to computers and graphic design when she reaches colleges. In today's job market, with companies crying for students of the technological explosion, it is a smart career move. Though she does say she would like to try her hand at freelancing a few more stories.

Julia helped her mother Peggy with the design of a Monopoly-styled game board, bearing local businesses rather than Boardwalk and Park Place, for a scholarship fund-raiser coordinated by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. "Julia was my graphic designer," Peggy said. The group did well, selling 700 games at $20 a piece.

Input from her family and friends has been positive. "My family was very excited. My parents were very proud."

She has also received 450 hits on her own web site since the article was published, many from people who are interested in learning more about the Internet or getting their family more involved. Water commission considers land-taking for new tank

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The water commission is considering taking land on Scituate Hill by eminent domain for a new water tank if it cannot strike a purchase deal with the owner.

Water Commissioner John K. McNabb Jr. updated selectmen on the latest plan to build a second water tank.

McNabb said the water commission is negotiating with the owner of the Scituate Hill property, Joe Susi, on an affordable, mutually acceptable site for the tank. If the two sides can't agree on a site, the water commission may submit an article in the October town meeting warrant to take a parcel by eminent domain.

"We're talking with the owner about purchasing the exact parcel we want, but we'll go eminent domain if we have to," McNabb said.

Two years ago, town meeting approved a request by the water commission for $1.4 million to build a new two-million-gallon water tank on Bear Hill next to the town's only other tank. Members of the water commission said, the town needed a new tank to take the other unit out of service for cleaning, and to provide more fire reserves because of increased construction in town. But residents living in the shadow of Bear Hill vigorously protested the construction of another tank in their neighborhood. Opponents of the Bear Hill site suggested the town place the second tank on Scituate Hill, which overlooks Route 3A.

> "We're talking with the owner about purchasing the exact parcel we want, but we'll go eminent domain if we have to."
> McNabb said.

Initially, the water commission opposed Scituate Hill because it would cost more than the $1.4 million approved by town meeting, and result in construction delays while engineers surveyed the land. Last year, town meeting approved an extra $200,000 for the tank, so the water commission could have the option to purchase or take land on Scituate Hill.

Developer Noel Collins has been working with Susi to develop Scituate Hill into residential housing. On earlier occasions, Collins has hinted that Susi might sell the town a parcel of land for $1 if the two parties could agree on a mutually acceptable site for the structure. But both sides coveted the highest part of Scituate Hill. The developers want the high point for its potential view for homes, while the water commission is interested in taking advantage of the increased gravity at the highest location.

Scituate Hill is in a light industrial zone, and the developers would have to go to town meeting to change the zoning to build residential homes.

"It's well beyond the time when we should get this moving, but we've been busy with other business," McNabb said. "We're moving on it right now, although we still have to go before the zoning board of appeals and the Department of Environmental Protection for approval."

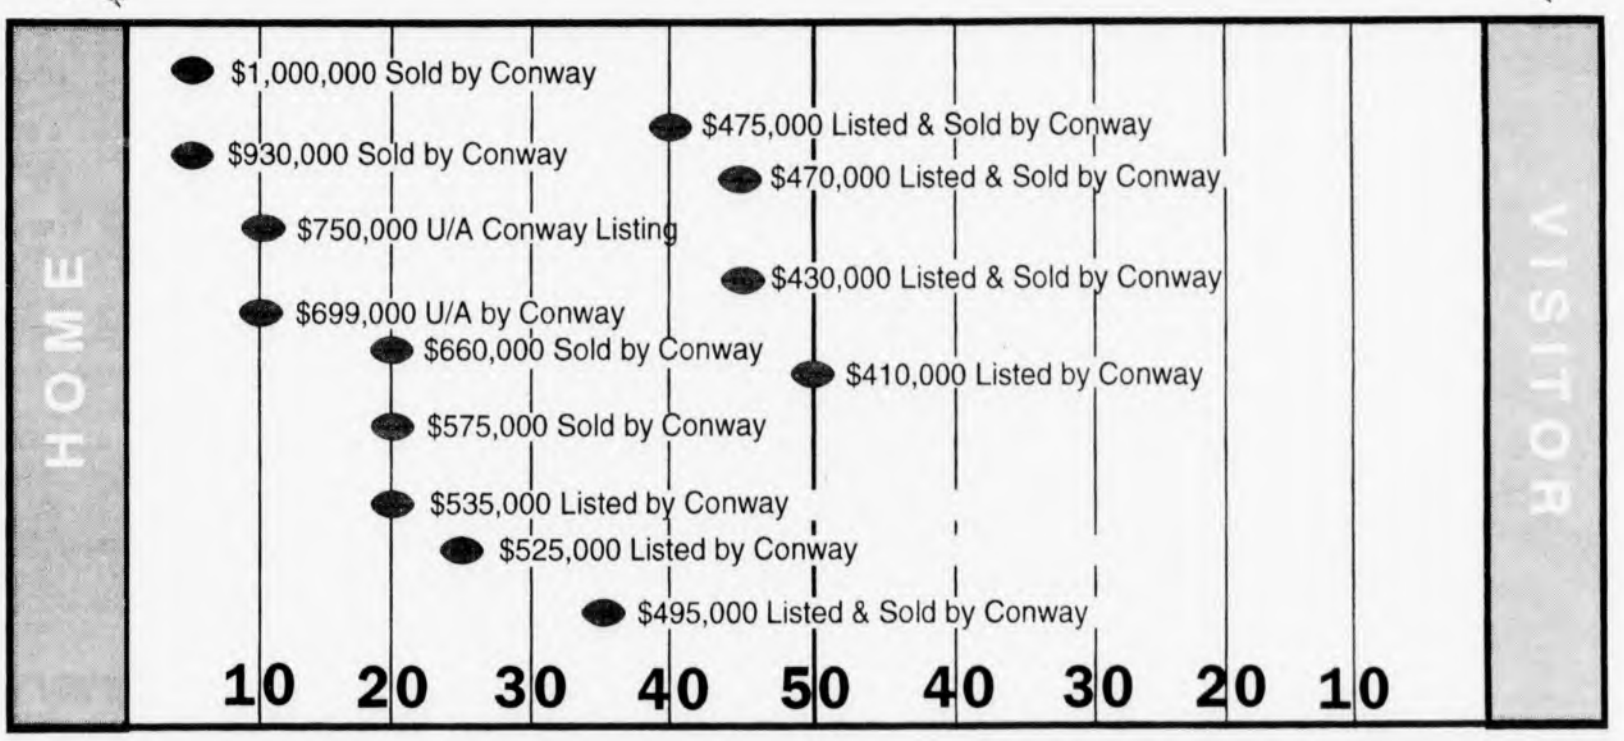
SOS for men and women volunteers

Since its beginning in 1912, the Social Service League's Cohasset Consignment Shop has relied on volunteers. Manager Andy Merrill is sending out an SOS to all retirees — men and women — along with newcomers in the towns which benefit from the services of the Social Service League mainly, Hingham, Scituate, Hull, Norwell and Cohasset.

Merrill said volunteers are especially needed on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, but assistance always is needed throughout the week. Merrill added that there is great comradeship, fellowship and camaraderie among the volunteers; and most volunteers look forward to not only helping a great cause but the friendships that have developed over the years. All that are interested should call 383-0697. The non-profit shop is located in Shaw's plaza on Route 3A and is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Sunday.



Proceeds from the shop benefit the flu shots, meals on wheels, battered women, keep well programs to mention only a few.

Merrill also encouraged all South Shore residents to come view the men and women tweed jackets, fur coats, silver tea service, hand-knit gloves and sweaters for the winter cold days.

Lamberts Lane bus solution raises safety questions

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

A successful trial run of a 70-seat school bus on Lamberts Lane seemed to be the answer to residents' prayers for closer-to-home pick-up. But the proposal only raised more questions among the school committee members who were expected to endorse the change.

As the situation stands now, Lamberts Lane students must walk down their narrow and winding street to reach a bus stop at the corner of Route 228. Traffic on the lane has increased due to a growing population there, along with delivery trucks that stop at the Cohasset Golf Club and the construction contractor business there.

School committee member Mark DeGiacomo, who has taken up the issue on behalf of the street's residents, recently met with selectman Nan Roth and golf club president Clifford Mitman to forge some resolution of the problem.

At that meeting, Mitman offered a gated drive on his property for the bus to make a turn in. "Cliff was very accommodating," said DeGiacomo. "He said that he would even move the gate further in if necessary."

To test the gate's usability, resident Janet Figueiredo arranged for a bus to come to Lamberts Lane. Safety officer Richard Yocum was on hand to oversee the successful turn-in and back-out of the bus.

What committee member Joe McElroy wanted to know about was the legality of a bus backing-up in the future, without the benefit of Yocum or some other guide.

"I want to make sure we're not breaking any state law with this," he said. "I don't want us backing up when it's not a good practice."

"It's not preferable," said DeGiacomo. "But I don't think that this is illegal. I believe there are at least five other places in town that require backing up."

Concerns were also raised by committee members about setting a precedent with Lamberts Lane. "I can think of several other streets that will be asking for the same consideration," said McElroy. "We haven't even been able to settle this one issue in over six months."

There is also a time issue to consider. A Lamberts Lane detour would need to be added to the scheduled bus run. Were other streets to ask for the same consideration, the extra time taken up by the new detours would significantly lengthen the scheduled routes.

"I think that the concern has been

New program aims to address drug, alcohol problems

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The eight-years-young Safe Homes program has been canceled by the town's drug and alcohol committee, due to lack of participation.

An information and referral telephone hotline along with a substance abuse booklet are two new solutions to be offered by the town's drug and alcohol committee to address residents' substance abuse concerns.

Safe Homes, a program intended to answer parents' needs to know where there children are and that place is drug- and alcohol-free, never really took off.

Program participants had agreed to be present at teen parties in their home, as well as to allow their names, addresses and phone numbers to be listed in a directory sent out to other cooperating parents.

"The program was ineffective," said committee chairman Rev. Clifford Cutler. "People didn't use it to contact other parents. Some also felt it wasn't reliable and a few parents were concerned that it infringed on their privacy. They didn't like committing themselves to a pledge like that."

At one time, nearly a quarter of the 600 families with children in grades six through 12 participated. However, the program never enjoyed great success and even fell into disuse for more than a year at a time.

Using a new name, CASA (Cohasset Against Substance Abuse), the drug and alcohol committee's is at work on a substance abuse handbook for parents.

School committee member Patricia Martin offered up a handbook from the New Jersey town she resided in prior to her move to Cohasset last year. The indexed booklet tackles teens' use of alcohol, tobacco, narcotics, hallucinogens, inhalants, cocaine, crack and other abused drugs, as well as tips on parties, curfews, legal consequences and prevention programs.

Police officer and committee member Lisa Matos, who was present at the committee's meeting last Wednesday night, questioned the expense of the visually appealing handbook. "Does it have to be so fancy? You have a $2,000 grant and about $3,000 from the car show and maybe this will just end up in someone's junk drawer."

(State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, procured the $2,000 grant from Bell Atlantic Phone Company.)

Martin conceded that the booklet might well be destined for recipients' "junk drawers." However, she also pointed out that the bullet-

This architect's rendering is the library trustees' proposal for the Osgood. It is among several plans being considered at a meeting tonight.

Osgood reuse options aired tonight

Library lobbies for 70-year-old building

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

The library trustees are bullish on their proposal to build a new town library in the now vacant, old Joseph Osgood School off Ripley Road.

To that end, they plan a presentation before cable-TV cameras and the public at 7 p.m. tonight in the audio visual room at the middle/high school.

"The library is for everybody," said library trustee chairwoman Patience Towle. "No one doesn't benefit from a good town library.

"Once we establish the facts and go forward, who's going to be against us?" she asked.

But the trustees' plan must compete with two others to be considered. The Osgood Reuse Committee, charged with finding the best use of the venerable old building, has narrowed the field of six companies — which submitted proposals for reuse of the building — down to two. Both proposals seek to build condominiums in the school but offer space at the lower corner of the property to construct a separate, new library building. The plans from Keen Development Corporation of Cambridge and South Shore Housing Development Corporation of Kingston will be on the table at tonight's forum along with the library trustees' proposal.

The old Osgood School closed in June and has been replaced by the brand-new Osgood School off Sohier Street. When the school department first lobbied taxpayers for a new school three years ago, it suggested the Osgood School could be returned to the tax rolls to offset the cost of building the $10 million elementary school.

But at the time, no one anticipated the need for a new library, recalled Osgood Reuse Committee Chairman Chris Ford.

"The library was not part of the equation at that time," Ford said.

And it wasn't until the results of the town facilities audit last May that the need for a new library was driven home to the trustees who have spent the past several years grappling with the future direction of the library housed in the now cramped 8,000-square-foot Paul Pratt building on South Main Street.

The facilities audit looked at all municipal buildings in town and identified needed maintenance, access issues and related costs. Trustees voted shortly thereafter to "reluctantly, but firmly abandon the idea that time, study or money can make the Paul Pratt Library building suitable for Cohasset's future use as a public library," according to the trustees' report. They asked for money to conduct a library feasibility study and hired Stahl Associates Architects of Cambridge.

Even then, the trustees hoped the architectural firm could find a creative, clever way to expand the existing 100-year-old, beloved Paul Pratt Library which so many townspeople have great nostalgia and affection for. But those plans were dashed because of the cost and environmental problems related to parking expansion due to the site's proximity to wetlands, Towle explained.. She said the trustees can present a cost scenario tonight that will allay taxpayers' fears.

Towle explained the library proposal for Osgood costs $675,000 less than building a new library on the site. Not only is it cheaper than the estimated nearly $3 million to construct a new building, but the library would be able to take advantage of an architecturally pleasing structure.

"We would have a brick and slate building with gorgeous 70-year-old style windows versus a practical but homely building with wooden siding at a much higher price tag," she said.

The library plan for Osgood would demolish the 1950 wing of the building, toward the village, to create a second entrance and parking off Ripley Road. The Ripley Road level of the remaining school would provide 15,000 square feet for the library.

The two-story, 1929 addition, on the playground side of the building could be retained for other town use or rented out. Towle said a day-care center has expressed interest in leasing that portion of the building

PLUMBING MUSINGS

BLIZZARD TOILET

The blizzard of February 1978 was an historic storm that no one who lives on the Northeast coast will ever forget. It included hurricane force winds, over two feet of snow, and flood tides that inundated the coast. Needless to say we were swamped with work. Houses were without electrical power for days, and with the cold temperatures, all the plumbing and heating pipes froze and split. Some houses along the coast line had been completely demolished by the pounding surf. In the newspapers and on television they kept showing pictures of the devastation. On the front page of the Boston Globe was a photo of what remained of one of the houses on Sand Hills beach. Only the first floor remained with one of the toilets still in place and nothing else around it. I had installed that toilet the previous summer. I always wanted to use that photo in an advertisement, but I have never done it.

Too much at stake

The primary results are in and now it's down to two candidates from two parties. The choices are clear and there are vast differences between the two candidates, Mary Jeannette Murray of Cohasset and Garret Bradley of Hingham.

But this is not about who is the better candidate, that will come later. This is about generating interest in an all-important race.

There is a lot at stake in the November election. Cohasset, Hingham and Hull are facing some major issues — primarily the future of education and the state's role in shaping it, both from a financial and curriculum perspective.

There are a number of other issues on the horizon as well — community projects such as school renovations to the fate of the Greenbush line of the Old Colony railroad.

It's up to all of us to take these next several weeks and get better informed about the issues, the candidates and where they stand. Hingham, Cohasset and Hull are fortunate to have such two qualified and passionate people who want to work for the better of the district. It is one of the few exciting races shaping up on the South Shore.

What we do with the contested races is up to all of us. We urge voters to spend the coming weeks attending public forums, debates and reading up on the candidates.

It's easy to sit back and let it all happen. We can understand why people are feeling apathetic about politics. So much has happened in recent weeks and months at the national level to make us all question politicians in general and their motives. Certainly our key leaders in Washington have been less than exemplary, from President Clinton to congressmen and senators. It would be laughable, but it is too depressing to see all this unfolding.

That apathy is spilling down to the state and local levels. Secretary of State William Galvin, the state's No. 1 elections official, asks folks to put their concerns aside and focus on the upcoming election. He recognizes people are emotional about all that has happened, but urges people to still participate in voting and the democratic process. Primary turnout statewide was low this week, as it has been in many states hosting primaries. Many are attributing that to the dismay and disgust people feel about the current climate in Washington.

We need to stem the apathy. We need to muster the interest and enthusiasm to make our local elections relevant and important in our lives. The state representative's race will generate local excitement and will heat up in the coming weeks as we take the opportunity to address the differences of Murray and Bradley. We'll also have choices for a number of state races.

Democracy is alive and well and we're confident it will be displayed in the coming weeks and at the general election in November. You can look to this newspaper – your hometown community newspaper – to provide you with insights, news and issues related to all the local races. We'll make sure we do our part to provide you with critical information you'll need to make your informed decisions.

The impeachment of a president, part one

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Imagine a member of the President's cabinet throwing roadblocks in the way of his boss on the key issues of the day.

And imagine the President telling the recalcitrant secretary to clean out his desk and take a hike.

And further imagine the secretary telling his chief, "Hell, no. I won't go. And I got the law behind me."

That was the situation that brought about the impeachment of Andrew Johnson, thus far our only President to be charged with "high crimes and misdemeanors." He was judged "not guilty" by a single vote.

It was February, 1868. The Civil War was over for nearly three years. The first Republican President, Abraham Lincoln, was dead. His successor, Vice President Johnson, a self-educated tailor from Tennessee, was a Democrat, specially chosen by Lincoln in 1864 to unite the divided country behind him.

Congress was the stronghold of the Republicans, led by Congressman Thaddeus Stevens, who once called the Constitution "a worthless bit of old parchment" and believed that "white people of the south ought never again to be trusted with power."

Johnson, like Lincoln before him, felt that the southerners had never really left the Union since there was no provision for secession in the Constitution, so he saw no reason why the rebel states should not be restored forthwith and their representatives allowed back into Congress.

"Do not forget," thundered our own "radical" senator from Massachusetts, Charles Sumner, "that we stand face-to-face with an enormous and malignant usurper, through whom the republic is imperiled. You must not forget that the President is a bad man, the author of incalculable woe to his country."

While the Congress chopped away at the presidential powers, Johnson told an audience in St. Louis that he was going to clean house of his adversaries in Washington. "I will kick them out as fast as I can," he said.

In that atmosphere, Congress passed the Tenure of Office Act, forbidding the President from firing any appointed government official who had been confirmed by the Senate unless the Senate gave its "advice and consent." It passed over the President's veto.

Clearly, to Johnson at least, the actions of the secretary of war, Edwin Stanton, a holdover from the Lincoln days, made him a spy for the radicals in the inner circles of the White House.

"Public considerations of a high character constrain me to say that your resignation as secretary of war will be accepted," wrote Johnson.

"I have the honor to say that public considerations of a high character, which alone had induced me to continue at the head of this department, constrain me not to resign," Stanton wrote back.

The President then fired him and on Feb. 24, 1868, the House of Representatives voted 126-47 to impeach the Chief Executive on 11 counts of "high crimes and misdemeanors," most of them involving the Tenure of Office Act.

The trial before the Senate lasted through March and April and into May before the senators were asked to vote on the first count. By the time they had reached the Rs, the count was 24 for conviction with 11 more certain to vote for it. A two-thirds majority, or 36 votes, were needed to oust the President. The radicals had 35.

The months of bickering and political maneuvering came down to one man, Sen. Edmund Ross of Kansas, who sometimes voted with the radicals, sometimes didn't.

"Tell the damned scoundrel that if he wants money, there is a bushel of it here to be had," stormed Rep. Ben Butler of Massachusetts. The rumor around Washington was that Ross would be kidnapped and offered the alternatives to vote for conviction or be killed.

No one knows Ross's thoughts as it came his turn to vote, but he wrote later that he feared the conviction of the President would so degrade the office that Congress would become the dominant of the three branches of government and democracy would be destroyed.

With that, he voted "not guilty," thus ending the only impeachment trial of an American President.

Take the wheel

STAFF PHOTOS/ DEANNA PUTMAN

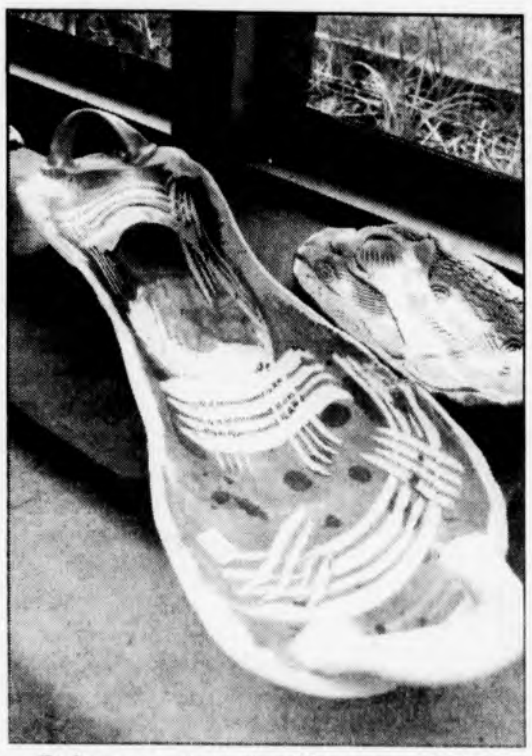
By DeAnna Putnam
STAFF WRITER

For those who are not afraid to get their hands dirty and are looking to express themselves artistically with something to show for it, pottery may be the answer. And if you're looking to take the wheel for a spin, George Dalton is the driving instructor to see.

Dalton, who has been working with clay for over 20 years, teaches classes at both the Duxbury Art Association and the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset starting the end of this month.

"Clay is great — you don't have to even be able to draw stick figures to be good with clay," says Dalton.

Dalton first discovered his artistic niche while he and his two sisters ran a gallery in Detroit. One of his sisters, Judy Rossman, was the first to venture into pottery and sparked the interest of her two siblings. Years later, both Dalton and his sister are still working with clay, but "we've taken off into different directions," says Dalton, "She's into more decorative pottery and I'm into practical pottery."



He eventually left Detroit and moved to Massachusetts where Dalton was hired to teach special education in Brockton. He taught from '86 through '93 until he got "burnt out," quit his job and went into pottery full time.

Dalton is primarily self-taught and consistently seeks out opportunities to improve his skills. Over this past summer he spent some time at Castle Hill Art Center in Truro "where the professionals go to learn." Dalton picked up pointers on how to attach things while still wet, new ways of wrapping color and how to work with sectional forms.

"My arms are only so long. If something's going to be over 2 fi to 3 feet tall you have to do it in sections, unless your a giant with really long arms."

While Dalton has taught pottery in Cohasset for several years now, he began teaching in Duxbury only within the past year and a half. He teaches three sessions a year — September, January and April — or eight weeks at a time.

When he's not teaching, Dalton works out of his home in Falmouth. His basement is set up with his wheel and kiln and plenty of storage space. Out front he has a glassed-in area where finished product is displayed, and has just finished building a shed in back for more space.

Dalton speculates that 25 percent of what he sells is custom-made, for which the customer is willing to wait about 4 to six weeks.

"It has to fit into the firing schedule," he explains.

His pieces can range anywhere from $5 to $300 and are oven-proof, microwave and dishwasher safe.

"Basically, people are paying for my skill. Other factors can come into play as well. For example, if I use cobalt, which is pretty expensive, that can raise the price," says Dalton. He primarily works with brown stoneware which produces more muted colors, but occasionally will work with white stoneware which will produce brighter color.

"Glazing can be unpredictable — sometimes the color doesn't always come out the way you want it too," he says, "And that, too, can lower or raise the price."

According Dalton, bowls are his hottest selling item as they are the most versatile.

Dalton maintains a pretty tight schedule, with Mondays and Tuesdays reserved for producing his own work as well as giving private lessons (he currently has about four students which he teaches one on one). He'll spend all day Wednesday and Thursday teaching from 9 a.m. until as late as 11 p.m. He'll then go back to his at-home routine on Friday and Saturday.

Evenings are reserved for music which Dalton states is "One-third of my life." He plays trumpet for the Cape Cod Conservatory Wind Ensemble; Brass Ring; and the Falmouth Town Band.

Dalton combines his artistic expertise and education background in Duxbury where he teachers once class for children with special needs. He explains that the children's classes are always shorter than adults, but with special needs kids he'll pay more attention to hand dexterity and coordination.

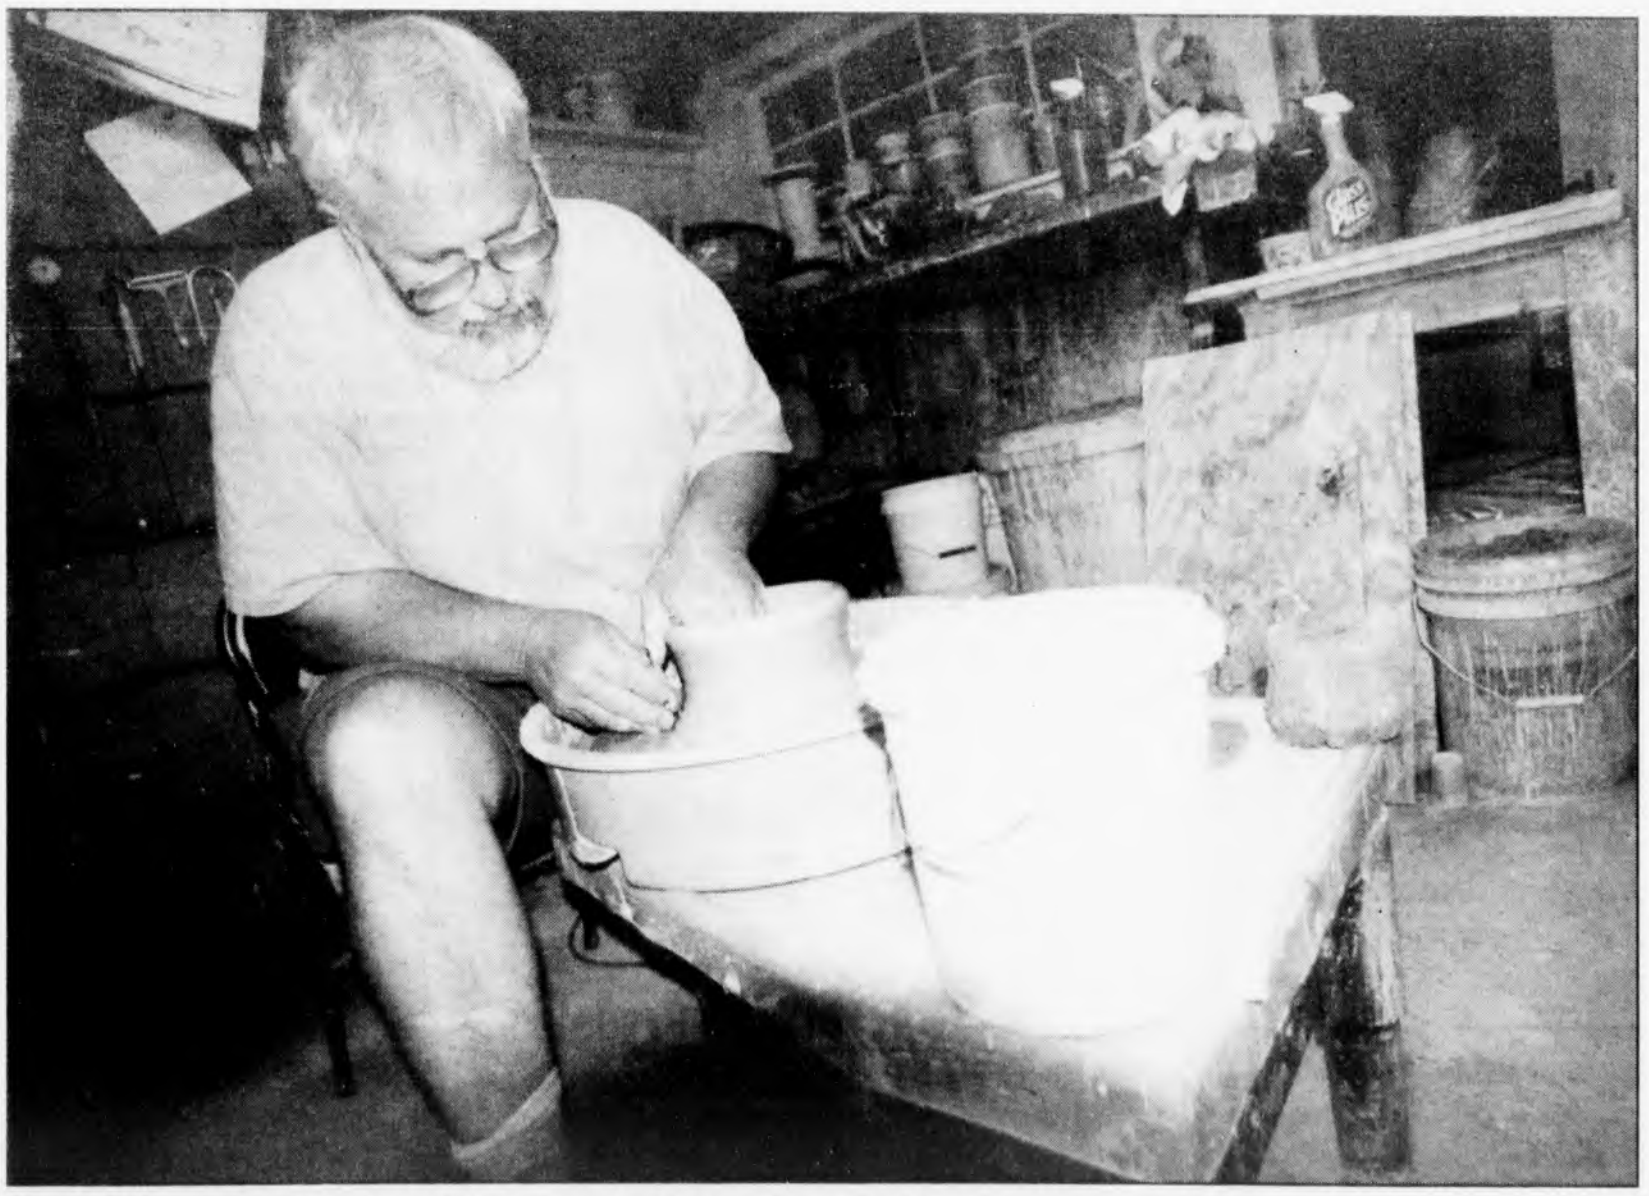
"Kids love it — they break all the rules. A kid will attack something in a totally different way. Sometimes they've shown me some shortcuts. Adults are more cautious — life has made them more cynical."

Throughout his eight-week course, Dalton will take his students from hand-building pinch pots to using the wheel, which he says ultimately takes years of practice. He'll also teach them alternative ways of making bowls, for example, using a beach ball or a balloon.

"Balloons are a great way to work — you just wrap the clay around a balloon or beach ball and when the clay stiffens, you pop it," he says.

By the third and fourth week, students will be decorating the surface of their designs using color slips, which is basically "soupy clay with color mixed in" as well as making coil pots which are long ropes of clay wrapped around each other. Then in the fifth week students will learn glazing.

"By this time they have several pieces made. I like to do this in the middle of the course so they have something to take home."



The last few weeks allow students time mostly for self-work and they get a chance to discover their personal style. Then Dalton will teach them how to pull and attach handles, make spouts for pitchers and how to form lids.

Finally, this next batch of pottery will also be glazed, which usually ends up being about five to six kiln loads.

"Students are amazed at how fast it can be produced. They expect to come away with three or four pieces, but end up with a about 20," says Dalton.

Dalton says that sometimes you can immediately pick out students "born with a touch for the wheel" within the first week. But although some students won't get the hang of things until the third week, that student may end up surpassing the one who hit the ground running day one. Other students, he says, just need help tackling a particular piece.

"The process is magical — the way it grows out of your hand in 15 seconds," says Dalton. "You start with just a lump and end up with something beautiful."

George Dalton says turning a lump of clay into a piece of pottery is a magical process.

Dalton Pottery is located at 645 Waquoit Hwy (Route 28), East Falmouth, MA, 02536. Tel: 508-540-5236.

President Clinton's fate now rests with Congress

Delahunt, on House Judiciary Committee, will help decide

By Julie A. Mehegan
STAFF WRITER

Congressman Bill Delahunt has a lot on his mind.

Along with his colleagues on the House Judiciary Committee, the Quincy Democrat has the enormous responsibility of deciding how to proceed now that Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr has submitted the results of his investigation of President Clinton to Congress.

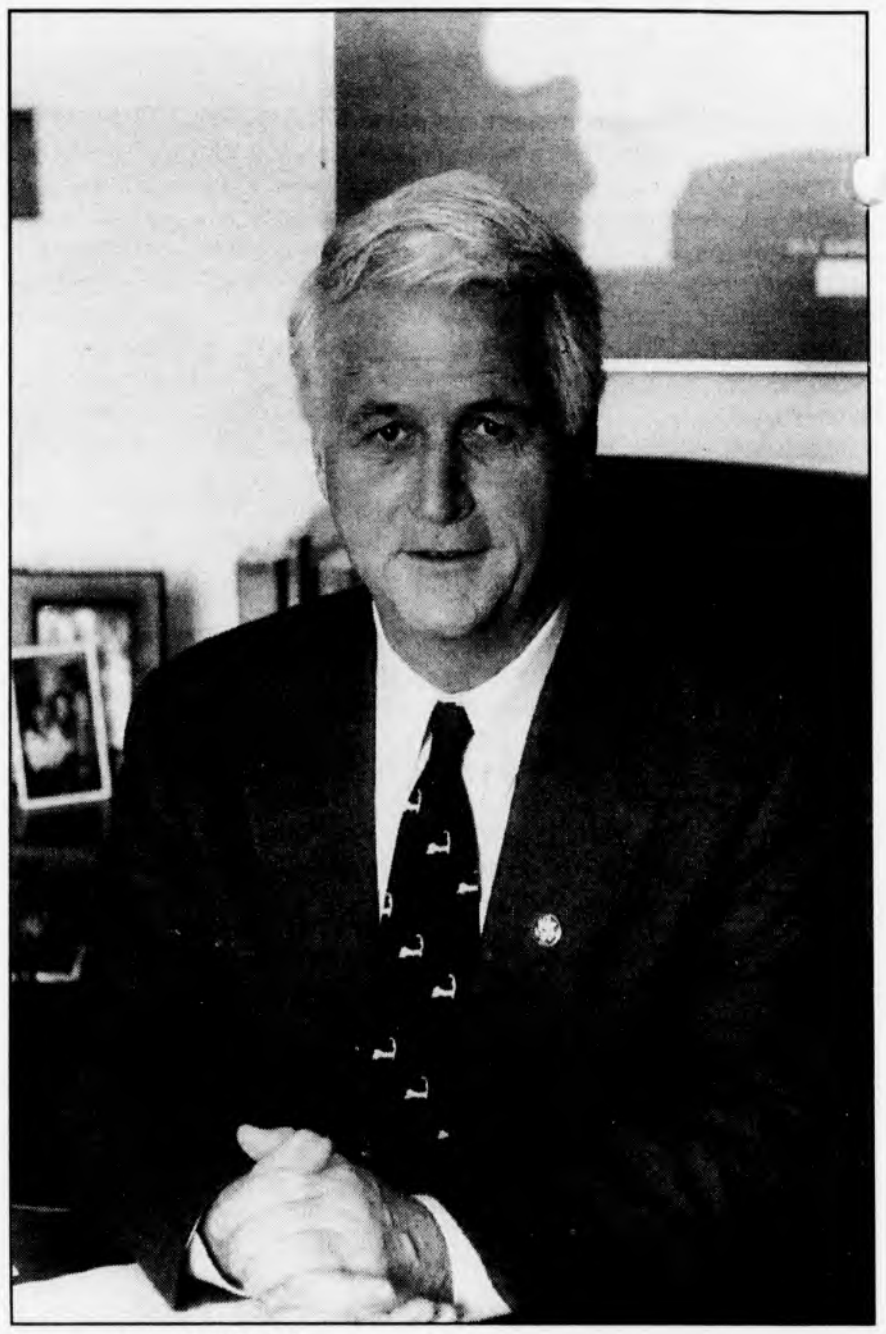
But despite the frenzy surrounding the release of the report, a spokesman for Delahunt said residents of the 10th Congressional District, which includes Cohasset, should feel confident that their Congressman is taking a slow and measured approach to the proceedings.

"We want South Shore residents and Cape Codders and all Americans to have confidence in the outcome of this case," said Steve Schwadron. "If the process is skewed or tainted or undignified, it will not achieve its overall objective of restoring public confidence in our ability to govern ourselves," he added.

On the House floor Friday, Delahunt spoke out in opposition to the immediate release of the Starr report on the Internet, but not because he thought it should be kept from people, Schwadron said.

"Congressman Delahunt didn't oppose the release of the report, but he opposed the blind, mindless release," Schwadron said. He said Delahunt feared the immediate release would result in confusion for members of Congress as well as the American people.

"Some of the frenzy surrounding the release reflected what we were concerned about. [Delahunt] wanted to pursue it in a dignified, methodical fashion. That didn't happen," Schwadron said.



Delahunt would have preferred that the chairs of the Judiciary Committee have an opportunity to privately review the report before its release, Schwadron said.

Holding off on the release would also have removed the opportunity for the president's side to say they had been wronged by the release of the report, and ultimately would have allowed Congress to do its job more thoroughly and carefully, he added.

As the former district attorney in Norfolk County, Delahunt understands the importance of weighing the evidence on both sides before forming an opinion on a case, Schwadron said. He has spent hours poring over the report in anticipation of the Judiciary Committee's role in the proceedings.

The next step is for the Judiciary Committee to meet and decide when and how to release the remaining portion of the report, which may number 2,000 pages, and which is still locked in a House vault on Capitol Hill, Schwadron said.

There is also the question of how to handle the release of the president's videotaped grand jury testimony. The Judiciary Committee is scheduled to meet Thursday, when those decisions may be made. Schwadron said the materials will likely be released within the next two weeks.

Congressman Bill Delahunt

Schwadron said Congressman Delahunt hopes members of Congress have learned some lessons from what happened last Friday, and will take a cautious approach to the release of the remaining materials.

The Judiciary Committee will then bear the awesome burden of deciding if and how to proceed with any action against the president. "Be it impeachment or another step, there really are no rules on anything else," Schwadron said.

In the meantime, Congressman Delahunt is taking a cautious approach. Unlike some other members of Congress, Delahunt is reserving judgment until all the facts are in, Schwadron said.

"Every bone in his body is telling him that while he may have personal views on what the players in this drama have done, that's not the point. His job is to get acquainted with the balance of the evidence so if he were to enter judiciary committee hearings, he would be prepared to cast an informed vote," Schwadron said.

Souvenir cassette to spread holiday cheer

Proceeds to benefit bell tower fund

By Carol Britton Meyer
STAFF WRITER

Even as the final days of summer linger on, the Hingham Memorial Bell Tower committee and VFW William R. Cutler Hingham Post #6053 are thinking ahead to the holidays.

This month, committee and post member volunteers are launching a fund-raising project. Proceeds from the sale of souvenir audio cassettes entitled ÒHoliday Cheer in Hingham Square" will help pay for the maintenance of the town's treasured historic Memorial Bell Tower as well as benefiting Hingham and other Boston-area veterans. The Memorial Bell Tower was built in 1912 and is in need of repair.

Described as "an historically unique souvenir recording," the audio cassette presents music from the bells in the free-standing bell tower, located next to Old Ship Church, which was erected in 1681 in Hingham Square.

"We had more fun recording this tape," said Master Chimer Eugene D. (Pete) Shaw. "We hope it will lift people's spirits during the holiday season."

It was decided to create a tape of Christmas music because the season

The six-story tower was designed by William Rodger Greeley in the style of a European Campanile (a self-standing construction near a church which houses bells). The bell ringers' room is dedicated to Hingham's founder, the Rev. Peter Hobart, who was Old Ship Church's first minister.

Summit tonight on Linden Drive blasting

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The water commission will hold a public meeting tonight at 7:30 in the selectmen's meeting room at town hall to offer a solution for water loss in the Linden Drive area.

Residents of Linden Drive, Linden Circle, Rustic Drive and Stoneleigh Lane are invited to attend the special meeting. Water Commissioner John K. McNabb Jr. informed selectmen at their Sept. 14 meeting that blasting by workers laying a new sewer line in the Linden Street area had left some residents without water for several days in some cases.

"The water line apparently was laid on ledge and not properly packed in gravel," McNabb said.

Currently, the water pipes in the area are breaking each time the contractor blasts ledge to lay the new sewer main. McNabb said the water commissioners asked project engineer Domenic Tutela to divert workers to a different part of the job until the town could come up with a solution. The water commission is proposing a one-day planned water outage to install line-stops in four locations. Line-stops allow workers to repair isolated sections of pipe without shutting down service to the entire water main.

"If more blasting is necessary, we expect there will be a break," McNabb said. "If so, we can use the line breaks to isolate the problem and affect only 10-15 homes."

Selectman Diane Sullivan also restated a condition by the board of selectmen that no blasting take place before 9 a.m.

The water commission also plans to install a temporary above-ground line from Forest Avenue, adding a second source of water to the area. Currently, all water to the Linden Drive area comes from a Jerusalem Road main.

McNabb said the commission hoped the residents of the area would support the plan because workers planned to do all the work in one day.

Selectmen approve safety measures for King Street

Harvey said. "Safety is a real problem. The average speed is 40 miles per hour, which means some cars are going 30 and some are going 50."

Harvey said his group was aware that closing the intersection would also divert a lot of traffic farther down the highway to the corner of Beechwood and Route 3A. ASK members proposed asking the state to place left turn lanes on both sides of Route 3A at the Beechwood Street intersection. Harvey said there were 17 accidents last year at the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood Street, which was redesigned last year to make room for the new Shaw's supermarket.

Harvey said data supplied by the Cohasset Police shows King Street accounted for 10 percent of all traffic tickets issued in Cohasset last year, with 2,500 cars per day traveling the busy route.

"This road was built for horse and buggy traffic, not 2,500 cars a day," Harvey said. "The engineering is out of step, and the traffic is increasing because of construction south of King Street."

"I have a right to use King Street to get to my office," Sawchuk said. "I pay taxes and I think you're trying to take away my right to use that street. I have a problem with all of this."

Although closing off part of King Street would be an inconvenience for residents, the road would be much safer, Harvey said. He said it was a trade-off the majority of King Street residents supported.

But the selectmen did not favor closing off any of King Street to traffic.

"It seems to me you're asking for a drastic solution, which is to close a public street to the public," said Selectmen Chairman Roseanne McMorris. "I think this is a universal problem throughout town. It is the thing people talk to me about the most."

Selectman Nan Roth favored implementing less drastic solutions rejected by ASK when researching a solution. She liked the idea of stop signs at key intersections to slow traffic, or restricting traffic at peak travel times.

Selectman Tom Callahan didn't like the idea of closing a major town road during rush hour. He said traffic on Route 3A was already heavy at rush hour, and closing King Street might make things worse. Callahan also pointed out that the state had rejected previous requests for left-turn lanes at Beechwood and Route 3A

Beechwood Street resident Wayne Sawchuk bristled at the suggestion that the town deny him access to King Street.

"I have a right to use King Street to get to my office," Sawchuk said. "I pay taxes and I think you're trying to take away my right to use that street. I have a problem with all of this."

Selectmen finally decided to test a two-part plan for several months. The town will place an all-way stop sign at the intersection of King Street and Pond Street. An illuminated sign at the top of a hill before the intersection will warning drivers to slow down for the upcoming stop sign. The town will also ban all trucks heavier than 2-1/2 tons from King Street, although Town Manager Mark Haddad pointed out that the state would have to approve that plan. If the steps taken have no effect, the selectmen pledged to revisit the topic and consider other steps.

'Baptism by fire' for superintendent

By Constance Pittman Lindner

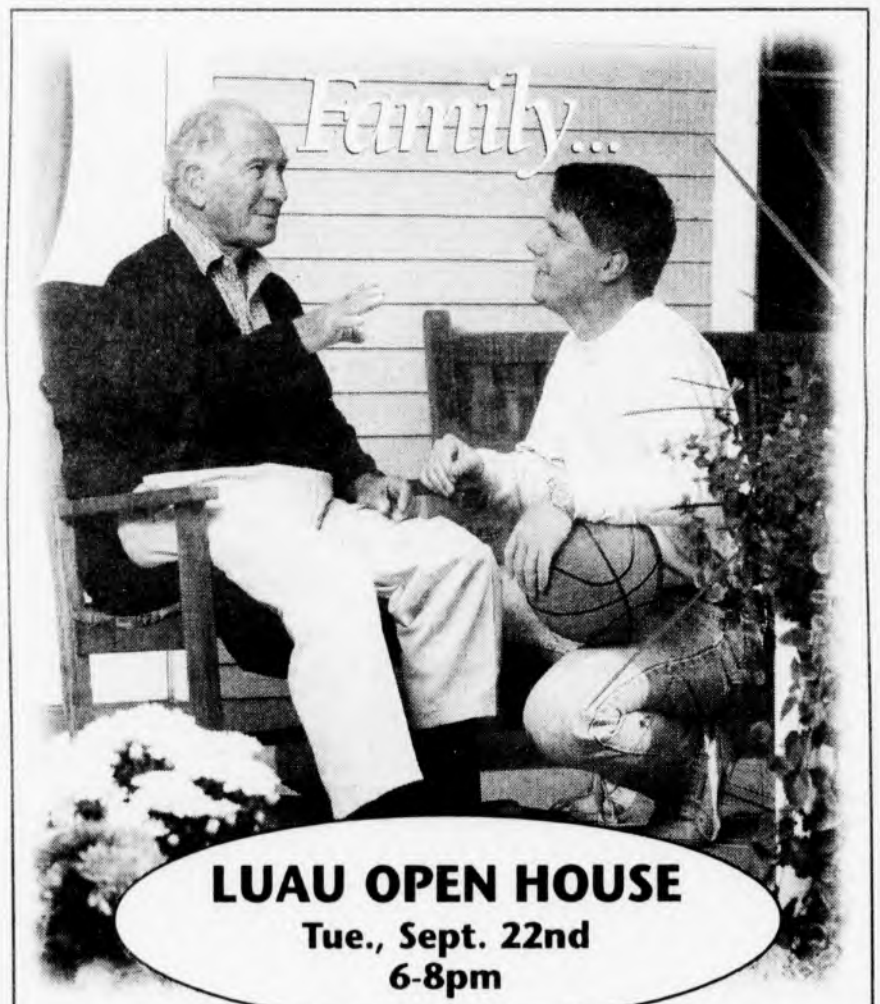
New school superintendent Edward "Ted" Malvey met with the Cohasset school committee for the first time as a group last week.

Malvey was introduced to committee members by chairman Rick Shea fairly early in the meeting. "We're glad to have him on board," he said.



Outlining his immediate plans, the superintendent mentioned the bus route issue — especially Lamberts Lane; and the South Shore Charter School's rental of space at the old Joseph Osgood Elementary school.

Though his job officially began Sept. 1, the new superintendent had been visiting over the summer and was appraised of many of the more pressing school issues by departing superintendent Stephen Hart.

"Baptism by fire," is how Malvey described his first seven days at work in his new office.

"I've looked at the Lamberts Lane problem," said Malvey. "It feels like deja vu already, which tells you how familiar I've become with the issue. There are many other areas in town like Lamberts Lane so once you open the door for one street, you have to commit to it."

The new superintendent also discussed the closing of the old Osgood and plans to rent out space to a charter school and whether funds received from the rental would be under the control of the school committee.

MIKE HARDMAN

I have been here before.

In some ways I never left.

I've got the memories to prove it.

In fact, some of the experiences have been physically painful.

I suffered a concussion in a football game in Hanover or I think it was Hanover. It might have beeb...well I'm not quite sure.

I wrenched my back in Norwell in another football game in 1975. In a way that turned out good. There's a couple of times every month or so that it turns out to be a good excuse to get out of yard work.

I hurt my right knee for the first time against Abington. Not a good thing.

I think I injured a finger in a youth football game in Rockland, but that was so long ago that I think we wore leather helmets.

Twice Hanover High football teams prevented my East Bridgewater Vikings from going to the Super Bowl.

Teams I've covered in recent years have had their hearts broken by Duxbury and Hingham teams.

Now, for the very good:

My Al Bundy moment: I once ran for a 92-yard touchdown in a junior varsity game in Cohasset. That was pretty cool at the time.

On my first date with my wife, we went to Abington-Rockland football game in Middleboro of all places. There have been no injures there. In fact, Saturday is our 11th anniversary. That's a very good thing.

Both my son and daughter were born in Weymouth. That's another very good thing.

When I was considering making a job change, I asked my family and friends for advice. The basic thought was, "well, you've always been a South Shore guy."

That's true.

That's why I'm here.

Take out the four years away at college, I've spent my entire life living on the South Shore.

For the last six years, I've worked for the Community Newspaper Company in the West as the sports editor of the Easton Journal, Mansfield News, Sharon Advocate, Norton Mirror, Country Gazette, Stoughton Journal and Canton Journal. A job I enjoyed very much..

But during all of that time, I've still made my home here.

That's why when I was offered the opportunity to become the senior sports editor for this paper and the Community Newspapers South group, I knew it was time to come back to the South Shore.

In the end, it all added up for me.

But, enough about me. This is about you, your town and your teams.

That is what the sports pages of a

Classes booming at South Shore Community Center

By David Wolcott

No matter if you're an infant still dependent on your parents for everything or an 18-year-old wanting absolutely nothing to do with those same people, the South Shore Community Center in Cohasset may just have a gymnastics program for you.

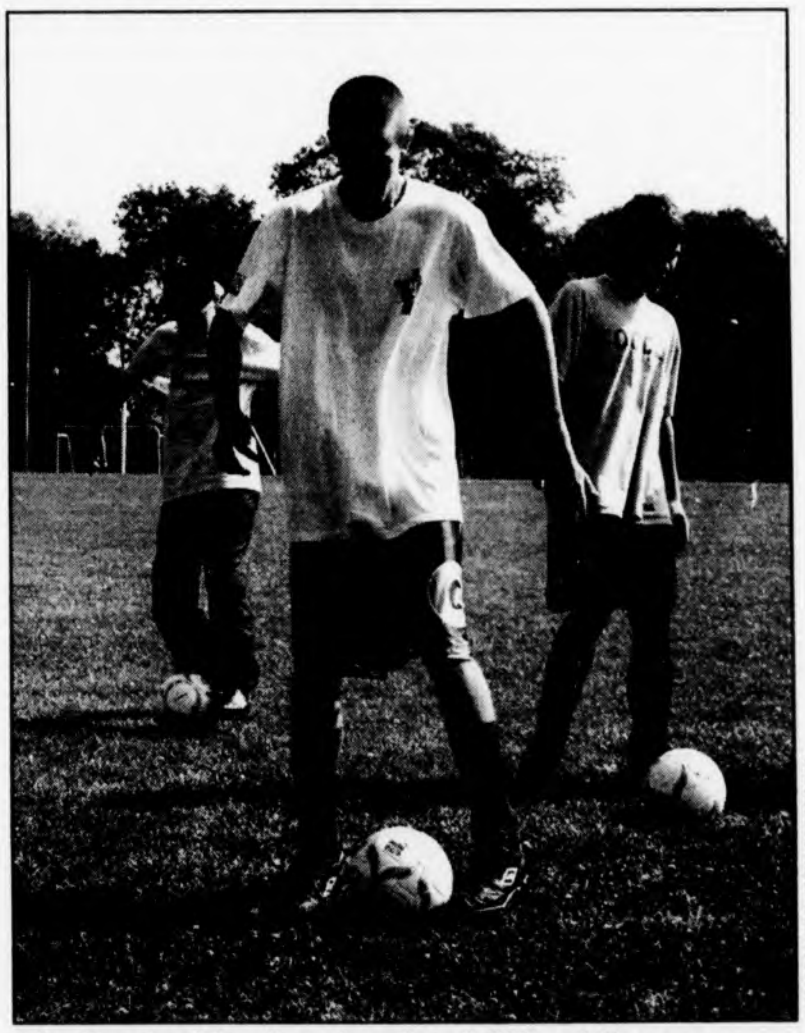
From the Tumble Bugs infant program to varying levels of competitive gymnastics, young tumblers of all shapes and sizes will be flying about the Center this week with the start of the new fall program.

"Registration has been great so far, especially in some of the younger levels. We've got just a ton of pre-school kids signed up this year," said Gymnast in Motion program director Ruthann Ardizzoni. "It's a great sign of things to come for the program at the high school if these kids start at such a young age and decide to stick with the sport."

Of course. Ardizzoni has a vested interest her students growing into the sport. A former four-year captain of the gymnastic team at Cohasset High, she's been the head coach there for 13 years.

"Things have changed a great deal over the years around this sport" as well as at the center, said Ardizzoni, who is starting her 21st year with the SSCC. "There is so much more available now here at the community center than when I was growing up. I can remember when you could only use piano music to go along with your floor routine."

After training with Olympic gymnast Kathy Corrigan at her Rockland studio when the sport was really hooking on with young girls in the early-70s, Ardizzoni competed in AAU events and was a member of the first ever gymnastics team at CHS in 1976.



The squad didn't win a single match that year, but bounced back to win the league title her next year. The program is still strong today, having taken home at least a piece of the Pilgrim League title in four of the last five years.

You'll still see many of people from those teams still around the gym working with the younger kids or on their own routines.

"I'm really lucky in that I've got a special relationship with the kids who've gone through the high school team," said Ardizzoni. "During school breaks a bunch of them will call me to help out with classes or stop by just to say hello.

"It's great for the younger kids to see the older girls helping out. They really look up to the older kids and see them as something that they can be someday if they keep working at it."

Taking part in gymnastic classes can be a great help in the development of a young child, both on a physical and emotional level while also creating discipline and structure to their life and developing both self-confidence and social skills.

"Most parents get their kids involved in gymnastic programs for the social development part of it, but the development of motor skills is also a tremendous benefit," Ardizzoni, who enrolled her own child in a program at the center at eight-months-old and saw her walking a month later.

"I'd say that the biggest reason that parents enroll their children in gymnastics class is that their fun for kids," she added. "There's some diversity to it as well for the kids. If you don't like the vault, maybe the beam is their thing. Or maybe it's the floor exercise. There are things for kids to choose from."

When it comes to getting a child into a gymnastics group, the younger the better she added.

"If you get a three- or four-year-old kids in a group with his peers, it a strong way to see if a child may be falling to the back of the pack when it comes to something like developing motor skills and hand-eye coordination," she added. "The sooner you come across something that could be a problem, the sooner you can do something about it."

New season brings new hope to CHS football

By Jim O'Sullivan
CORRESPONDENT

For nearly six years now, Cohasset's Class of 1999 has been pointed to as a class with a deep well of natural talent, desire and football ability. This class has finally reached its senior year, stepped into a leadership role, and is headed into its final season as high school football players.

Despite losing five seniors who contributed greatly over the past few years, the Skippers are now starting players who have seen varsity action since the eighth grade. Under the guidance of new head coach Tony Rolfe and with 10 starting seniors and a complementing group of speedy, skilled underclassmen, the boys in blue appear poised to make their big run.

Nearly the entire Skipper offense has been rehauled under the watchful eyes of Rolfe. With the departure of three-year starting quarterback Pat Hurley to Boston College, senior Jamie DeMichele has stepped into the role of signal caller. Behind him at fullback is senior captain Justin "Juggernaut" Golden, while sophomore Daniel Trowers fills the tailback spot and senior Ben Roine becomes the "Z"-back.

Steeped in experience and strength, the front line is unquestionably the Skippers' best in years. Sophomore Craig Davis and senior Jon Considine are the bookends at the left and right tackles, with senior veterans Luke Caldwell and Adam Sasso at the guards. Senior captain John-Paul Laugelle will man the point as the center. Freshman Nick Bolster will share time with Brian Krupczak at split end, while Ronan Buick fills his brother Jamie's shoes at tight end.

Running a 5-3, with five down linemen and three linebackers, the Skipper defense will be coached by Bob Silvia and Tom Hughes. Anchored by senior Alex Russell at nosetackle with Craig Parker and John Considine at the tackles, Sean Parkinson and Caldwell will provide outside pressure as defensive ends.

The linebacking corps is Joe Carbone, Greg Parkinson and Sasso, all veteran linebackers with plenty of experience and a shared dislike for running backs. Greg Taylor and Kevin Andrews will play the two corners and are expected to play important roles in stopping rushes to the outside. Krupczak and Roine will provide insurance at the safeties.

Captains Laugelle and Golden both expressed their belief that the team has improved and that winning would require only a transfer of that improvement from the practice field into a game situation.

"I think we're a lot better than last year; we've been getting a lot done in practice," Laugelle said. "People are starting to step it up."

Golden emphasized the team's work ethic.

"Everybody contributed and worked hard in the pre-season. The work has been put in and now we need to convert that hard work and intensity into success on the football field."

When asked about his new squad, Rolfe was optimistic without sounding overconfident.

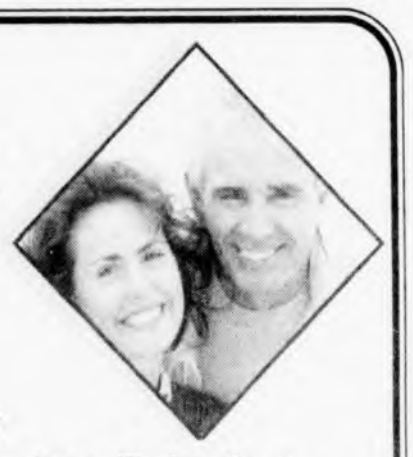
"I expect us to be competitive in every game we play; that we'll go into every game with a chance to win.

"I inherited an outstanding senior class and every senior is an integral part of the road to success. I just can't say enough about the senior class this year."

After two seasons at 1-9, the Skippers are looking forward to a much more successful year in the win column. With Rockland and East Bridgewater no longer on the Cohasset schedule, the team was able to schedule weaker opponents, such as Mashpee, whom CHS will play Friday night.

And it is important to remember that if Cohasset achieves as those connected with the team believe it will, the success will be the result of years of hard work on the part of the players and coaches.

With their opener tomorrow night in Mashpee, the Skippers will be fully prepared after a long and intense pre-season, which has hopefully left them ready for a successful season.



The game- Cohasset (0-0) at Mashpee (0-0), 7 p.m. Friday night

The skinny- After going up against teams with much larger enrollments in the South Shore League such as Rockland and East Bridgewater for years, Cohasset (1-9 last season) finally gets to pick on someone about their own size. Mashpee, a charter member of the Patriot League along with Rockland and E.B, will now have to deal with those football powers in their initial season.

The people to watch- Everything is new at Cohasset. Alumni Field is only a year old, head coach Tony Rolph has taken over for Bob Knurek and a whole new group of seniors has stepped forward for this year. With the advent of the Patriot League taking some of the larger schools off their schedule, CHS should be able to improve on their 1-9 record against teams their own size like Mashpee, Nauset and Charlestown.

WATD's football season kicks off Friday

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

A late season tilt between 1997 Super Bowl participants Norwell High and Duxbury High is the marquee match-up this season on an impressive line-up that WATD-FM 95.9 has put together for their broadcast schedule.

The season begins on tomorrow (Friday) with what could be another great encounter when two teams who almost made the Super Bowl last year go head-to-head as Silver Lake travels to Marshfield.

"It's a very strong schedule this season," said Bill Wilhelm, the sports director at WATD who is starting his 21st season behind the microphone for these high school football games. "You couldn't ask for anything better than a game like Norwell and Duxbury. Overall there looks to be a lot of interesting teams this year we're going to need to keep an eye on.

"You can't beat high school sports for a fun night out," he added. "It's the best game in town. We enjoy doing the games and I think the kids enjoy the attention."

After going through a dry spell in the early 90s where they couldn't get a win things have really turned around at Silver Lake for head coach Jeff Knight and his gridiron warriors. After opening the season against the Rams they stay on the road for another killer contest against Duxbury.

Nothing like starting the year with a bang, huh? Silver Lake will also have to go on without two of their offensive stars from last season- QB Jon Bond (graduated) and Marquisse Silva, who moved out of the school district.

Silver Lake's loss is Marshfield gain as Silva is now a member of the Rams.

"Marquisse is going to be one of the players to watch this year," said Wilhelm about what could be the year of the running back. "Duxbury's David Seger also looks to be the real deal and you can't forget about Norwell's Brian Fabrizio when talking about some of the best players on the South Shore."

Week three brings in some new blood as Rockland travels to take on the Scituate Sailors on Friday, Oct. 2.

Scituate battled hard to a 5-6 record last year that included a big Thanksgiving Day win over rival Hingham but it was Rockland last year who held the crown of best team around that didn't get to go to a Super Bowl game.

The Bulldogs, who along with Scituate move to the Patriot League this year, finished last season at 10-1, the "1" being a last second loss to Norwell that knocked them out of Super Bowl contention. Although the numbers will be there for Rockland to have another strong year, last year's senior crew that included three-sport star Bobby Flynn, Josh Davidson and Brad Begley will be tough to replace.

Friday. Oct. 9 will see Duxbury on the road again against Bob Bancroft and the always tough Whitman-Hanson Panthers who will be out for blood in trying to avenge last year's loss to the Dragons.

One of the special Saturday matinees follows on Saturday, Oct. 10 East Bridgewater travels to Hingham to take on the rebuilding Harbormen.

The Green Wave of Abington make their only scheduled appearance of the year on Friday, Oct. 16 when they brave the winds off the Atlantic Ocean traveling to Hull to take on the always tough Pirates.

Hingham makes it two Saturday's in a row the next day when they host the Randolph Blue Devils.

Duxbury continues their road show on Friday, Oct 23 when they pack their bags and head south to take on Plymouth North. The next day Silver Lake hosts a rare Saturday afternoon contest when Old Colony League rival Falmouth stops by for a visit.

Marshfield will be looking for a treat rather than a trick when the host Plymouth North in a Halloween Eve contest.

Plymouth North makes their third appearance in four weeks on Friday, Nov. 7 when they host Whitman-Hanson. The Sautrday game for that will see Hingham taking on Middleboro.

The weekend of Nov. 13 will no doubt be a delight for all high school football fans as Duxbury travels to Norwell on Friday night and then Rockland loads up the bus and chugs down Route 3 to take on Silver Lake Saturday afternoon in what should turn out to be another tremendous contest.

This leads us to the biggest day on the high school football calendar- Thanksgiving. Duxbury at Marshfield will be aired live at 10 a.m. followed by the civil war that is Plymouth North against Plymouth South on tape at 12:30 p.m. The day will end with the taped Hanover at Norwell at 3 p.m.

The Friday games will be broadcast at 7 p.m. Saturday's games are scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

Schedule is subject to change.

weekly newspapers are about.

Here you read about the accomplishments of your neighbors on the athletic fields.

Here you find out about how your town teams are doing.

Town sports is one of the ways a community comes together. We like to say our town is the Super Bowl champion or we have the best basketball team in the state or our Little League team has a future major leaguer on its roster.

That's one of the roles this newspapers plays.

We are also to here to inform and educate. If you need to know when the youth soccer registrations are, you should be able to look here to find it.

It should be that simple.

But, of course, I'm asking you for your help. Whether it is telling us about someone or some team that you think would be a good feature or sending us your Pop Warner or youth soccer news, you are very much welcomed, We want to hear from you and you can call me at 781-837-4571 or sports editor David Wolcott at 781-837-4577 or FAX information to 1-781-837-4540 or e-mail to mariner.sports@cnc.com or just grab me at a game.

We look forward to hearing from

Fall soccer kicks off Saturday

Fall soccer for boys and girls, grades K through 6, begins Saturday, Sept. 19.

Junior lacrosse program wishes for old equipment

The Cohasset Junior Lacrosse program is accepting donations of old sticks, gloves, helmets, arm pads and goaltending equipment, hoping to make life a bit easier for players and parents.

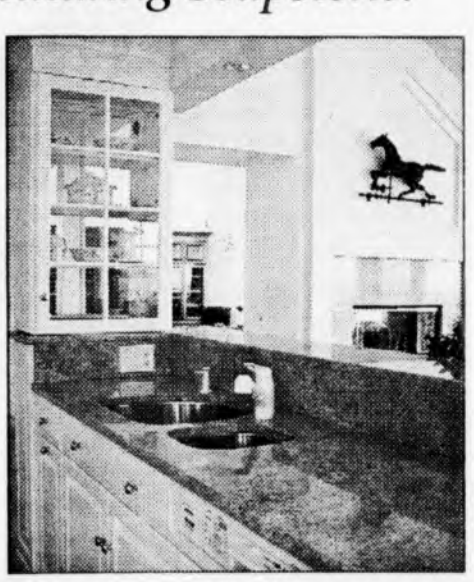
Currently, the team has no extra equipment to carry to games or lend to players. That has, in the past, meant that players who have forgotten some or all of their gear have wound up driving home — often from several towns away — or have been forced to sit out.

"We can't let a player on the field without proper equipment," says junior team coach Chuck Jaffe. "The best we can hope for is to share, which is tricky given how often kids come on and off the field."

The club is particularly interested in helmets, gloves, armpads and goaltending equipment. Jaffe noted that sticks are the one thing most players have when they start out in the game, "although we would accept stick donations too."

The youth program is hoping to secure enough equipment to help out players in its summer camp, so that children who are just testing out the sport won't go whole hog on gear, only to find out they would rather play something else.

"Lacrosse equipment isn't cheap," Jaffe says. "We're just hoping that people who have some of it lying around in their basement, or whose children have outgrown youth equipment, can help us move the game along and support the junior club and lacrosse booster program in the process."



To donate lacrosse equipment to the Cohasset Junior program, call Jaffe at 383-9858.

Souvenir cassette to spread holiday cheer

Proceeds to benefit bell tower fund

is such a festive one, he said.

Apart from work performed on the bottom 10 feet of the tower a number of years ago, no other work of major consequence has been done on the building since it was erected.

Water is coming through the bricks, and dust from them has settled into the carpet of the tower's second floor area, where each Tuesday night from 7-8:30 p.m. the bells are traditionally rung. Bell ringers also "perform" in honor of funerals, weddings and other occasions, including during the annual Christmas in the Square celebration.

The six-story tower was designed by William Rodger Greeley in the style of a European Campanile (a self-standing construction near a church which houses bells). The bell ringers' room is dedicated to Hingham's founder, the Rev. Peter Hobart, who was Old Ship Church's first minister.

It is hoped that with the help of a grant and fund raising, repairs will begin by the end of the year.

The 34-minute cassette , which includes 23 Christmas tunes played by Shaw, contains:

¥"grand sounds of huge swinging bells" with change-ringing (peals) by a group of 10 bell ringers;

¥brief history of the Bell Tower; narrated by Hingham resident Robert Cusack; and ¥holiday tunes performed on the carillon, including selected a cappella tenor solos by Mark Blanchard.

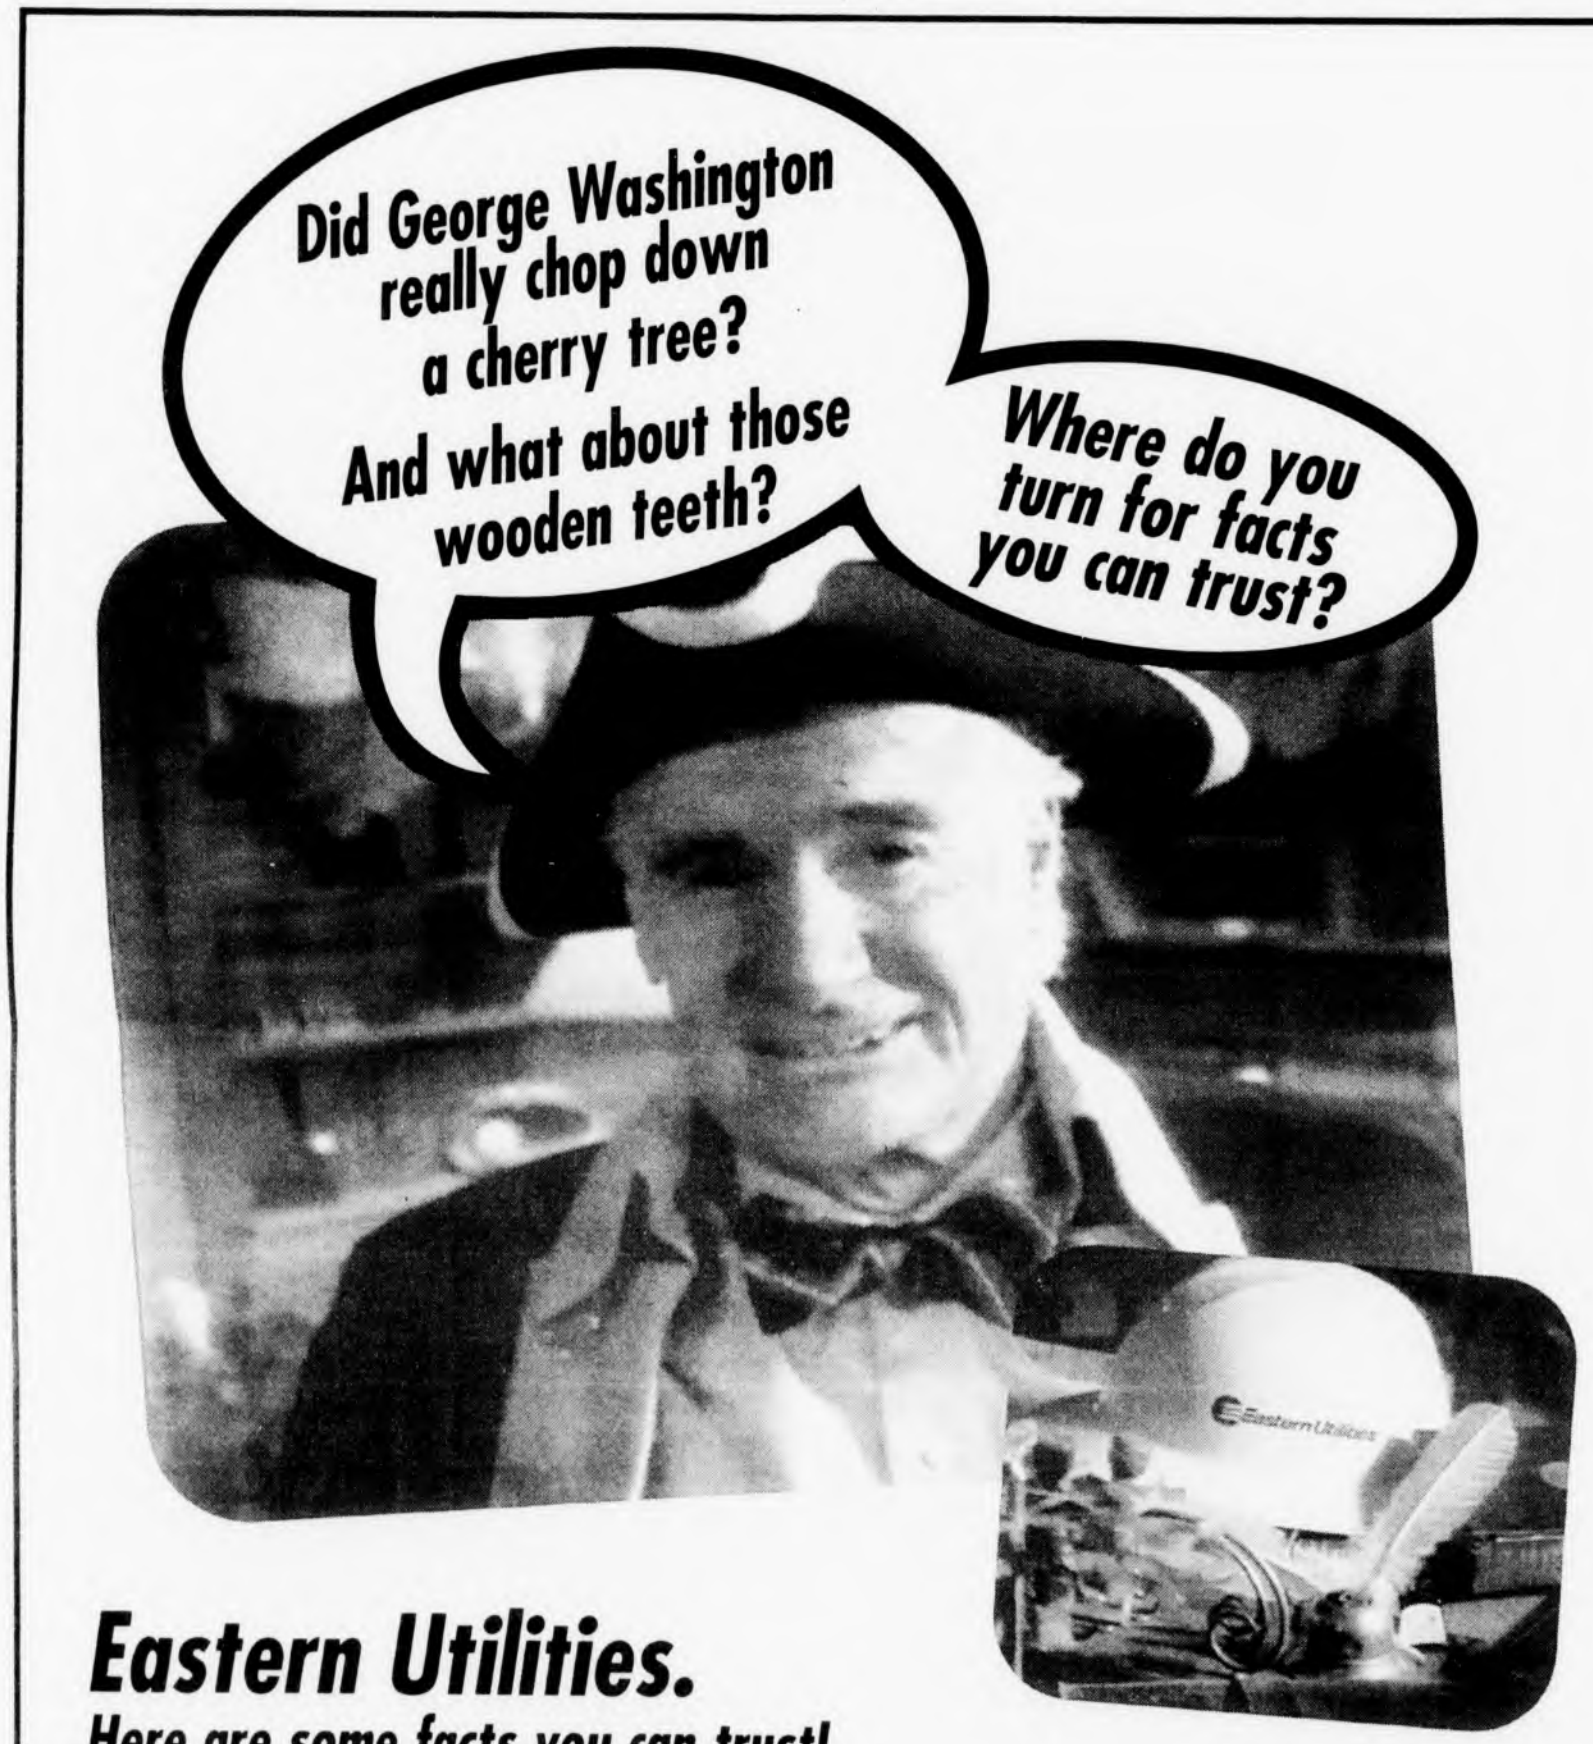
The cassette was created by members of the bell tower committee and V.F.W. Post #6053. Barbara Menzies donated a sketch of the bell tower to adorn the audio cassette label.



The 10 bells on the top level of the bell tower are one of only a few sets of 10 change ringing bells in North America. They range in size from 550- to 2,262 pounds and are copies of originals from Hingham, England.

"It's the first time we've recorded a tape like this," Shaw said, "and we think it sounds great! The tapes will make good souvenirs as well as stocking stuffers."

Cassettes may be purchased for a $15 donation by cash or check payable to: Hingham VFW #6053 (a non-profit, tax-exempt organization) plus $3.95 for shipping and handling. The mailing address for requests is: P.O. Box 402, Hingham, MA 02043.

The tapes, now in production, are expected to be completed by the end of September. Orders are welcome at any time, according to Shaw. Tapes may also be available from some local merchants once they're off the production line, and a sample will be available at a later date. The audio cassette was recorded by Rik Tinory Productions in Cohasset.

For further information, call Eugene Shaw at 749-2491.

Eastern Utilities.

Here are some facts you can trust!

- With deregulation, you will be able to buy electricity from a competitive supplier.
- But Eastern Utilities will still be your distribution or "wires" company.
- We'll still maintain power lines and provide safe reliable service.
- We'll still get you back in power after any storm or other emergency.
- We'll still manage billing and provide customer service.
- We'll still be in our communities — offering safety-education programs to children & adults.
- We'll still offer conservation programs to help you save energy and money.

By the way... Sorry to disappoint – but all evidence points to the fact that the Reverend Mason Locke Weems invented the story of six-year-old George and the cherry tree in his Life of Washington, published in 1880. The hatchet story was added in the fifth edition, published in 1806. Newcomers at Corn Festival

The "Freewheelers" group of the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club sponsors field trips and family social activities. The first event of the 98/99 season is on Saturday, Sept. 19. It is a trip to the Corn Festival at the South Shore Science Center on Rte 123 in Norwell. Newcomers planning to attend will meet at 10 a.m. in the parking lot and enjoy cider and donut holes before proceeding to the festival as a group. Look for a "Newcomer's Club" sign on one of the cars.

Admission to the festival is $3 for adults and $2 for children age 2 and over. There is a maximum fee of $10 per family. Although the Corn Festival runs from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m., Newcomer group attendance is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. Activities available at the Corn festival include nature walks, face painting, traditional and colonial crafts, craft activities, hay rides, animal demonstrations, a scarecrow contest and roving minstrels. Food with a corn theme will be available at Kernel's Kitchen. The event is open to all Newcomers. For more information call 383-6343.

Writing workshop to be held

Boston area author Marcia Yudkin will present a writing workshop for adults and sign copies of her new book, "Writing Articles About the World Around You," Wednesday, Sept. 23, from 7 to 9 p.m. at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset. Interested writers will also explore the possibility of establishing a Buttonwood-sponsored writing group.

Those who dream of putting their perspectives in print, will recognize great story ideas within their everyday lives and learn to think like article writers. Yudkin will share her own freelance experiences, and guide audience members through the article writing process. Yudkin has published hundreds of magazine articles in a variety of periodicals, including Ladies Home Journal and the New York Times Magazine. She has also written eight other books on writing and marketing and is a regular speaker at writing conferences, workshops and seminars.

Yudkin will speak from 7:15 to 8:30 p.m., and sign until 9 p.m. Although this service as well as addressing issues such as education and public safety. I want to bring a productive approach to issues."

He thanked all his supporters, including his wife, Heather, and opponents Walter Murray and Josh Cutler for a good campaign.

Cutler stopped by Stars to ask Bradley for one of his bumper stickers.

"Josh gave every indication he's willing to support me," said Bradley.

Bradley, a longtime Hingham resident, places public safety at the top of his priority list, including dealing with domestic violence issues. He said he would file legislation requiring a cooling off period for those arrested for domestic violence. The law would prohibit suspects who are bailed from returning to their primary residence for 24 hours.

Bradley also supports phasing in rolling back the 5.95 percent state income tax to 4 percent over several years while linking the rollback to a healthy economy. He also favors giving $750 million of the state's $1.2 billion surplus back to cities and towns in the form of block grants to help offset such expenses as water rates and school overrides.

Education was considered of primary importance by all three Democrats.

Bradley, who was graduated from Boston College High School, Boston College and BC Law School, is taking an anti-Greenbush stance because of safety and cost concerns.

Mary Jeanette Murray is looking forward to her run against Bradley. "I'll campaign as I always have and have a lot of fun with it. I enjoy campaigning and love getting out to meet all the people. I imagine Garret and I will be meeting along the way. I think the three candidates ran a clean campaign and that's what we need."

Lamberts Lane solution raises safety questions expressed in the past and continues to be expressed about possible precedence," said DeGiacomo. "My understanding is that there are at least half a dozen other spots where the buses turn around now anyway, so there's really no precedent—it's already happening. But I'm trying to get that information back to the committee for the next meeting to advise them how many and where buses currently turn around and back up. I don't believe that there is a guide to assist the driver in the back, but I need to get that confirmed."

"The residents of Lamberts Lane have been on this subject for quite a while and I understand why," said McElroy. "I continue to be proactively concerned about the street, but Mark shares my concern about the safety issue raised by the proposed solution there. We're working cooperatively on this, trying to come up with a solution that doesn't create more problems than it solves."

New program aims to address drug, alcohol problems

ed-topics in the booklet are easily recognized as a handy reference tool for parents concerned about their teens and substance abuse. "We got positive feedback on this from parents who received the booklet in New Jersey. It may have gone into a drawer, but not into the garbage," she said.

Still, Matos was concerned about the amount of money needed for the item and pointed out that "the funds raised from the car show might not happen again."

The PSO and other local companies will receive calls from Martin sometime soon to help with fundraising or printing and graphics services.

Also filling the void of the now-defunct Safe Homes program will be an information and referral hotline manned by committee treasurer Robert Harold from 6 to 10 p.m. Tuesday in one of the church rooms at St. Stephen's.

The calls will be strictly confidential but will not include counseling. Harold will, however, check the hotline's voice mail in case an emergency call is recorded. Those in need of counseling or treatment will be referred to an appropriate agency.

Harold has five years' experience as a drug and alcohol counselor at Faxon House Recovery Detox in Quincy. He was graduated from UMass/Boston's alcohol-drug certification program shortly before taking the job at Faxon. "I just wanted to help people," explained Harold, as to why he chose to go back to school for the counseling program.

"We want this to be anonymous," he said. "Sometimes it's not the kids who have the problem but a family member. This is a small town. You'd never know it, but there are kids walking around shouldering a family member's drinking or drug problem. That kid needs to be able to talk to someone and know that it's strictly confidential. He needs to feel free to call and find out where to go for help without worrying that he's betraying a friend or family member."

Even though Harold serves as the committee's treasurer, the operating costs for new projects are not up to him but are drawn from a town account for the Drug and Alcohol Committee.

"We'll start as soon as we gain town approval to use the funds for the hotline," said Harold.

Volunteers honored at brunch

Social Services Leagues that services towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Cohasset will honor volunteers at a brunch at Kimball's by the Sea on Tuesday, Sept. 22 at 11 a.m.

Manager of the Cohasset Consignment Shop, Andy Merrill, noted that the shop established in 1953, is a non-profit organization, staffed by volunteers, with all proceeds going to the myriad of projects sponsored by the Social Services Leagues of the South Shore. The shop is located at Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset and consignments are accepted 10-11 a.m. Monday through Friday and is open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. and Sunday noon - 4 p.m.

Items currently at the shop not to miss are men and women's blouses and sweaters from Talbot's, Evans Picone, Brooks Brothers as well as English Meakin China (1890-1910), hand painted Chinese prints with bamboo frames, glass beads, fall wreathes, and great selections of suits and after five dresses.

Newly elected president Motoko Deane of 672 Jerusalem Road urges all to volunteer by calling 383-0687 ception will be held Saturday, Sept. 26, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The showing will run from Sept. 26 to Oct. 17. "Oil Painters of America" is a non-profit organization dedicated to keeping traditional oil painting and fine representational art thriving in American culture.

Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Collectors, students and browsers are always welcome.

For more information, call (800) 383-1801.

Back to school for canines

Reduced cost dog training will be offered to residents of Cohasset and surrounding communities at the South Shore Community Center on 3 N. Main St. Thursday evenings, September through April.

Classes being offered include "Good Manners for Beginners," a level two class called "Obedience with Distractions" and an advanced class, "The Happy-Dog Challenge," which is a series of interactive activities involving obedience and agility, and socializing with other dogs and people will also be taught.

The classes are being taught by "Happy-Dog Training" of Boston in association with the New England Humane Association. Classes use a non-force positive training method and provide free problem solving advice and literature for all enrolled clients.

The next set of evening classes begin Sept. 24. To register or for more information, call (617) 789-3647.

A night for political parties

been a relatively close one. "I think the train might have been a factor," he said, discussing his Hingham loss.

"I'll be going over to Bradley's party to show support later tonight," he said (which he did to so his support for his Democratic opponent). "I think he ran a great campaign."

His future plans are very open just now. "I see this as a beginning rather than an ending for me with new options open," he said. "I'll certainly be back soon"

Earlier in the evening, Cutler had forecasted that he'd "need a miracle in Hull" in order to beat Bradley. That miracle was not forthcoming, though he did win handily there with a 665 vote lead over Bradley. The 24 percent turnout in Hull exactly doubled the usual 12 percent voter turnout town clerk Janet Bennett is used to seeing there.

"Our primaries are always much smaller than this," said Bennett. "I think Cutler and Bradley really got out there and worked hard. Walter Murray wasn't around much — the other two, wherever you went, there they were."

Indeed, the several blocks up Nantasket Avenue to Walter Murray's much smaller gathering at Schooner's had several large billboard advertisements endorsing the smiling images of Cutler and Bradley.

The money needed to fund such displays upset Murray's chances, he believes. "It was a big blow-out for me," he said late Tuesday night. "I'm pro-life, have a Christian Coalition background and a lack of resources. I was disappointed in Hull, which is where I live and did most of my campaigning. You think the races are about the issues, but it's about money, organization and knocking on doors. He with the most money wins."

Free time was also a factor. Murray, who is an evening student at New England School of Law, also works as a litigation paralegal at Bingham Dana, which he names as the fourth largest law firm in Boston.

"Cutler said that getting campaign funds shows you have support," said Murray. "But I wouldn't raise more money than I thought necessary. $60,000 is ridiculous for a state senate race."

Murray plans to campaign differently next time around. For one thing, he plans to ask his supporters to back him financially.

Back in Hingham, Cutler and Bradley met up as planned a year ago. "We said then that we would go to the party of whoever won to show support," said Cutler.

"Josh and I met a year ago," said Bradley, standing amid his celebrating constituents. "Josh is a man of his word. We said we'd do this and he did stop by—he asked for a bumper sticker. We're going to need that support to win — nd I think we will."

Celebrants at Stars were still enjoying their boisterous win for some time after Cutler came and went, and long after the Murray party at Schooners had gone home.

"The Murray group was here for about three hours," said waitress Andrea Tsoumas. "They were a small group, quiet—they sat around a table with a radio they brought with them and listened to it. Then they went home. They seemed nice. I don't know which one was Murray."

Cultural Council grant workshop

The Cohasset Local Cultural Council (LCC) will present a grant writing workshop from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 17, at the South Shore Art Center. Patricia Walker, representing the Mass. Cultural Council, will discuss writing geared to generate a successful LCC grant. The state awards money to each town for cultural enrichment, based on population; via grants written by citizens and approved first by the Local Cultural Council, then by the state level (MCC). Walker will provide grant forms, and answer any questions from the audience.

This workshop is free to the public, but reservations are required; a minimum of 16 participants is needed. To reserve a seat, call the South Shore Art Center at (781) 383-ARTS between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.; or for questions and reservations, call LCC chairperson Nancy Connolly at (781) 383-9883 from 6 to 8 p.m.

The South Shore Art Center is located at 119 Ripley Road.

Instruction in musical theater

The South Shore Community Center announces that Danielle Herget will be joining them for instruction in musical theater. Classes in "Peter Pan" will begin Sept. 24 for boys and girls ages 4 to 8. Classes on "Guys and Dolls" will be offered, beginning Sept. 24, for boys and girls, ages 9 to 15.

Classes run from 3:15 to 4:30 p.m. for "Peter Pan" and from 4:30 to 5:45 p.m. for "Guys and Dolls." These sessions will run for 10 weeks, with a small performance at the end for family and friends. Acting, singing and dancing will be the focus, using the music from the two shows as the format.

Herget has danced for almost 20 years, and has been a choreographer and president of the Colby Dancers, and a founder of the Colby Dancers traveling dance troupe. She is certified by the Dance Teachers Club of Boston, and has directed shows for children, working at Stonehill College's College Academy in the Actor's Workshop.

The cost is $90 for members, and $100 for non-members. Call the center to register at (781) 383-0088, or stop by at 3 North Main St. These classes are open to all residents of the area.

Selectmen split on 'anti-train' letter

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Hingham and Scituate got half a loaf from Cohasset this week.

The boards of selectmen to Cohasset's north and south, signed a letter to the state secretary of environmental affairs which includes language that opposes the train, according to Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris.

"Our concerns about impacts of restoration on our citizens motivated us to join with the other communities. It was not Cohasset's position to oppose the whole project."
— Selectman Ronnie McMorris

The letter says the MBTA's analysis on restoration of the Greenbush Line is inadequate and asks state Secretary Trudy Coxe to require the MBTA prepare a revised environmental feasibility study on the project.

McMorris and her fellow selectman Diane Sullivan refused to sign the letter which contained references to the number of grade crossings and mentioned that other transportation options may now be feasible and should be looked at.

"I don't feel it's a letter I can

Best school reuse a matter of opinion

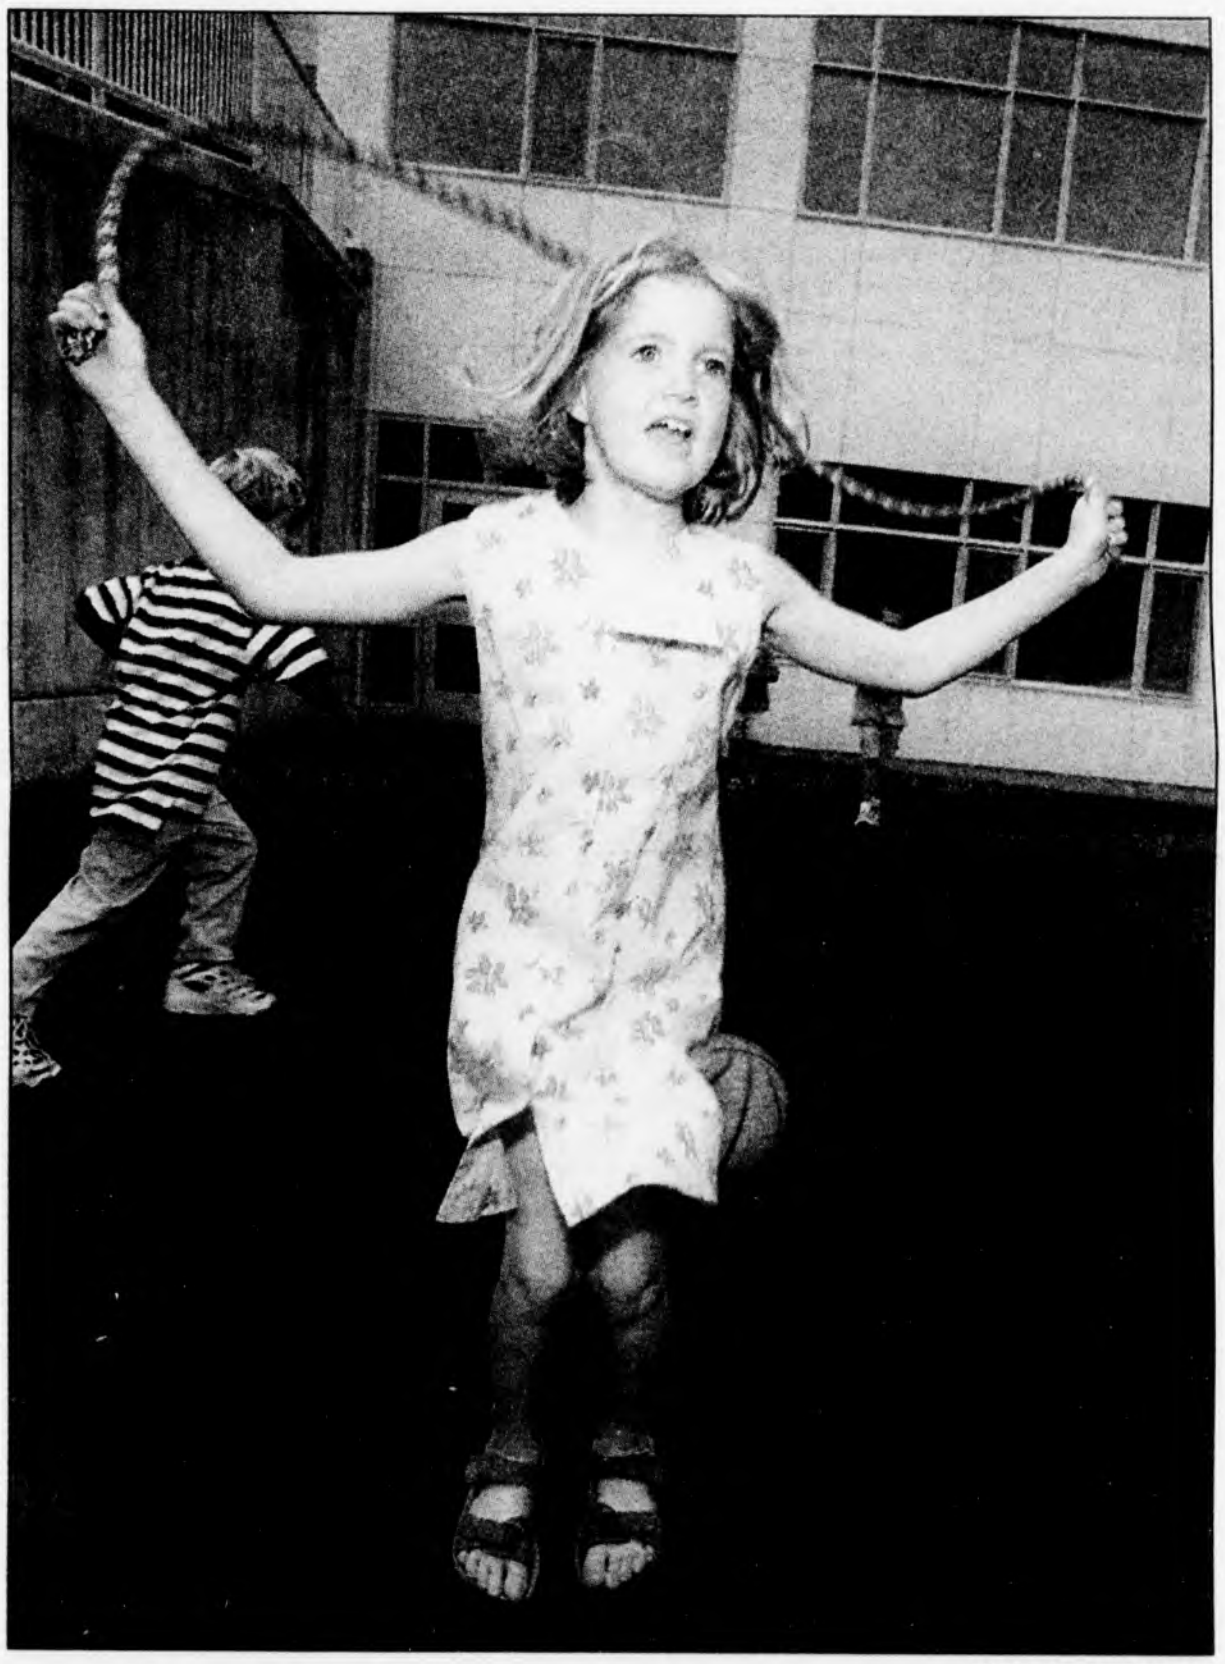
By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

There are no shortage of opinions on what should be done with the old Osgood School.

The Osgood Reuse Committee — appointed to come up with a recommendation to return the building to the tax rolls — favors selling the school to a for-profit company which will build 29 condos for senior citizens at the site.

The library trustees see the chance to turn the venerable old building into a new, expanded town library and to that end, are seeking money to enter into the design phase of their plan.

So while those two proposals will be before October's special town meeting as warrant articles (see related story) — there's bound to be considerable debate on town meeting floor if Tuesday was any indication.



The only agreement in selectmen's chambers Tuesday night was that there is little agreement about what the future should hold for both Osgood and the existing 8,000 square foot Paul Pratt Library.

Pointing to a color photo of the Paul Pratt Library on the selectmen's office wall, Neil Glick, 7 Spring St., spoke passionately about keeping the library right where it is.

"It's a gem," he said about the 100-year-old building. "It is such a landmark both inside and outside."

Cable contract options aired

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

A representative from cable provider MediaOne met with town selectmen and Robert Hillman of the law firm Deutsch Williams which serves as town counsel, to assess the town's future needs for renewal of their 15-year cable license with that company.

Ten senior citizens of the town's elderly housing complex, Harborview, were on hand, as was school committee member Joseph McElroy, to discuss what services they would like to see MediaOne provide in their future contract with the town.

Cohasset signed a 15-year contract with American Cablevision which will come to an end some time next year. (MediaOne bought Continental Cablevision which bought American Cablevision, the original contract holder.)

Hillman explained to the dozen people in the audience that the federal government expects that towns will renew with the cable companies they've already signed on with although, he pointed out, other towns have engaged in some good-faith negotiation.

MediaOne manager of government affairs Lou Russo listened to McElroy's request for free Internet access, a modem, as well as a wide-area network to connect the schools to the town hall and library so that information could be shared more efficiently and with less cost for software.

Russo explained that putting in the fiber-optic wide-area network could be done but that its expense would have to be carried by the town.

Town manager Mark Haddad said that the board of selectmen would also like to have Internet access at town hall, as well as another camera in their room that could pan to audience members addressing board

Homes publication debuts

Tips on the latest properties for sale, a comprehensive guide to open houses on the South Shore and a look at the latest trends in the real estate market are now within reach with the premier of South Shore Homes.

The publication, which debuts on Friday and will be available every Friday, is the latest project by Community Newspaper Company/South. It has been months in the planning stages and will be a comprehensive open house guide as well as the source for what's happening in the real estate market on the South Shore.

In the premier issue, South Shore Homes features a comprehensive story on the hot real estate market, with inventory up and mortgage prices down. Realtors and experts say there's no time like the present to be looking for a home and with South Shore Homes, you'll find properties to suit all interests.

Each week the publication will showcase hot properties on the market, new home construction projects, as well as complete real estate transactions from the South Shore.

"More than any other real estate publication, South Shore Homes should define and organize and report this growing market south of Boston," said Peter Vandevanter, vice president of Niche Publication for CNC. "It's in Town meeting warrant

The warrant for the Oct. 26 special town meeting closed Sept. 22. Town Manager Mark Haddad informed all department heads that to submit their articles by the deadline. At the Sept. 14 selectmen's meeting, Haddad said that no citizen's articles had been submitted for the warrant, although selectmen have reserved a space for the group A Safer King Street (ASK). The group may submit an article asking residents to close part of King St. to public use except for emergency vehicles.

Dramatic club auditorium conflicts

The board of selectmen addressed a potential conflict over the use of the town hall auditorium by the Cohasset Drama Club at their Sept. 14 meeting. Town Manager Mark Haddad met with Recreation Commissioner John Worley and Jean Lagrotteria, who is the new youth program coordinator, to discuss the drama club's extensive use of the auditorium and conflicts that use has been creating with recreation programs. Selectmen Merle Brown pointed out that the drama club has used the auditorium for 90 years, although the members know that municipal uses take precedence over their practice sessions. Haddad pointed out that once the drama club announces a show, they cannot change the dates and must be allowed to use the auditorium on the scheduled dates. The selectmen finally suggested that Lagrotteria seek out other facilities, such as the community center and the Deer Hill gym, and that she plan recreation activities for the auditorium as early as possible to avoid conflicts.

James Lane litigation is in limbo

Town Manager Mark Haddad has said that he town cannot carry out the town meeting approved action on James Lane because of a lack of action by the court considering litigation to block the town's plans. Haddad said it is particularly frustrating because the court has refused to act or even schedule a hearing.

Move those floats

The selectmen are planning to tell the sailing club to permanently move its floats off the grass in front of the club by next spring. Peter Laugelle of 17 King St. complained that the sailing club has been improperly storing its floating docks on the grass for a decade. Selectmen Merle Brown said the club had promised to move the floats last year, but failed to do so because of a lack of money.

Training for liquor license holders

The selectmen are defying a ruling by the state ABCC that the town cannot force merchants to attend mandatory liquor license training. Town officials pointed out that other towns such as Brockton and Salem have mandatory training programs in place. The selectmen voted to implement the policy and see if the state challenges their decision.

Town counsel salary woes

Town counsel's request for a raise is a bit steep. That was the consensus of the selectmen at their Sept. 14 meeting when they discussed Town Counsel Paul DeRensis' request for a pay increase from $120 per hour to $140 per hour, and an annual budget of $140,000. Selectman Tom Callahan didn't like DeRensis' justification for the pay hike, which is that he received a pay raise in another town he covers, Nantucket. Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris wanted better information about what actions are covered by his contract, and which actions require a more expensive special counsel. Board members pointed out a recent conflict over how town counsel plans to staff the site assignment hearings for CHL and potential problems with his plan. The selectmen agreed to meet with DeRensis before the special town meeting to discuss the pay increase.

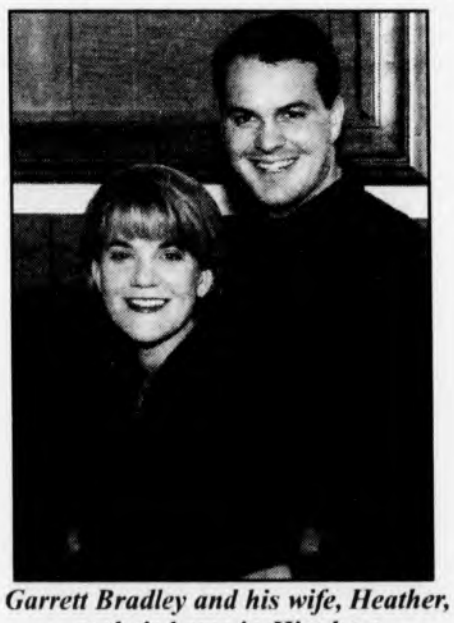
Thank You!



I want to take this opportunity to thank everyone who participated in the Primary Election on Tuesday, September 15th. Everyone involved in the political process, from the voters to the volunteers and the candidates, made a positive contribution to our communities.

As we turn our attention to the General Election, I want voters to know that I believe my opponent, Mary Jeannette Murray, has served our district well. Her focus on constituent services is something I pledge to continue if elected as your State Representative. I promise to be a full-time Representative, and my first priority will be to help the residents of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

Unlike my opponent, however, I believe that a Representative can deliver excellent constituent services and at the same time be a strong advocate for our district on important issues like the education of our children, reducing the burden of taxes and water rates, and making our neighborhoods safer. A strong Representative can fight for our district at the State House on issues which impact all of us on a daily basis During the next six weeks, I hope to talk with you directly about these issues, and earn your vote on November 3rd.

If you have any questions, please feel free to call me at 741-9998. Thank you.

A pleasing landscape is visited in "South Orleans" by Ethel Baker Mayo

An astonishing array of artwork normally enjoyed in private homes will be on loan to the South Shore Art Center for its Sept. 25-27 Collectors' Choice: A Celebration of Hidden Treasures event this weekend.

More than 60 works by historic and contemporary artists such as Rembrandt, Chagall, Motherwell and deCorbusier will be on display.

"It's a very eclectic show," said Bustin. "We have an original print from John James Audubon's 'Birds of North America', an etching by Rembrandt which is in beautiful condition, and a Boccaccino Madonna and Child from 16th century Italy. What this is is an opportunity for people to see in person art works that they would ordinarily see in art history books or major museums from behind a velvet rope."

Part of the reason for the local wealth in art work can be traced to the greater Boston area's early championing of American impressionism so that families today enjoy generations-old pieces. "There are families that have been handed down coastal scenes by Frank Benson or family portraits by John Singer Sargent," said Bustin.

This is the third such event the center has held since 1992. Proceeds from the event go to support the center. The Collector's Choice committee organized dozens of volunteers for the affair. "It's such a major undertaking," said Bustin. "I don't think it's humanly possible to do something like this every year."

Those attending the event's premiere Friday night will enjoy cocktails at the center before moving on to a roast loin of pork with apple-bourbon sauce dinner at Peter and Leah Taylor Roy's oceanside home, "The Oaks," set out by The Catered Affair.

Two tents have been set up to accommodate the overflow of people who purchased the $85 tickets to enjoy a meal on the Roys' terrace overlooking the harbor.

"We were oversold and have a few disappointed people, I'm afraid," said Collector's Choice committee co-chair Eleanor Bleakie, who shares that position with Leah Taylor Roy. "It's a very popular event. I think we had 234 people respond but we had mentally planned to limit it to 180 people. We've stretched it as far as we can."

The black-tie, sit down dinner will be accompanied by a silent auction that will continue throughout the weekend, ending Sunday at 4 p.m. "Some of the very special donations we've received include weekends at ski lodges and weekends in Boston as well as a golf lesson at the Cohasset Golf Club, four tickets to Bruins games, a water color portrait of your home by local artist JoAnne Chittick and a catered dinner by the Borrowed Butler," she said.

On Saturday, Sept. 26, the Art Center's exhibit from will continue 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Collector's Choice will close after brunch on Sunday with a noontime concert with the Boston Trio made up of Boston Symphony Orchestra members. Violinist Lucia Lin, cellist Andrew Pearce and pianist Heng-Jin Park Ellsworth will perform works by Ludwig van Beethoven, Maurice Ravel, Charles Ives and Paul Schoenfield.

"We're making money for the art center and it's so wonderful that the community has responded so well," said chairman of special events committee Patsy Rabstejnek. "The exhibit will be a wonderful opportunity for people to see the beautiful artwork that's privately owned on the South Shore. We will, of course, have heavy security present during this time."

"It's a privilege to be involved in this," said Bustin. "It's a very eclectic show. Visitors will be going to a small but comprehensive museum with exquisite taste. It's a celebration of the arts."

Schools pursue handicap access bus

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Superintendent Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey, who came on board this month, shared some information on the school bus handicap-access issue with school committee members for their consideration.

According to Malvey, a review of the proposed bus that would be converted for wheel-chair entry would require the removal of two rows of seats. "My only concern is the 'wiggle room' issue—How tight will the seating be?" he wondered.

The 70-plus seat bus being considered for handicap-access conversion is the fleet's largest bus and should therefore have extra room for student seating, explained school committee member Mark DeGiacomo.

One member of the audience at the school board meeting earlier this month asked about the possibility of leasing a handicap-access bus for the school system, rather than converting the school-owned 70-seater.

Though the idea seemed sensible to committee members, it was too late to put into motion since three buses have just been leased for the school's fleet which also includes school-owned buses.

"We've signed on the leased buses for this year," said DeGiacomo. "We may lease more next year, but that's not a done deal at this point."

Malvey told committee members that he would continue to research the subject and return to the committee with updated information on the issue for tonight's meeting.

Selectmen split on 'anti-train' letter

sign because it went into territory beyond what we agreed to," she said. "It asks the secretary (Coxe) to look at alternatives."

"What's wrong with that?" Selectman Merle Brown interjected.

"It's never been the position of the town to stop Greenbush and look at alternatives," McMorris said.

She was unable to persuade her board members to agree to send a separate letter with the "anti-train" language eliminated.

In July, selectmen agreed to work with Hingham and Scituate on issues that the three towns had in common regarding restoration of the Greenbush Line, the third leg of the Old Colony Railroad restoration project (the Middleboro and Plymouth lines are up and running). Those issues were noise, air pollution and vibration, selectmen said.

"Our concerns about impacts of restoration on our citizens motivated us to join with the other communities," McMorris said. "It was not the town of Cohasset's position at this point to oppose the whole project."

Concerned that Hingham and Scituate would not sign without the "anti-train" language, Selectman Nan Roth agreed the letter was beyond the scope but said she would sign it anyway to get all three towns on board with one letter.

"It will be more effective if three towns sign one letter, it will have more clout," she said.

Selectman Tom Callahan said the letter is not blatantly anti-train and didn't go far enough in his opinion.

Hingham's Greenbush coordinator Alexander Macmillan arrived later in the selectmen's meeting with the letter ready for Cohasset selectmen's signatures. Brown, Roth and Callahan signed but McMorris insisted that a notation be made that the board approved the letter in a 3-2 vote.

The notation prompted Macmillan to comment "that looks a little silly" and that it would have been better for Cohasset to send its own letter, he said.

Cohasset Mitigation Committee Chairman Tom Gruber pointed out that Coxe recently submitted her resignation and he is unsure what impact that will have on the environmental affairs office. Because the office is in limbo, it is unclear whether she will act on the letter, Gruber said.

Osgood committee endorses condo plan

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Town meeting voters will decide Oct. 26 if the old Joseph Osgood School will become a 29-condo home for the elderly, as recommended by the Osgood reuse committee, the town library's new domicile.

In a four-hour meeting Sept. 17, the Osgood reuse committee heard presentations from the library trustees, South Shore Housing Development Corp. of Kingston and Keen Development Corp. of Cambridge.

In a six-to-one vote, the committee decided to recommend Keen's proposal of 29 market rate condos. (South Shore Housing proffered 18 units with eight for affordable housing.)

"There has been a real ambivalence among committee members because we feel the library issue has to be addressed as well," said reuse committee chairman Chris Ford, who cast the dissenting vote. "I was more inclined to say, 'Let's put the library first and the housing second. We still are looking forward to the library coming forward to the town meeting and making their own proposal. A compromise could still be reached with new housing units and a library under one roof."

Keen's proposal won out over South Shore Housing's due to the prior company's experience with the conversion of classical old school buildings into condos.

According to town manager Mark Haddad, the town would receive a flat $800,000 from Keen, or $500,000 plus half the profits from the $195,000- to $265,000-range condos. That return could bring the town's earnings from the project to $1.1 million. The estimated annual tax revenue from the development would be $99,000. However, should Keen put in affordable housing units, the amount offered for the property and the tax revenue would be reduced.

A $2.3 million plan to install the town library at the old Osgood, as proposed by library trustee Patience Towle, was also heard by committee members.

"The old Osgood's left wing, added on in 1954, would be demolished. Its central section of the main floor would offer 14,000 square feet, all on one floor, which would be handicap accessible to make room for parking. The rear wing of the former school building could be leased and a section of the property toward the back could be sold as a house lot," she said.

Towle pointed out that the Paul Pratt Memorial Library building, which is appraised at $700,000, could be converted to condo and office space netting about $20,000 in annual tax revenues. A revamped library could also qualify for 40 percent state reimbursement.

In all, Towle noted that the net cost of a new library would come to $751,000. Towle explained that her proposal for the old school would cost $675,000 less than building a new structure on the site. Not only would it cost less than the estimated $3 million to construct a new building, but the library would also benefit from the architecturally pleasing structure.

"Lynn Durkin of Sand Castle Day Care is very interested in the 1929 wing in the back of the old Osgood for her clients," said Towle. "We think that would be a very compatible community service; the library for all and the day care for small children. This plan also sets up well in terms of parking. And it would offset the tax revenue that would be produced by the development."

As things stand now, the Paul Pratt Library is a packed 8,000 square foot building in need of almost twice its current space. The three floors of the building are laid out in such a way, with the basement area and uppermost floor at opposite sides of the building, that an elevator or ramp for handicap-access is not possible without incurring substantial construction costs. The horseshoe shaped drive offers only seven parking spaces though it sometimes spills out to 11, Towle said.

Osgood reu. But reuse committee members felt that a dual endorsement would be confusing

"For a while se committee member Kathy O'Malley suggested that the committee endorse the library, too there, it seemed that the committee wasn't sure which way to go," said Haddad.

Both corporations had come up with some last-minute ideas on how to incorporate a library into their elderly housing plans. Keen proposed a 7,000 square foot lot for the new library. "That would mean that we would have to build a two-floor structure," explained Towle. "That translates to higher staffing costs to man the two levels. It also means that space will be lost for the elevator and staircases we'll need. It also makes it more difficult for people with certain disabilities to get around the building."

Perhaps the greatest concern for the library trustees at this time is that they are not handicap accessible. "We cannot continue to serve the community in violation of a law that allows access to all," said Towle.

South Shore Housing proposed putting the library at the front of the building and installing villa-style elderly housing in the back in the 1929 wing. However, committee members were concerned that that would be too much activity on the three-acre site since the lot is zoned as a residential area.

"The South Shore company was willing to put in low cost housing with their regular condos, as well as incorporate the library into the building," said Ford. "Had we come back with a proposal for 14 units, that could have worked."

According to Ford, there is a school of thought that you have to maximize the dollar return aside from the community needs. "Revenue, elderly housing and a handicap accessible, computer-ready and spacious library were the issues discussed," said Ford. "We did address the first, but the other two have not really been responded to at all. At the end of the meeting, I said to three of the members who felt strongly about low-cost housing, 'You didn't get what you wanted,' and I know that they were frustrated, too."

What Ford envisions as a best-case scenario for the old Osgood is 12 to 14 units of attractive affordable housing for the elderly lining the back of the building. "It's a lovely mix, the elderly and libraries. If we move in that direction, it won't put as much money in the tax kitty tomorrow, but over the long term it will service us better for the future."

Best school reuse a matter of opinion

Glick said it should be preserved as a public building even though keeping the library there has its problems.

"It may be hard to make that building work for our future needs, but it's worth it," he said.

Herb Towle, 263 King St., said the old Osgood school would make a great town hall and suggested the existing town hall be sold for elderly housing.

"(Osgood) would give a far greater area for town activities to be separated into departments in ample space on a level floor area," he said. "In the event that the nearest end of the building is to be unused, save that space for a future kindergarten, when as surely will happen, the schools are again overcrowded."

Selectman Diane Sullivan questioned the Osgood committee's choice of a for-profit company, Keen Development Corporation of Cambridge, to develop the site for housing for the elderly.

She wondered why the committee didn't support the plan from the non-profit South Shore Housing Development Corporation of Kingston, which proposed 30 percent of its 26 condos be sold for about $75,000 each with the remaining units selling at market with a preference for Cohasset residents.

She was concerned about condominium fees and the proposed selling price of the Keen condos — which range in size from 750 to 1,100 square feet and in price from $195,000 for a one bedroom to $265,000 for a two bedroom unit.

"Keen's proposal may be good," Sullivan said. "But South Shore Housing's proposal gives us something our seniors can afford to pay for."

But Osgood Committee members said Keen's proposal — which could include a component for moderately-priced housing if the town chooses — brings the most money back to the town.

Keen offers $800,000 for the building while South Shore Housing's plan was to buy the building for $100,000 with a share of the profits coming back to the town adding up to a total of about $250,000.

Selectmen seemed to agree that carving off a building lot a the lower end of the school grounds along Sohier Street would be prudent so the land could be used for a possible new library building. Keen presented a rough rendering showing a two-story library on a 7,000 square foot footprint with about 20-22 parking spaces.

However, the trustees were cool to that idea. They need 14,000 square feet —preferably on one floor.

Trustees favor selling the Paul Pratt Library to offset the cost of renovating the Osgood School into a new library. They say the rear wing of the school building can be leased and have had informal talks with a day-care center interested in the site.

"Nothing we have heard tonight would make us give up our position about reuse of the old Osgood School," said Patience Towle, trustees' chairman.

Selectman Tom Callahan said he agreed the library needs more space but hoped trustees would agree to compromise and build a new structure rather than hold out for the Osgood School.

Officials pursue 30-year sewer funding

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Financing Cohasset's massive sewer projects is a daunting task for town officials, rate payers and taxpayers. Any plan that can help the town pay to sewer north and central Cohasset is welcome. One of the latest plans involves a pilot program by the state to fund certain wastewater projects over a 30-year period rather than the more traditional 20 years. The long-term implications for the town mean lower annual debt payments. But it also means the town will take on more debt than if it borrows over a 20-year period because of the additional decade of interest associated with a 30-year loan. Essentially, a 30 year loan will cost more over the long term than a 20-year loan.

In a letter to the town, Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner David Struhs warns the town of the implications of taking on 30-year debt.

"Communities should be aware that while the annual debt service payments will decline with 30-year financing, the aggregate debt service associated with that borrowing will exceed the standard 20-year financing," Struhs said. "While 30-year financing may make sense from a wastewater rate management perspective, communities should consider the impact of increasing their debt burden on their municipal credit ratings."

"Massachusetts is the first state to implement 30-year financing, but there are some problems. They don't know specifically what they are going to be able to do. We submitted our forms by the Sept. 15 deadline, and by doing that we are telling them that we want to have that option available if and when it becomes available."
Sewer Commission Chairman Ted Guild

Despite the potential problems outlined by Struhs, town officials want to have the 30-year option available. Sewer Commissioner Ted Guild said his board has submitted the town's sewer projects for 30-year financing.

"The sewer commission is following up on the 30-year financing," Guild said. "Massachusetts is the first state to implement 30-year financing, but there are some problems. They don't know specifically what they are going to be able to do. We submitted our forms by the Sept. 15 deadline, and by doing that we are telling them that we want to have that option available if and when it becomes available."

Treasurer/Collector Joe Buckley confirmed that he has also been looking into the program, but there are some big problems at this time.

"The state told us that if we go with the 30-year option, the last 10 years could be at the regular interest rate instead of the reduced rate given for the first 20 years," Buckley said. "We have filed an application, but we need more information."

State officials also informed Buckley that they would not be prepared to issue a 30-year bond until sometime next spring. Struhs said the program is contingent on enough communities expressing interest and favorable market conditions.

The pilot program is a joint effort by DEP and the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to offer 30-year funding for projects designed to last 30 years or longer. Eligible projects include landfill caps, major pumping stations, combined sewer overflow controls and collection systems.

Household hazardous waste day

The Town of Cohasset will hold its annual Household Hazardous Waste (HHW) Collection Day from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 10, at the parking lot of the new town Department of Public Works (DPW) garage on Cedar Street.

While the event is primarily for Cohasset residents, it is also open to resident of other South Shore towns who get a "Reciprocity Letter" in advance from their local board of health or department of public works and are in towns that are members of the South Shore which are: Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Scituate and Weymouth.

Household hazardous waste items accepted include paint thinner, kerosene, gasoline, dry gas, paint strippers, spot removers, degreasers, antifreeze, brake fluid, waxes, photo chemicals, drain cleaners, glues, weed killers, pesticides, herbicides, insecticides, rat poison, insect repellents, batteries, acids and aerosols.

Wastes that will NOT be accepted include any type of commercial wastes, such as PCB's, dioxin containing wastes, radioactive materials, explosive materials, ammunition, pathological wastes and compressed gasses (other than aerosols).

Parking fines going up

Parking fines at Sandy Beach are being increased from $15 to $25 as soon as the town posts the appropriate signs. Police Chief Brian Noonan informed selectmen that the parking fines should remain the same at all other locations.

Items needed for yard sale

The Harbor View Tenants Association, 60 Elm St., will hold a yard-bake sale and raffle Saturday, Oct. 10, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., to benefit the Tenants Activity Fund.

Contributions of clothing, linens, furniture, books, odds and ends are needed.

FALLS FROM GRACE

Children are often thought to be resilient enough to withstand the effects of falls. The fact is, though, that children endure trauma that has the potential to throw vertebral joints out of alignment. According to a National Safety Council study of 536 infants, 44.7% had fallen from a high place during their first year of life. Beyond that, a study conducted by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission showed that almost 250,000 children under the age of 15 were treated for injuries that occurred on playgrounds during a single year. And, an additional 50,000 youngsters annually are treated for head and neck trauma due to bicycle mishaps. Many of these spine-jarring injuries could benefit from chiropractic evaluation and treatment.

We believe children and the entire family can benefit from gentle and safe chiropractic care. When you visit SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC for chiropractic care, your health is in caring, competent hands. Occupation: Clay mold maker at Clay Strokes in the Village.

Goal: To have a place for children and adults in Cohasset to be able to come and express their creativity on clay forms.

Best vacation: Nantucket with my family.

Best day of your life: When my children and I married my husband.

Biggest worry: Children having too much spare time on their hands.

Favorite holiday: Valentine's Day.

Favorite season: Fall.

Favorite TV show: "The X Files."

Favorite movie: "Homeward Bound."

Favorite book: "The Native Speaker."

Favorite junk food: Barbecue potato chips.

Dumbest thing I've ever done: Forgetting to empty molds after I poured them!

Person you'd most like to meet: My children's children.

Pet peeve: Messy counters and dirty floors.

October flu clinics planned

The Cohasset Board of Health and the Social Service League announce the October Flu Clinics:

It's time to "winterize and immunize!" The best way to protect yourself from the flu is a yearly flu shot. Who should get a flu shot?

People who are 65 or older.

Children or adults with chronic lung disease, heart disease, diabetes or other chronic health problems. Children or teens who, for medical reasons, take an aspirin every day.

People who live with or take care of someone who is at risk of getting the flu (health care workers, primary care givers, etc.)

Anyone wanting extra protection during the winter months from the current flu strains.

There will be two flu clinics for seniors:

1. Tuesday, Oct. 13, 10 a.m. to noon, at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset.

2. Friday, Oct. 16, 10 a.m. to noon at Harborview, 60 Elm St., Cohasset.

Community flu clinics for all Cohasset residents:

1. Saturday, Oct. 17, 10 a.m. to noon at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

2. Saturday, Oct. 24, 10 a.m. to noon at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

3. Tuesday, Oct. 27, 7 to 9 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

Note: Please wear a short sleeve shirt.

Any seniors who have not received the pneumonia vaccine or who have not had a tetanus booster for 10 years or more, may call the league office at 383-0771 or 383-0821 for our walk-in clinic hours. All vaccines are free for Cohasset residents.

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

Happy Birthday greetings go to Libby Pompeo this week, and wait until we tell you more! Believe it or not, Mrs. Pompeo is 80 years old now (you'd never guess that, would you?!). Well, her family, under the direction of her granddaughter, Tara, held a party for her that was wonderful! It was held at Kimball's By-The-Sea Sept. 12 — an open house for all of Mrs. Pomp's friends, neighbors, relatives, tons of people! Even her second-grade teacher, Mrs. Kennedy, was there! Her childhood friend and fellow classmate, Gerard Keating, went to join in the celebration; Father Mulvehill joined the group and gave his blessing; her granddaughter Krissy got everything and everyone on video; granddaughter Lynn made a beautiful (and scrumptious cake); her niece, Jane Silva, wrote a poem about her Aunt Elizabeth; her son Roger read a poem about being 80; and, Tara (who lived in Hawaii for a while last year with her husband Rich, and daughter, Sage) even made her a beautiful lei for the event! There were pictures galore, even more memories were shared, and a fine time was had by all! As we said, HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

DEAN'S LIST

Word from Bowdoin College is that four Cohasset students were named to the dean's list on the basis of their scholastic achievements during the spring semester of the 1997-98 academic year! Congratulations go to Geoffrey D. Chamberlain, Johanna R. Horn (with honors), William T. Horn, and Christopher M. Kondrat!

BEETLES DANCE CONTEST

The Second Congregational Church is planning an event that you won't want to miss; Oct. 3, at 7:30 p.m., they will be holding a Beetles Dance Concert — no, not the English Beatles group, the Cambridge, Mass., group. And, it is to be an evening of fun that will appeal to all ages! Dancing to the Beetle's tunes, singing along, just watching — whatever you want to do! They would love it to be a community event, promise it will appeal to all, and want YOU to have fun. Tickets are $10 for adults, $5 for children. Refreshments will be provided. So, mark the date right now, that way you won't forget!

VOLUNTEER BRUNCH

On Tuesday, Sept. 22, the Cohasset Consignment Shop held a brunch to honor volunteers. Manager of the Shop, Andy Merrill, noted that the shop, established in 1953, is a non-profit organization, staffed by volunteers, with all proceeds going to the myriad of projects sponsored by the Social Service Leagues of the South Shore. The shop is located at Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, and consignments are accepted Monday through Friday, and is open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m. Items currently at the shop not to miss are men and women's sweaters and blouses from Talbots, Evan Picone, Brooks Brothers, as well as English Meakin China (1890-1910), handpainted Chinese prints with bamboo frames, glass beads, fall wreaths and a great selection of suits and after-five dresses. GO NOW!

SEMESTER IN MEXICO

Russell B. MacPherson Jr., a first-year student at Colby College, is spending the fall semester in Mexico, in the Colby in Cuernavaca program. MacPherson, a graduate of Noble and Greenough School, is the son of Russell and Susan MacPherson of Cohasset. Colby in Cuernavaca is a language-immersion program that includes courses on Mexican history and culture at the Center for Bilingual Multicultural Studies. Russell will return to the U.S. in January and will start the month on an orientation trip with other students returning from Colby programs in Cuernavaca, London and Dijon, France.

NEW ARRIVAL

Remember last summer when we told you about George and Judy Fortin and how excited they were about the impending birth of their first grandchild? Well, he's here! His name is Christopher Joseph Shanks, he was born Aug. 18 at 4:59 a.m. Christopher weighed in at 8 lbs. 12-1/2 oz. and was 21-1/2 inches long. His Mom, Janice, and Dad, George, are thrilled beyond words naturally; we don't think that George and Judy are out of the clouds yet! Christopher's other maternal grandparent is Donald Weaver, his paternal grandparents are Edith and George Shanks Jr.; need we tell you that they are beside themselves with joy too?! Congratulations to all of you, give that baby tons of hugs and kisses from all of us!

BLUE RIBBON SHOW

The South Shore Art Center is holding its Blue Ribbon Members Show Oct. 2 to Nov. 8. All members, including children and teens, are invited to submit one work to this annual members' show. Work may be dropped off Saturday, Sept. 26, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Monday, Sept. 28, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; or Tuesday, Sept. 29, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. A $10 non-refundable fee per entry is payable upon delivery of the artwork. Works must be securely framed and wired, ready for hanging. No framing by clamped glass will be accepted. Two-dimensional work, not intended to be framed, must also be ready to hang. Sculpture and three-dimensional entries must be accompanied by a sturdy pedestal. The opening reception will be Oct. 2, from 6 to 8 p.m.

LIBRARY CORNER

New artist at the Paul Pratt

The current artist on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library is Carol Carney, a watercolorist from Scituate. Her paintings are in numerous private collections across the country and she has frequent exhibits in the North & South Shore areas. Ms. Carney is a graduate of Massachusetts College of Art and has taught for several years in public and private schools.

Available for purchase are a variety of original watercolor paintings that reflect the Boston and surrounding areas from the "Hatch Shell" to the busy beach scenes of the South Shore. Commissioned work can be arranged and viewed at the artist's studio by appointment. Call Carol Carney at (781) 545-4791. This art exhibit will be on view until the end of September.

Library feasibility study

A public meeting will be held at Cohasset High School at 7 p.m. Oct. 17 to discuss proposals for reuse of the old Osgood School. All Cohasset residents are encouraged to attend.

The Cohasset Public Library Feasibility Study prepared by Stahl Associates, Architects, has been completed. Their conclusion for best site for the library is the old Osgood School. This decision is based on site options, structural considerations and budget constraints.

The floor plan is designed to optimize staffing on the first level in a total of 14,000 square feet. The renovations would include a small meeting room for approximately 50 people, separate story hour/craft room for the children's programs, quiet study rooms and a section for young adults.

Memorial for shipwreck victims

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, Father John Murphy Plymouth Division No. 9, will hold a memorial Mass Sunday, Oct. 4, at St. Anthony's Church on South Main Street in Cohasset. The Mass will commemorate the shipwreck of the Brig St. John which took place Oct. 6, 1849. This shipwreck resulted in the loss of 99 lives of emigrants who were fleeing the Great Hunger in Ireland.

After the 1 p.m. Mass, there will be a reception at the Cohasset Community Center, where the principal speaker will be Peter Stevens, a regular contributor to the "Boston Irish Reporter," as well as a gentleman who has written several books about New England and Irish American history. Coffee and light refreshments will be available.

After the community center they will go to the Cohasset Cemetery where a wreath will be left and final prayers will be said in memory of the victims of this tragedy. Everyone is invited to attend. Anyone wishing more information, may call John Sullivan at (781) 545-1144.

Fall means apples, lots of them!

MAY I PRESENT

SALLYANN CHATTERTON

Fall means apples, lots and lots of apples! Thanks to John Chapman (better known as Johnny Appleseed) who wandered over the countryside with bags of appleseeds for 40 years, apples are everywhere! You can buy them, pick them — either way, apples have fine keeping qualities, so stock up. Here is an example of what you can prepare using fresh apples; and the ever-popular pork loin roast.

PORK ROAST WITH APPLE TOPPING

1 boneless pork loin roast (3 to 3-1/2 pounds), trimmed
1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 jar (10 ounces) apple jelly
1 cup apple juice
1/2 teaspoon ground cardamom
1 cup chopped peeled tart fresh apples
3 tablespoons chopped fresh or dried cranberries
5 teaspoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons water

Place roast on a rack in a shallow roasting pan and rub with the poultry seasoning. Bake, uncovered, at 325 degrees for 2-1/2 hours or until a meat thermometer reads 160-170.

For topping, combine the apple jelly, juice and cardamom in a saucepan. Cook and stir over low heat until smooth. Add apples and cranberries; cook until tender, about 5 to 10 minutes.

Combine cornstarch and water; stir into apple mixture. Bring to a boil. Cook and stir over medium heat until thickened, about 1 to 2 minutes. Remove roast from oven and let it stand for 10 minutes before slicing. Serve with the apple topping. This should serve eight people, with about two cups topping. Be sure to have plenty, it goes fast!

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Words matter

Anyone who has been watching the Clinton debacle knows how important language is. Words and phrases should be chosen carefully especially when they are going to be subject to interpretation in an important matter.

So we must agree with Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris about the "anti-train" letter that Cohasset has now gotten on board with along with their counterparts in Hingham and Scituate.

She rightly points out that when the town of Cohasset signs onto the letter, it is very significant because up until this point, Cohasset has not taken a stand against the train.

Mrs. McMorris and her fellow selectman, Diane Sullivan, refused to sign the letter reprinted on this page, which the full boards of selectmen in our adjacent towns to the north and south had already added their signatures to.

We think they were right not to participate in this thinly veiled attempt to derail Greenbush.

Interestingly, we're not sure where Mrs. McMorris or Mrs. Sullivan stand on the train issue.

They may be for the train although after dozens of meetings, we can't recall them ever expressing their personal opinion on the issue. We respect the fact they try to deal with issues relating to restoration of the Greenbush line without getting sidetracked in emotional debate.

We know that both selectmen Tom Callahan and Merle Brown are vehemently opposed to the train because they often interject that opinion into train-related discussions. Mr. Brown had no problem with the letter while Mr. Callahan said it didn't go far enough in relating concerns about the MBTA's environmental feasibility studies.

We're disappointed that Selectman Nan Roth, who represented the swing vote, opted to sign even though she disagreed with the language.

The letter subtly touts the town of Hingham's official stance that "other transportation modes" haven't been studied enough and clearly goes beyond the scope of why Cohasset joined forces with Hingham and Scituate in the first place.

The letter undermines what could have been a united front to make real progress on the issues of noise, vibration and air pollution — common concerns we all share.

It should come as no surprise to anyone that Hingham reportedly would not sign a version of the letter, supported by Mrs. McMorris, with the phrases about train alternatives and numbers of grade crossings eliminated. After all, Hingham is embroiled in a lawsuit with the MBTA, the ultimate goal of which is to kill the project.

Sadly, Cohasset's been drawn down the slippery slope of proposing the state "study more transportation alternatives" which is just another way of saying "stop the train."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Boards join forces in train letter

DEAR SECRETARY COXE:

The Boards of Selectmen from the towns of Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate are joining to write this letter to you regarding the inadequacy of the MBTA's environmental analysis for proposed transportation improvements in the Greenbush corridor.

Our Boards met together for the first time in July of 1998 to review mutual experiences in dealing with the MBTA and our growing independent concerns about the potential adverse impacts of this project on our communities.

We have concluded that the MBTA's Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Report contains serious unresolved conflicts between the data and conclusions. Each town, independently, either by itself or with outside engineering and technical assistance, reviewed the MBTA's SDEIR and subsequent reports, comparing that data with other readily available information.

Many unresolved conflicts were found. These conflicts relate to items such as the MBTA's analysis of air pollution, noise and vibration associated with the rail alternative, and safety issues related to 43 grade crossings in 17 miles.

These concerns, and others, have been echoed by various state and federal agencies which have also questioned MBTA ridership assumptions as well as the accuracy and completeness of studies designed to gauge the potential impact of rail on wetlands and abutting neighborhoods.

These conflicts are particularly troubling in light of specific charges you made to the MBTA in your Certificate dated June 1, 1995. Without good data, there is no way that either we or the MBTA can properly evaluate the impacts of the proposed project, or of any project alternatives, on our communities.

Since the original SDEIR was produced nearly five years ago, the body of technical knowledge, on which the MBTA's analyses are based, has changed: Federal agencies have adopted, or are considering the adoption of, new regulations to deal with train-related safety and health issues, including diesel emissions; other transportation modes may now be feasible; and user demographics and habits have changed.

It is our joint opinion that the conflicting analyses and data, along with the import of new developments, MUST be resolved before we can determine impacts that rail restoration will have on our coastal towns, or whether less intrusive alternatives exist. We urge you to require the preparation of timely and accurate revised supplemental EIR data as expeditiously as possible, and to conduct a public scoping session before any new studies are undertaken.

Respectfully yours,
The Boards of Selectmen of Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate

A tad of justice, please

TO THE EDITOR:

I have just finished watching the evening McNeil-Lehrer Report, which featured President Clinton's meeting with President Yeltsin. I feel like a voice crying in the wilderness which probably makes no difference at all . . . Who cares? I wonder if anyone agrees with me? I'd love to know.

While not condoning Mr. Clinton for making stupid mistakes, for being a philanderer and a liar, I feel an overwhelming shove to come to his aid and give him credit, at least for being one of the most patient men I can imagine.

To see him on the platform in Russia with Mr. Yeltsin on that momentous occasion, being ridiculed and embarrassed before the whole world by the American press, made me sick.

Their questions re: Lewinsky were so inappropriate, so disgusting, so debasing and so damaging, that one wonders if the Americans who asked them were Russian Communist spies determined to defeat America's efforts to accomplish some good for the Russian people! Whose side are they on, anyway?

No wonder the rest of the world laughs at us! I think much of the blame for America's disgrace lies with our reporters as with Mr. Clinton. They have mercilessly, doggedly badgered his unfortunate personal misdemeanors from the very beginning, back to the Paula Jones issue and right on, no holds on anything that would downgrade him as our President. They haven't bombed the White House yet, but they sure have bombed the hell out of American public opinion.

It is ludicrous when one considers

FROM THE D&A COMMITTEE

Substance abuse - a very real threat against kids

By Pat Martin
FOR THE DRUG AND ALCOHOL COMMITTEE

All parents can agree on one thing and that is that parenting an adolescent can be very challenging at times. It is made even more difficult when parents must confront outside influences that threaten to harm the healthy development of their children. None of these threats are more potentially dangerous to the well-being of a child than drugs and alcohol.

The use of alcohol and drugs by adolescents is harmful for many reasons. It damages the body as well as the psychological development of the child and puts the child's future at risk as well. Substance use is also directly linked to many high risk behaviors that put children in harm's way. Alcohol is involved in 40 percent of all teen suicides, 40 percent of adolescent drownings and continues to be the number one killer of teens in alcohol-related highway deaths.

Believe it or not, all children are at risk of possible future substance abuse. This is true, regardless of where they live, to which race or socio-economic class they belong, or how educated they have become.

How can this be true? The answer lies in the fact that the greatest risk factors involved in determining future substance abuse are universal to us all and in most cases inescapable.

In several articles to follow in the months ahead, writing on behalf of the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee, I will detail risk factors for substance abuse and offer parents insight into how they can effectively combat their child's individual risk. You will want to read these columns and make use of this helpful and crucial information.

The assessors speak out about revaluation

By James Lagrotteria
CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF ASSESSORS
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Your Board of Assessors has decided to write this article in hopes that it will help clarify the mystery surrounding revaluation of your property. Because of the complexity of the subject, we have decided to write this in two parts. This being the first part; it will cover the process of revaluation and the value of your home in the marketplace. The second part will deal with the assessment of your home and how property sales effect your valuation. It is the hope of the Board of Assessors that this article will inform you of the revaluation need and its process. As always, we are available to answer any and all questions should you not understand this process.

To begin with, a revaluation is an update of all assessments in the town conducted under the direction of the Board of Assessors. The Board of Assessors are state-certified individuals whose duties are to discover, list and value all real and personal property in the town, in a uniform and equitable manner. The Board of Assessors are not involved in the collection of property taxes.

Under Proposition 2-1/2, state law requires that all property in the town be assessed within 10 percent of market value every three years. A revaluation is the most equitable way to accomplish this. Most likely in any three year period property values will change. However, not all property values will change at the same rate. Market value will have increased more for some neighborhoods and property types than for others. Some neighborhoods and property types may have decreased in value and others may have remained the same. One purpose of a revaluation is to make sure that assessed values reflect the changes that have occurred in property values in the current marketplace.

Members of the Assessors staff do the revaluation. They have many years of experience in property assessment and are familiar with the marketplace in town. From time to time, it may be necessary to hire some outside help due to limited staffing; as we currently do to help us with our commercial valuations.

The revaluation began Jan. 2 and we expect to complete the work by the middle of September. The resulting values will be for fiscal 1999. These assessments will be the basis for the tax bill which will be mailed in December 1998.

To make a proper assessment on a building, it is desirable that an assessor see the inside as well as the outside of the property. The law requires that property be valued from an actual view or the best information available. We will be performing a data quality control study on our existing information. If we are unable to enter your property, we will still review your assessment based on existing records and sales of properties similar to yours.

Not only will sales of similar properties on your home be used in the revaluation, many other factors come into play as well. Improvements to your property that increase the market value of your property, will also increase your assessment. Such as added rooms or garage, substantial modernization of kitchen or baths, the addition of central air-conditioning, fireplace or extensive remodeling. The construction cost of a new home is only one element considered when valuing a property for the first time as that cost may or may not reflect the current market value of your property. Normal maintenance will help retain the market value of your property, but will not affect your assessment.

Wastewater Workshop

About 60 people attended the wastewater Workshop at the High School last Wednesday. They learned much about the workings of the various methods of treatment of wastewater and the best way to contain the ever increasing costs of dealing with our growing septic waste problems in town. Several pending Health Board activities were discussed, and the experts offered a number of solutions to the problems that surfaced.

A great deal of time was spent in discussing the high cost of repairs and upgrades to current systems. In many cases the experts pointed to joint, combined or shared systems as the most cost effective solution. In addition, the use of high tech sewers leading, not to a central treatment plant, but to local treatment facilities was cited as being highly cost effective, sometimes reducing the costs of treatment by more than 50%.

John Higgins, of the DEP suggested that an entirely new approach was possible with wastewater districts using the utility approach, where an organization would make repairs and do maintenance and upgrades as necessary and charge the homeowners a fixed monthly rate which represents prorated costs.

The Watershed

The biggest source of water pollution in Massachusetts is not from septic systems or industrial waste, but contaminated stormwater runoff from roads, driveways, and parking lots. The problem has gotten worse in the past 20 years as developers have paved over more green.

The Massachusetts Watershed Initiative is a new program to deal with water runoff pollution. Cohasset is in the South Coastal Watershed. Since our drinking water comes from ponds in this watershed, we have only as much drinking water as we can keep safe from harmful runoffs.

Lilly Pond is particularly susceptible to damage from untreated runoff. We are only now beginning to think about sewering the houses surrounding Lilly Pond, but more important, is the need to protect Lilly Pond from runoff from our roads and highways. The Mass DPW is already helping to clean up the problem of salt intrusion into our watershed, but if we had an oil spill at 3A between Forest Avenue and Pond Street, the contamination would be in Lilly Pond within an hour.

The town needs to consider an emergency response to accidental pollution and spills, but in many ways you can help. Ensure that you or your gardener doesn't over-fertilize, and never pour oil, pesticides or other petroleum products into the ground. Take them to Cedar street for proper disposal.

Massachusetts, with one of the best environmental programs in the country is not keeping ahead of the pollution. We need to do more.

Bus fleet is train alternative

TO THE EDITOR:

Many statements have been made objecting to the proposed Greenbush line's expense, impracticality and hazard. But the alternatives are usually given as commuter boats and — vaguely — buses. This letter addresses a specific alternative.

The present bus connection (No. 220) from Quincy Center Red Line station to Hingham depot should be extended, with the present time schedule, to Greenbush, with the following modifications:

1. A fleet of mini-buses, like those used by the MBTA for The Ride, should replace the large buses in the present service.

2. The buses should run express from Sea Street in Weymouth to Quincy Station.

3. The buses should follow Country Way in Scituate and Main Street in Cohasset to King Street, then left to Route 3A to Hingham depot.

4. The buses should be routed to stop at the commuter boat facility in Hingham.

Right now, the bus trip to Quincy takes about as long as the automobile trip during commuter hours, but this time can be shortened with the use of more efficient vehicles.

Testosterone levels in the White House

"If this is going to be the standard (for ousting politicians)," observed New York's Congressman John Conyers the other day, "we may not have a quorum when it comes time to vote."

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The comment from a member of the House Judiciary Committee came as three members of Congress fell all over themselves to confess to sexual affairs before they were announced on the Internet or in a national magazine.

Illinois Republican Congressman Henry Hyde called his dalliance with Cherie Snodgrass, wife of a furniture saleman, "a youthful indiscretion," that ended in 1969 when he was an immature 45-year-old congressman.

Congressman Dan Burton, the Indiana Republican, heard the magazine "Vanity Fair" was working on the story, quickly 'fessed up' that he not only had an affair with a lady who was not his wife but had a son to prove it.

And then there was Congresswoman Helen Chenoweth of Idaho . . . and we haven't even heard from Ted Kennedy yet!

These are the people who will sit in judgment of whether or not to impeach Bill Clinton for what he did to Monica, although there is not a little evidence to show that she was a willing and eager participant.

"There aren't many people with an ounce of testosterone in them who've had the unblemished record that our fifth grade nuns would have wished for us," said Congressman James Moran, a Virginia Democrat, surveying his fellow House members.

It's been that way since the founding of the republic, although it's hard to get the goods on the earliest day practitioners since there were no websites on the Internet or National Enquirers around to record their peccadilloes.

Grover Cleveland ran successfully for president in spite of the chants, "Ma, ma, where's my pa? Gone to the White House, ha, ha, ha!" in recollection of the fact that the unmarried Cleveland fathered a child that may or may not have been his when he was sheriff of Erie County, New York.

John Adams, the deacon's son and least likely to sew wild oats, wrote in his biography, "I was of an amorous disposition and very early from 10 or 11 years, was very fond of the society of females," but if he ever put his words into action there was no Ken Starr around to dig it out for us.

When he was minister to France, Thomas Jefferson found time for a roll in the hay with an artist, Maria Coway, and when he was president, Jefferson was carrying on what became a 38-year relationship and had several children with a slave girl named Sally Hemmings.

To make matters more lurid, Sally was the daughter of John Wayles, who was also the father of Jefferson's real wife, Martha, which made Sally and Martha half-sisters. Think of what the Internet or the National Enquirer - or even the New York Times - could have done with that one!

On the eve of the 1920 presidential campaign, the Republican National Committee discovered that the 15-year relationship between their candidate, Warren Harding, and Mrs. Carrie Phillips was not exactly platonic and it cost them more than $20,000 to send her and her husband on a slow boat to Japan during the campaign.

That evidently did nothing to lower the Harding testosterone level for the next thing the RNC knew the president was getting a secretarial job for a young girl named Nan Britton and she was showing her gratitude in a hotel room in lower Manhattan.

And then there was Jack Kennedy . . . but enough of that. I've got to take a cold shower.

the moral escapades of foreign leaders around the world. Take a recall on the dignified British Throne for the past few centuries. The Kings even murdered their wives for their mistresses and nobody seemed to complain enough to dethrone them. Loose living has been the norm in almost all of Europe, to say nothing of the Eastern nations.

In our own little Washington world we wonder how many Senators, Congressmen and newsmen who stand with stones in hand, are innocent enough to cast the first one. Cast them, they do, innocent or not.

One commentator on the broadcast mentioned Franklin Roosevelt and his success as a leader during the last war. Fortunately for him, the press didn't lambaste him publicly for his mistress of years. They kept it a secret. The Kennedy boys managed unscathed to enjoy their wild parties and shoddy indiscretions. Their characters were never held up to public scrutiny by the unrelenting press — until it was all over.

I wouldn't blame Bill for crying "Give me a break." If I had to endure the undignified questions reporters asked at important meetings with foreign dignitaries, including England's Mr. Blair, I would have long since blown my top at their audacity and gross insults.

To batter our President at the Russian Conference in front of the Russian Government . . . a conference called to discuss probably one of the most seriously dangerous situations in history, one has to be nothing less than a fool. How small, how unsophisticated can you be? Sad to say, it makes America itself look foolish. What happened to our dignity and our intellectual prowess? I would have been proud of Bill Clinton if he had shown the guts to stand on his feet and answer the reporters: "Madam and Sir, I find your questions totally inappropriate with no relevance whatever to this meeting. I have no intentions of honoring them with an answer other than this."

There are really no excuses for Clinton's coarse mistakes, nor any excuses for such shameful behavior on the part of the reporters. Too much power and abuse of our treasure, the free press, is bad news, indeed.

At least, Bill made an attempt to admit his mistakes, even though tainted with a bit of scapegoating. Can't we be magnanimous enough to give him credit for that and super control of his temper?

Cohasset does need more senior housing

TO THE EDITOR:

I do not want to enter into the discussion of what is the greatest need, library or senior housing. However, I do want to point out why we need housing.

Those of us who graduated from the armed services after World War II, grew up during the depression. To be able to go to the Five & Ten to buy a cement on rubber sole for the holes in our shoes, that was a luxury. So we grabbed at the opportunity to have an education. We were married or soon got married, had kids, bought a nice home in towns like Cohasset. We wanted our kids to have everything we did not have growing up and we wanted them to have a good education.

We did pretty much of the above even though we did not make the big money that has been available lately. Sure some, like attorneys and doctors, made the big bucks but even they had trouble accumulating assets. There were no Roth IRAs, or any IRAs, no 401Ks. The biggest deduction we had for our income tax purpose was the interest on home mortgages and real estate tax.

Some started their own business and plowed their earnings back into the company helping it and the economy grow. Others were successful salesmen, a lot who found out as they reached 50 years and were making pretty good money, the company would reduce their territory or let them go.

By now the kids are through college and the house is about paid for, now we would start paying ourselves and plan for retirement. However, we soon found that some of us were passing away very early in life and leaving their widows with a nice house but no assets to maintain the house or to support themselves.

They had run out of time.

The widows could sell the house but where would they live? The income from the sale would make them ineligible for Harbor View at 60 Elm St. They had lived in Cohasset now for 25, 30, 40 years. Their friends are here. They had paid taxes, built schools and supported their churches and do not want to move.

Osgood would make the perfect solution. They could sell their house, purchase a condo of 900 to 1,000 sq. ft. and still have funds left over to live comfortably.

Could Town Meeting approve the sale of Osgood and restrict the funds to be used to build a new library. These funds along with the funds from the sale of the present library could go a long way toward a new library. Our debt service is going to be very expensive and there are other problems we have to face. Maybe by selling Osgood and restricting the funds for a new library we could have both housing and library without putting any more strain on near maxed out Town credit card.

Don't barricade King Street

DEAR SELECTMEN:

The Sept. 10 edition of the Cohasset Mariner presents a front-page article "ASK! Gains momentum with support of officials," in which the author, Constance Pittman Lindner reports that a group made up of King Street residents have "met with the backing of selectmen and the planning board." According to the reporter, you voted to place the issue in front of town meeting, where a vote will be taken on closing off a section of the "King-Beechwood intersection in order to force traffic back to 3A."

I empathize with the traffic-related concerns that my King Street neighbors have voiced; many residents would prefer to live in minimum vehicle zones such as cul-de-sacs, one way or dead-end streets. As a Cohasset resident, near King Street abutter, and motorist, however, I would like to weigh-in against the recommendation to close off the King-Beechwood intersection. King Street runs 1-1/4 miles from Beechwood Street to the Sunoco Station on Route 3A and continues another four fifths of one mile as part of Route 3A, concluding with a right hand turn up to the new four-way stop that intersects North Main Street. Hopefully the traffic data that ASK! has presented, excludes any portion of King beyond the Sunoco station. I am admittedly skeptical about the statistics — particularly concerning the reported number of vehicles (2,500) traversing it daily.

From my own recent observation, conducted between 11 a.m. and 12:05 p.m., Saturday, 9/12/98, from which I would summarize the following: A total of 116 cars were observed entering or exiting King Street. This traffic pattern would need to be sustained for almost 22 hours to achieve the volume of 2,500 vehicles that ASK! identified. Additionally, 70 percent of the Beechwood Street traffic, regardless of whether they were heading towards or away from Shaw's, chose not to enter King Street.

What was most surprising during this observance (other than the number of motorists who actually come to a complete stop at the intersection — thank you), was the traffic volume that Beechwood services. Beechwood Street supported 294 vehicles; this represents more than 2-1/2 times the amount that my neighbors on King Street experienced — with King Street contributing 21 of the total.

So, you think, big deal, what does this all mean? I agree — even with 294 vehicles per hour on a busy thoroughfare such as Beechwood — this represents less than five cars every 60 seconds. On King Street, the same calculation results in two cars per minute. Selectmen, the one and one-quarter mile stretch of King does not present itself as a busy street; speeders no doubt, (What roadways are free of them?) — but volume? No way!

If you are also skeptical of my observations (I will not take it personally, this hour was one of the quietest I had all week!), please drive down King Street at different times of the day. Depending on the time, you may see a few cars — you may even observe our local constabulary's favorite hiding place — but you will not see a traffic jam or any near-semblance. Not once since the Stop & Shop intersection was created, have I had to wait more than one light cycle to enter 3A from King Street. What you will see and possibly experience is one of the most picturesque byways in Cohasset. Adding four-way stop signs at Pond and King, introducing speed bumps, and/or even establishing a one-way street, are solutions that should be investigated, but please don't barricade it!

Officials wrestle with growth committee

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset needs to do something to control growth and development in town. On that point, nobody disagrees. But how to formulate a plan to control growth and what kind of committee should oversee the process is another story. The board of selectmen wrestled with these problems.

A tentative agreement was reached at a recent meeting on the shape of a new growth and development committee, which would be comprised of two citizens, two selectmen, one member from the conservation commission, a planning board member and a representative from the village revitalization committee. Selectmen plan to air the matter again soon. While the details of the committee are incomplete, selectmen are seeking two citizen volunteers. Interested citizens should contact the selectmen's office at town hall.

Selectman Nan Roth said one of the first goals of the new committee should be to interview candidates to serve as the town's planner.

"I think we should set up a committee and first and foremost have them look into hiring a planner and determining costs," said Roth. "But the first job of this committee should be to hire a planner. To ask a committee of volunteers to do this is too much."

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said she wants the committee to determine the goals and objectives for the town to formulate a master plan.

"As a community, we need to look at our town in various areas and think about where we want to go," McMorris said. "I think we need some clear goals for a master plan. We need to set the framework for the plan by looking at planning, zoning, and the effects of uncontrolled growth."

Selectmen Tom Callahan objected to the idea that the committee should spend time developing goals for a master plan. Callahan wanted to form the committee rapidly to start immediate work on a master plan.

"I think you want to study and re-study ad nauseam," Callahan said to McMorris. "I want to just do it, and get it going."

McMorris countered that she wasn't proposing a study to study growth. She said the committee needed a clear set of goals and objectives to lay a solid foundation for an effective master plan.

"Is this to control growth?" McMorris asked. "Is it to put a limit on the impacts to our infrastructure? Is it to deal with pollution? You need to lay that out before you bring in a planner."

McMorris favored establishing an ad hoc committee, but selectman Merle Brown disagreed, proposing the formation of a full committee that would report to town meeting.

The selectmen asked Town Manager Mark Haddad to invite a representative from the Metropolitan Area Planning Council to a public meeting to talk about the planning process and what's involved in a master plan.

"The MAPC can help," Callahan said. "I'd like to see the committee get going and not drag this out until 2001 or 2002."

Wastewater treatment committee proposed

At the Sept. 14 selectmen's meeting, selectman Tom Callahan proposed the establishment of a wastewater treatment committee to study the town's sewer and septic issues. Callahan said the current boards that oversee wastewater — the sewer commission, health board and water commission — are too busy with other business to devote any significant time to examining wastewater treatment. Callahan suggested that a separate committee could pore over previous town wastewater documents and studies, seek out grants, and examine ways to deal with wastewater issues. Callahan said he envisioned the committee as an advisory group to the selectmen.

Memories of great times on the pond

THE FISH STORY

MARK TRASK

The days are getting shorter. You sense that as you look into the back yard after you arrive home from work, and the grass is growing long in the early evening darkness. The lawnmower rests 'til Saturday now. The cool crisp mornings heat up to midday and settle back into quiet fog-on-the-bog evenings, the warm ponds muscling vapor into the atmosphere under the hot sun are blanketed in misty vapors by dark. So how is the fishing this time of year?

We rolled out the old photographs going back 14 years to when we opened the first store up on 3A in Cohasset and these in no particular order are some of what we found:

9/28/96 Ryan Fay got a largemouth bass in Bound Brook on a shiner. 9/24/96 Dave Murphy and son Christopher weighed in a 24-pound striper that took a pogie near Hogshead. 10/4/86 Bob Sweeney captures a 9-pound, 12-ounce largemouth on a red Culprit worm. 10/20/86 Ed Struzik of Pembroke fools a 12-pound Coho with a Mepps spinner in the Indianhead. 9/30/96 a visit to the Lighthouse Point jetty was fruitful for Manuel Fontes who brought home a 28-pound, 4-ounce striper, 43 inches long. 9/22/96 Peter Maitland tossed a mackerel chunk to a waiting 22-pound, 6-ouncer, a 41-inch long striper. One of the after-school crew, Joe Guider, spent 9/29/96 fishing and his striper made a meal for a 1.5-pound largemouth. 9/29/96 the Terry boys, Dave Sr. and Jr. nailed a pair of fine bass from Pleasant Beach in Cohasset. Sr.'s went 28 pounds while Jr.'s tipped the scale at 17 pounds, 6 ounces. 10/23/98 yours truly captured his first and last keeper of the year on a clam chunk at Cunningham Bridge. 10/7/96 Ryan Fay found another hungry largemouth in Bound Brook. 10/26/96 John Greenwood of Rockland fooled an Aaron River bass, the Pop-P chomper weighed in at 4 pounds, 12 ounces. 10/1/96 Mike Mahony stopped painting long enough to catch his 38-inch keeper from the rocks north of Minot Beach.

10/11/96 Steve O'Donaghue tubed up a 27-pound 43-inch striper. 9/25/96 Ryan Fay nailed another pound-and-a-half bass at Bound Brook. 9/21/96 Dave Mitchell used a Rapala to fool his largemouth. 9/28/96 Jared Barilaro had his turn at the scale with a Bound Brook bass. 9/29/96 Adam Cahill nabbed a hefty catfish on a shiner. 9/26/96 another 37-inch striper for

The Cohasset gridders are working hard to get a number in the left side of the won/loss column for new coach Tony Rolfe. They are home under the lights Friday night against Latin Academy. Kick-off is at 6 p.m.

Gridders hope for better luck Friday night

Despite dominating the game on both sides of the ball in the second half, the Cohasset Skippers ran out of time and fell to the Mashpee Falcons 18-12. Cohasset, playing on Mashpee's home field, was led on the offensive side of the ball by Jamie DeMichele and Daniel Trowers.

The visiting Skippers posted nearly 300 yards of offense, most of that through DeMichele's arm and Trowers' feet. The senior signal-caller completed nine of 16 passes in his first start at QB, and his first game in two seasons. Trowers, a sophomore tailback, gobbled up 132 yards on 19 carries, the best rushing game by a Skipper in years.

However, DeMichele and Trowers hardly worked alone. The Cohasset offensive line put forth a mammoth effort to allow the backs to perform, particularly in the final period. Cohasset marched 90 yards in under two minutes, coming up a mere four yards short of the tying touchdown.

Tackles John Considine and Craig Davis, guards Adam Sasso and Luke Caldwell, and center captain John-Paul Laugelle, all played well, aided no doubt by the preseason efforts of strength and conditioning coach Mark Hall.

And senior captain fullback Justin Golden led the way for Trowers, blocking prospective tacklers with relish.

Cohasset found themselves down a touchdown mere seconds into the game, after fumbling the opening kickoff. The Falcons recovered the ball and took it in for a quick six. Gamely, the visitors came back and tied the game when Trowers jetted in from 32 yards out.

The Skipper defense had a hard time stopping Mashpee's Robert Dias, who rushed for 110 yards on 17 carries. Dias accounted for the Falcons' second TD, when he crossed the goal line after a 12-yard carry. However, Mashpee's third and final score was just as much a matter of which way the ball bounces as the first. A tipped DeMichele pass was picked off and taken in for six points, giving the hosts a 18-6 edge.

Trowers would score once more and DeMichele and the offensive line would roll for 90 yards as the clock wound down, but the Mashpee defense held firm and Cohasset was handed a loss in its first game.

The Skippers should be far from discouraged, however. Bright spots included interceptions by Sasso and Golden and Cohasset's final, desperate charge for the paint.

Golden was quick to get to the point when asked about his squad's play.

"There's not much to say; we just came up short. We have to pick up the intensity and start beating people up on the line. Otherwise, this Friday will be no different."

The Skippers are home under the lights Friday night.

Friday night football

The game: Latin Academy at Cohasset
The venue: Alumni Field, 6 p.m.
The skinny: Cohasset came up with a sterling effort in the second half of their opening game 18-12 loss to Mashpee, but it wasn't enough to get the job done. Hopefully continued success through the arm of Jaime DeMichelle and on the ground with sophomore RB Dan Trowers will help lead the Skippers to victory.

Skippers enjoy a long awaited taste of victory

Winning is truly an addictive concept. One bite at the apple and that's all you can think about until your next meal.

Welcome to the world of the girls varsity soccer program. They've got one (a last-minute 1-0 thriller against Middleboro to open the season) and now they want more. A lot more.

"We've been in our games this season, but it's a situation where we just couldn't seem to break through at right time and put the ball in the net," said new head coach Debbie Beal. "But the biggest thing is that you see an improvement with the girls every time that they step out onto the field and they're having fun."

Beal, the JV coach at Scituate for the last three seasons where she was a soccer star before moving onto the University of Rhode Island, inherited a team that hadn't won a game over the last two seasons. Freshman forward Becky Ross quickly changed that when she put in her own rebound in the waning minutes against Middleboro.

"You'd have thought we were at a block party after the game. The girls were just off the wall and very excited," said Beal. "They came into the year with a great attitude and have played hard since the first day of practice. They really deserved to get that first win under their belt.

"This group really want to win," she added. "They want to be a team that succeeds together. Every day we come out here I see more and more kids doing good things."

After losses to Hanover and Norton, the Skippers (1-3) traveled to Norwell on Thursday in search of that illusive second win. They came away with a strong effort but on the losing end of a 2-0 decision against their South Shore League rival.

Junior goalie Alex DeRosa kept the Clippers at bay for most of the contest but Cohasset was not able to get a sustained offense going the other way on Norwell goalie Maeve Boroa.

"I'm very happy with the way that we played," said Beal as her junior class dominated charges battled off the late-summer afternoon heat. "We started right from the basics at the beginning of the year and you can see the skills starting to blossom game after game. You can already see that kids are more comfortable with the ball. They're not afraid to carry and dribble it up the field.

"I really believe that things are starting to change for the better. You can see it in these kids eyes how much they want to win. With so many young players on this team it can't help but bode well for the future."

Presently Beal has a strong and experienced defense in front of DeRosa while the offense is still trying to find its groove.

"The defense has been outstanding," said Beal of the crew that includes juniors Maura Duffy, Jessie Zerendow and Jenny Chastain, sophomore Clara Sceery and senior co-captains Alyssa McNamara and Caitlin O'Neil. "They all have varsity experience and know what needs to be done out there."

The forward line is less experienced and thus is taking a little more time to come around, said Beal, but the talent is definitely there to be harvested.

"When we get everything together, out biggest offensive weapon is going to be speed. (Sophomore) Catherine Flaherty in particular looks like a bullet on the field," said Beal. "Ross has played well and we also have some experience up there with senior Sue Thompson and Alissa Conley.

"We're coming along," she added. "Sooner or later we're going to start finishing on these scoring opportunities."

Also seeing time this season for the Skippers are Katie Brister, Maureen Equi, Kerry McCarthy, Jackie Kahn, Eileen Ridge, Maggie O'Neil, Kate Grimm, Emily Libby, Caitlin Stansell, Kathleen McCarthy, Cara Foley, Ary Afshar, Kate Bosworth, Skyler Ralston and Carly Carter.

Mike Mahoney, this one was heavier though.

10/1/96 Rich Hegenberger's mackerel chunk was in the right place, a 44-inch striper inhaled it and weighed in at 31 pounds, 4 ounces. Ryan Bradley of Scituate cast his mackerel chunk from Minot Beach and came up with a 43-inch, 29-pound, 10-ounce striped bass. 10/6/96 turfman Rick O'Donnell nailed a 44-inch striper that scaled out at 21 pounds 13 ounces. 10/14/98 Mike Farraher joined the Bound Brook team with a largemouth bass. 9/24/97 Sandy Marks used a shad lure to catch a 17-pound, 9-ounce, 39-inch bass. 9/30/97 Jack Pattison's pogie chunk was dinner for a 25-pound, 13-ounce bass. Rory MacDonald took his 18-pound bass on cut mackerel off Pt. Allerton. 10/5/97 Mark Rennie caught a nice pickerel. 12/24/97 Wayne Galvin finished wrapping presents, went out fishing and caught a 4-pound, 13-ounce trout, 23-1/2 inches long. 9/28/97 a 25-pound, 44-inch striper had Kevin McLevedge all smiles. 11/12/97 Adam Cahill brought in a 15-inch pickerel from Hunter's Pond. 9/29/90 Barry Getto used a live eel to capture a 37-pound bass in Cohasset Harbor.

9/29/88 a 44-pound striper snacked on Jim Dresser's Atom swimmer. 11/13/88 Nick DiNardo weighed in a 5-pound largemouth from Aaron River Reservoir. 9/20/87 Bob D'Angelo used a chunk pogie to entice a 39-pound, 13-ounce bass to the hook. And then there was Bob McKay's 63-pound mammoth from the Gut.

10/11/91 Troy Chatterton was hooked after helping John Litchfield weigh in a Peggotty Beach 39-pounder. 9/23/91 Kevin Jenkins had a great summer topped by 23-pound, 2-ounce striper that gobbled his seaworm off First Cliff. 10/26/91 a 4-pound, 9-ounce largemouth took Kevin Williams' spinnerbait at Greenbush. 9/26/91 a 15-pound, 9-ounce blue slammed Dan Sullivan's Windcheater popper in Hingham Harbor.

11/3/91 Dave Doyle weighed in a 5-pound, 7-ounce Lily Pond largemouth. 10/4/91 Brian Kenerson and Jeff Adams hooked a pair of 43-inch stripers in Plymouth Harbor. 9/26/91 Peter Madge remembers weighing in a 48-inch bass from outside Cohasset Harbor. 11/10/92 Matt Peck and Brian Long nailed a big Lily Pond pickerel on a shiner. 10/3/92 a shiner was the bait also for Ben Bornstein's Lily Pond largemouth. 10/3/92 Caroline Carter hauled in a 10-pound, 4-ounce blue and went in search of a guy to help filet it. 10/8/93 was a banner day for Joe Dinezio and his 52-inch bass. 9/25/93 Ted Abbadessa caught a 26-pound striper in the Brewsters. 9/25/98 Steve Ide brought home a 14-pound blue that took his red and white Rapala. Anthony Deicicchi was out the same day and captured a 12-pound bluefish on a bucktail lure. 11/30/93 Jeff Adams and Larry Griffin limited out on State Forest trout. Freshwater and saltwater both.

On 10/13/91 Peter convinced Linda to go fishing and she got the big one, a 2-pound, 10-ounce pickerel. 10/30/88 Keith Goff used a shiner to bag a 4-pound, 13-ounce bass at Aaron River Reservoir. 10/3/87 Sean Galligan weighed in a 5-1/2 pound largemouth from Lily. 10/15/88 Brian Kimpton was into the cod at the H-Buoy. 12/12/90 Brian Litchfield used a shiner to fool a late bass from Lily. 10/15/88 John Wilson used a Rapala to get a dinnersized largemouth from Furnace Pond.

Eric Aronson went out 10/18/92 and came back with a 5-pound, 11-ounce hawg from the Beechwood River. 11/15/92 John Weatherbee also used a shiner to bring in his 5-pound, 11-ounce bass. 10/26/87 Dave Terry had a career day with a 2-pound trout and a 5-pound northern from Gull Pond. 11/15/94 a 4-pound, 2 and a 5-pound 4-ounce largemouth rewarded Jeff Bowen of Scituate at Aaron River Reservoir. 10/9/95 Jim Wescott bagged a 43-inch striper at Smith Rock on a tube and worm rig. 10/11 and 10/16/95 off the Gurnet a 50-inch and a 51-inch striper for Jeff Adams on consecutive trips.

I would say late season fishing is pretty good. I think Pete Flaherty, Peter Abbott and Joe Durkin would all agree as they weighed in stripers this week. 9/21/98 Ted Abbadessa weighs in a 29-pound striper, 40 inches, 27-inch girth. Ted agrees.

Catch one that's hard to carry!

Ryan Tufts struggles mightily with a bass he caught while vacationing this summer on Nantucket.

Cohasset man helps in AIDS ride

Cambridge letter carrier Bob Libertore and Fenway letter carriers Harry Judd, Lisa Monzione and Robin Smith of the U.S. Postal Service, joined 3,000 other bikers on a 275-mile trek from Boston's Northeastern University to New York.

The ride is spread out over three days and will challenge the stamina of even the best athlete as they try to conquer the hilly terrain of Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York. Many riders are motivated by the memories of friends and loved ones lost to AIDS and they draw their strength from these memories. Teams made up of volunteers will be on hand along the way to offer water, medical assistance and moral support.

No strangers to volunteering, last year Monzione, Smith and Judd, a Cohasset resident, volunteered to help park bicycles in a pen during the ride. That experience motivated them to take the challenge and they agreed to ride this year.

Each rider has to be totally committed and must raise at least $1,600 to participate. However, the expenses don't stop there. The riders are also responsible for providing their own equipment such as a suitable bike, helmets, padded shorts and seats, pedals, shoes and water bottles. This year the Postal Service provided their team with bicycle shirts that are made with a special material designed to wick moisture away from the body to help maintain a more comfortable riding level for the riders.

Many hours of training and conditioning have been logged by these dedicated riders. Each month, the committee would send out a schedule suggesting various training rides. One ride was actually 84 miles long coupled with oppressive 90 degree heat. "We had the wind in our faces the whole time. It felt like we weren't even moving!" recalls Judd. The postal team has also trained by taking back to back rides to build up their endurance.

The Tanqueray American AIDS rides have raised almost $90 million since 1994. The committee helps the riders with fund-raising, and money also comes by means of donations from family and friends as well as through word of mouth. "I was at the dump and one of my neighbors came up to ask me about the ride," said Judd. "We talked for a few minutes and then she said, "Who do I make the check out to?"

Monzione, Smith, Judd and Libertore look forward to the people along the way to give them moral support. "When we are actually doing the ride, people will be cheering us, and that will give us more oomph to go. It's going to be awesome!" said an enthusiastic Monzione. We wish them the best of luck as they ride into the sunset.

Cohasset Little League tryouts are this Sunday

The Cohasset Youth Baseball Association (CYBA) has announced that Sunday, Sept. 27, at 3 p.m. at Barnes Field on North Main Street, it will conduct the 1999 season major league tryouts.

Youngsters who will be either 10, 11 or 12 years old on or before July 31, 1999 and are not currently playing at the major league level, are invited and encouraged to participate in this once-a-year tryout event.

Each participant will be asked to perform in a series of basic baseball skill tasks which include hitting, running, throwing and fielding fly and ground balls. Each participant will be scored on a 1-5 point basis in each of the five noted areas of performance.

Three coaches representing each of the existing six major league teams (18 total) will perform the evaluation exercise. Each of the major league teams' three scores will be consolidated and added in with the other five teams' average score in order to obtain a participant's total score. The quantity of departing 12-year-olds, relocation and other circumstances will be the basis for determining the abundance of openings in the major league for the 1999 season.

Shortly after the conclusion of the tryout program, CYBA managers and coaches will meet to select those ballplayers who, by virtue of their attained score, complemented by the quantity of league openings, are eligible to be drafted. These tryouts are only for 10-, 11- and 12-year-olds who conform to the Little League age requirements and birth year (Aug. 1 to July 31).

All those who are eligible should plan to attend as this is the only opportunity to try out. Applications are available at town hall or can be completed upon arrival at Barnes Field. Participants are requested to arrive at 2:30 p.m. to facilitate the registration process.

There is no money required for this exercise but each participant should being a baseball glove, hat and long pants. Cleats are optional. No other attire/equipment is required. All candidates will receive notification from the CYBA within three days following the tryouts. Parents are welcome to watch this event which generally is expected to last approximately 90 minutes (4:30 p.m.)

Rain date is Sunday, Oct. 4.

Any questions regarding these tryouts can be forwarded to Dan Leahy (383-1005), Mark DeGiacomo (383-6413) or Bob Morgan (383-3265).

By the way... As it usually is with legends, these two are a bit cloudy. As for pointing: It was the third game of the 1932 World Series; the Yankees playing at Chicago's Wrigley Field. There was no love lost between the teams – and the Cubs were taunting Ruth as he came to bat in the fifth inning. The Babe took two strikes and then held up two fingers – as if to say: "That's two!" And then he gestured out toward the mound – or maybe the center field bleachers. He hit the next pitch 500 feet into those bleachers – the longest home run ever hit at Wrigley Field. Ruth both denied and affirmed that he had indeed pointed. The acclaimed sportswriter Grantland Rice said that Ruth did point – did, indeed, "call the shot." [Source: New York Yankees home page: http://www.yankees.com/ruth.trib/br.story.p4.html] As for the candy bar: The Curtiss Candy Co. in Chicago claimed that the Baby Ruth bar was named for Ruth Cleveland, the daughter of President Grover Cleveland: she was the first baby ever born in the White House. (Ruth Cleveland tragically died of diphtheria at age 13.) However, many people (including the Babe himself) thought the candy bar was named after George Herman Ruth, the Yankee slugger. Lagrotteria helps with new Teen Center's evolution

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

"It's going to be great, if you can picture it," said Jen Lagrotteria, pointing around the cinder-block structure that will house the new Teen Center by mid-September.

"Here's where the snack bar will be," she said. "The kids voted to keep the wood beam ceiling exposed. They also voted on my office area—I'm going to be 'wire-fenced in,' she laughed.

Teens from the center have done most of the construction through the summer months, knocking down walls and cleaning the interior. Seniors Tony Bramblett and Jamie Butman have been in charge of the work.

A stretch of mustard-colored paint has been applied to the wall near the front door for consideration; the jury is still out on this one.

"Since they do all the work for this place, they can paint it black if they want," said Lagrotteria, adding with a worried expression, "but they wouldn't do that."

A visit to police chief Brian Noonan six months ago led the young woman to this place. She was in search of volunteer work and Noonan sent her to recreation director Jack Worley.

Jen Lagrotteria pitches in at "The Garage," the new teen center in the town parking lot.

Since then, Lagrotteria has worked with Worley, supervising the Teen Center at Independence Hall for about two to three nights a week.

When the new fiscal year began on July 1, a $15,000 salary was set aside to hire an assistant for Worley. Lagrotteria was a natural shoe-in.

Other changes included co-joining the Teen Center board and the teen Center financial accounts into the Youth Resources Committee, now the sole administrative body for youth activities in town. Moneys from fund-raising activities now are directed to new the committee, cutting down on donators' confusion as to what organization people are contributing to.

The old Teen Center pulled in about 10 teens on a weekend night, and cost $800 to $1,000 to operate with insurance costs included.

"The Independence Hall Teen Center will probably be handed over to the town at the end of September when the new teen center garage is 'ready to go'," said Worley. "One of the problems with keeping the old center open is that we still have to pay a substantial monthly insurance bill. We didn't really get in there until the end of August and we have to have the primary things done—plumbing and the floors, in particular—before we can get the kids in there."

Lagrotteria, whose appointment as youth coordinator expanded her responsibilities to include setting up the new Teen Center, puts in extra hours at the rose-colored garage. (That is, when she isn't working at her family's Shoe Market store or preparing for starting on her master's program at Wheelock College this fall.)

With school on now, Lagrotteria will venture forth from the garage to draw in more kids.

"Jennifer an I met with Mark Haddad recently," said Worley. "We decided that the focal point of her job will be development of programs for the garage. She and I will work together on those sorts of things. You need someone riding in the trenches with the kids. So Jen will go to the schools to register them. She'll have to do a lot of leg work, but we've done this sort of thing before and it may be the best way to draw the kids to the program."

The "Garage Project", as it is known to those most involved in it, is a cooperative undertaking, with many of the teens who will attend the finished meeting place actively involved in its re-vamping. Eventually, up to 100 kids will be able to fill the building when electrical re-wiring, painting and plumbing is complete.

The original Independence Hall Teen Center was also the result of the combined interest of many. "A group of parents started it four years ago and it's been running ever since," said Lagrotteria.

"The Youth Resources Committee is made up of parents, recreation department members and kids. The parents are great and have been coming up with ideas for fund-raising."

Other donations have come in the form of gratis materials from Hancock Paint, Hingham Lumber, Glastonbury Abbey, W.B. Mason Office Supplies and others.

Several weeks ago, a check came in from American Airlines, made out to the new Teen Center in the amount of $2,000. The check was a payment of sorts for filming at the town center. Haddad had suggested the donation to the airline company.

An exchange of inter-town services is also hoped for. Worley imagines a center where teens can meet up with each other, use computers, receive tutoring from the schools, hold dances, and attended academic and cultural seminars on music. "Maybe seniors can help with tutoring and maybe volunteers can help the seniors plan for college," said Lagrotteria.

The center will be open until 7 or 8 p.m. on weekends and two to three week nights so that the younger teens are not excluded from activities there. Also, the kids can still have

Local Coastsweep beach cleanup is a success

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

As part of the 11-year-old statewide beach cleanup organized by Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management (MCZM), Philip Lehr of Cohasset and Betsy Harling of Hingham served as Coastsweep leaders in their respective towns last Saturday. As such, they were responsible for leading a group effort to remove and itemize debris left behind on their town's beach from marine traffic, sewage run off and visitors.

MCZM, a state agency, has been in the business of managing the Commonwealth's coastal resources while promoting responsible economic development here.

Reports sent off to the Center for Marine Conservation in Washington allow Coastsweep to identify the sources of marine refuse and solve the problem.

"When we find out where the debris is coming from, we can put pressure on the people that are causing it," said Robin Lacey of MCZM. "For instance, if it's coming from marine traffic, we can lobby to get something done about that. Some of the garbage gets washed down from sewer drains. Sometimes it's not easy to tell which is which."

Sept. 19 is the official International Coastal Cleanup day which began with a 10 a.m. kickoff clean-up at Revere Beach. Hundreds of volunteers pitched in on the effort.

Sponsors, such as BankBoston, Brita, the MBTA, WBOS-92.9 FM, the Center for Marine Conservation, the Urban Harbors Institute/U.Mass Boston and the New England Aquarium, among others, helped to bring the event forth.

While the Revere gathering was a large one, many communities made out fine with a small group.

"It went well," opined Boy Scout master Lehr, of his 26-member group's efforts. "Most of my volunteers were scouts from troop 28 of Cohasset. There were also some Cohasset residents—a young couple and some women that came over with some school-age girls."

The two-hour task netted 143 pieces of individual pieces of plastic, 114 beverage cans, 74 food wrappers and 96 cigarette butts. Also removed from Bassing Beach was a lawn mower, six wire lobster traps, a truck leaf spring (from the rear of a vehicle), a whiskey keg, a computer circuit board, and an engine carburetor.

"The lawn mower was pretty incredible," said Lehr. "What we don't want to find is hypodermic needles, and we did find one last year."

For that reason, all volunteers wear closed-toe shoes and keep their latex gloves on. The younger participants are also told to let the adults know where they've spotted glass or a needle so that they can retrieve it instead.

Participants are supplied by the state with latex gloves, trash bags and collection cards allow easy categorization of items. While one person walks along placing refuse into his trash bag, another walks alongside and tallies off whatever is found.

The Bassing Beach party extended this year to include the jetty towards Scituate.

"We did twice the area than we time to make it to the library which closes at 9 p.m.

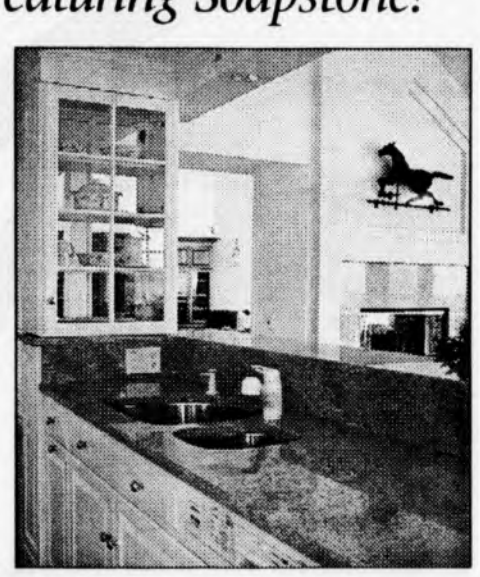
Lagrotteria wants the teens to have fun at the new center. I'd like the kids to be less concerned with fundraising so that when I say 'whale watch' or 'let's have a dance,' they don't automatically think about fund-raisers," she said.

Lagrotteria would like to see the center become a common meeting place, too. "It's a community project so I'd lake the community to use it," she said. "I'd love for senior citizens to come and enjoy the center while the kids are off at school."

Worley has specific plans for the teens who will attend the center. "It should provide an atmosphere where they can go to catch up with one another or do other things we'll provide for them. We're hoping to set up some kind of tutoring volunteerism, computers and dances. The focus wouldn't be just recreational. A lot would also be academic and cultural; seminars on various topics like art, music and that sort of thing."

While the old teen Center primarily serves grades seven and eight, the new center will go up through grade3 12. With current concerns about teens running amuck in Cohasset village, many hope that the new center will offer local youths a better place to spend their time.

"I think the Teen Center will help," said Lagrotteria, who majored in special ed. "The teen years are a time of social, intellectual and emotional growth," she explained. "Your curiosity grows in your teen years but there's not a lot for kids to do here. If you can integrate their needs and curiosity with the community—parents and school—there is no way it can go wrong."



Lagrotteria notes that trouble with adolescents roaming about downtown has been going on since she was a teen. "It really does take a village. Instead of throwing up their arms, why don't people throw them in together? This is a small town. If it could work anywhere, it can work here."

MediaOne cable-TV contract options aired members who currently cannot be seen by home viewers.

Selectman Tom Callahan pointed out that sometimes the audio does not work and viewers cannot hear the proceedings.

Indeed, that evening's discussion was a jumpy, lined image transmitted to home televisions. Both Russo and Haddad, at different points during the evening, were unsuccessful in re-tuning the video.

Other requests from Haddad included a voice-over option for town officials to address residents on the local cable channel in case of emergency, a cable drop at the senior center so that residents there could receive cable and more video equipment for town hall so that other events there with conflicting schedules could be recorded.

McElroy is expected to put together more information about needed audio-visual equipment for the schools.

Seniors' concerns centered mainly on discounts which, though offered in other towns, has not been enjoyed in Cohasset as it once was earlier on in the contract.

Harborview resident and housing authority member Betty Grassie complained that she has sent out two or three letters to MediaOne on town letterhead but none were answered. "I saw the letters and copied them for Betty," said Haddad. "The letters were on town letterhead."

"I've been at Harborview nine years and used to have a low rate," said Grassie. "My bill got up to $35 per month and so I canceled Cable 2. But it just keeps going up. What more can we do but write letters and come to you?"

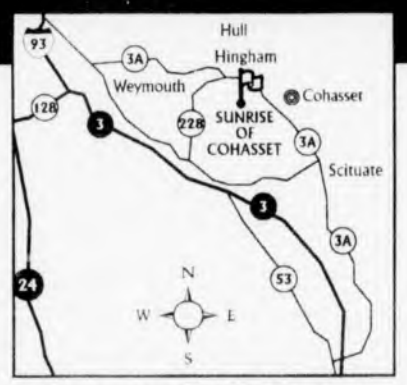
Russo explained that cable discounts for seniors and others, included disabled war veterans, are not mandated by license but are negotiated town to town. Some of the lower discounts mentioned by Grassie and other Harborview residents during the meeting were still offered from old contracts or had ceased to be honored.

"I don't feel that a 10 percent discount is enough," said selectman Dianne Sullivan. "No less than 25 percent seems to be a reasonable discount."

Selectman Nan Roth noted that Cohasset pays higher rates for cable service than many other towns. Russo explained that rates are derived from federal information on demographics and media income.

One more complaint lodged by Grassie was about the unfair marketing tactics of a number of MediaOne's salesmen to promote their "smart Box" earlier this year.

According to Russo, employees who continued with aggressive sales tactics after being reprimanded were dismissed from the company.



Grassie also wanted to know just who exactly is on the cable committee.

"I was 'cable guy' for the town," said Hillman, who at one time served as the entire cable committee until his position with the town's counsel firm made his service with the committee inappropriate. "We had no quorum for a year, though we did have meetings. No one was willing to serve," he said. "Anyone who would like to attend a meeting is welcome to attend."

A welcome question was Sullivan's "What number do I call if I want to get service?" "1-888-MediaOne," was Russo's quick response.

Homes publication debuts

everyone's best interest to really understand what's happening and South Shore Homes should be an important interpreter of that."

The publication is being dropped at more than 1,000 locations with more than 30,000 copies available. For a complete listing of where to pick up South Shore Homes, check out the advertisement on Page 18 in South Look, or check out the advertisement in the front section of today's paper for specific locations in your town.

Area boards of realtors have been showing their support for the publication. At several meetings with local associations, Realtors have been accepting and encouraging of the publication and its usefulness for home buyers.

"It's going to be a great tool for Realtors and buyers," said David Drinkwater, president of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors and partner in Coastal Countryside Properties in Cohasset. "In this busy market the old tools we were using weren't timely enough to get the word on the street on what properties will be available."

Realtors say the weekly open house listings and maps will be critical for buyers.

"I remember when I first started talking to realtors about the publication I would ask how many open houses occurred on a weekend on the South Shore and realtors would not have a clear idea," said Vandevanter. "Well now we will know for sure and I think the list will help everyone focus on this wonderful place to live.

"This is a partnership with realtors throughout the South Shore. Realtors are sharing with us this valuable information — all the open houses — and we, in turn are creating the most user-friendly format imaginable — maps. Readers who are motivated buyers will find the publication an absolutely necessary tool. And sellers will want to get the free marketing," he added.

Daisy V. Souther

D[redacted]y V. (Veinot) Souther, 87, of Cohasset, a hom[redacted]aker, died Monday, Sept. 14, at home following a brief illness.

Mrs. Souther was born in Hemford, Nova Scotia. She lived in Cohasset since 1930.

Wife of the late Kenneth Souther, she leaves three sons, William O. Souther and Peter R. Souther, both of Cohasset, and Kenneth E. Souther of Scituate; a grandchild, and two great-grandchildren all of Scituate.

A funeral service was held Thursday, Sept. 17, at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations in Mrs. Souther's memory may be made to the South Shore Visiting Nurse Association, 100 Bay State Dr. Braintree 02185 or the American Lung Association, 25 Spring St., Walpole 02081.

Marvin H. Raffe

Marvin H. Raffe, 75, of Cohasset died Aug. 20 at Scituate Life Care, Scituate, after a long battle with cancer.

Born in Boston, son of the late Max and Anna (Nitenson) Raffe, Mr. Raffe was raised and educated in Brookline. He was a graduate of Brookline High School. He also lived in Brockton for 27 years before moving to Cohasset where he lived for 28 years.

Mr. Raffe was a jazz pianist all his life. He taught thousands of people throughout Massachusetts. He also played with the Erskine Hawkins Band, Jimmy McPartland Group, Vaughn Monroe Orchestra and at Ken's Copley Square and the Darbury Room.

He leaves his wife Rosalind F. (Farbush) Raffe of Cohasset; a daughter, Elizabeth Ward of Colo.; a sister, Sylvia Weissenger of Fla.; and several nieces and nephews.

A Memorial Service will be held Oct. 11 from 2 to 4 p.m., at the South Shore Arts Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset, made the arrangements.

Donations in Mr. Raffe's memory may be made to the New England Home for Little Wanderers, 68 Fargo St., Boston, MA 02210.

Theresa S. Oddi

Theresa S. (Goldsmith) Oddi of Cohasset died Aug. 25.

She leaves her husband, Guido Oddi; two daughters, Judith Leahy of Dorchester and Patricia Oddi of South Boston; a brother and sister, Kenneth Goldsmith and Madeline Blair, both of Arizona; four grandchildren, four great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews, including Rolanda Duschene. She was the mother of the late Peggy Gallagher.

A funeral service was held Aug. 30 in Keaney Funeral Home, Dorchester. Burial was in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Donations may be made to the American Heart Association Fund, 20 Speen St., Framingham 01701.

Laura A. Leonard

Laura A. Leonard

Laura A. Leonard, 85, of Cohasset, died Sept. 5, at Cohasset Knoll in Cohasset following a brief illness.

Ms. Leonard, daughter of the late Joseph L. And Grace (Ferreira) Leonard, was a lifelong resident of Cohasset. She was a graduate of Cohasset High School, Boston University, and Boston University graduate school where she received her Ph.D. in English.

Ms. Leonard worked as a English teacher for 39 years in Cohasset and retired in 1974.

She was a hostess at Kimball's and Hugo's Lighthouse, summers from the late 1930s to the mid 1950s.

Ms. Leonard leaves three nieces, Patricia Litz of Scituate, Ann Westfield of Plymouth and Susan Leonard of Cohasset; a sister-in-law, Ann Leonard of Cohasset; two grandnieces and a great-grandnephew. She was the sister of the late John Leonard.

A funeral Mass was held Sept. 9, at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset. Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset.

Donations in Ms. Leonard's memory may be made to the Laura A. Leonard Scholarship Fund, c/o Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, 48 South Main St., Cohasset.

Local Coastsweep beach cleanup is a success

ever had before our six years of participation," said Lehr. "That area doesn't collect as much trash as the inside of Bassing Beach, but it still gets trash there.

One reason the group was able to cover twice the range they've normally covered may be that the Cohasset Conservation Trust began non-camping rules this past year.

The 1,436 items found this year is only slightly higher in number than the 1,399 items found last year. Factor in that the group covered a two-mile area, double the amount covered in the past, and the success of the trust's efforts in the area are apparent.

"The non-camping rule just started this year and the numbers sort of justify it," said Lehr.

One of the benefits of the annual volunteer effort is found in itemized accounts. A list called the "Dirty Dozen" from last year included cigarette butts, plastic food bags and wrappers, plastic pieces, foamed plastic pieces, glass pieces, caps and lids, paper pieces, plastic rope, straws, plastic beverage bottles, glass beverage bottles and metal beverage cans.

Cigarette butts comprised 33 percent of the items found in 1997. Beach-goers and storm water overflow from city streets and waterways are responsible for this most frequently found item. The cigarette's plastic filters remain on the beach for many years. That is, if they haven't been swallowed by wildlife that sometimes mistake the discarded item for food.

Releasing the information to the public creates a greater awareness. For instance, fewer discarded oil and lube bottles have been found in the past few years now that more people understand that the small amount of oil present in the bottles can do harm to marine life. Also, the remaining oil can be recycled.

ED REFORM: 5 Years Later

The 1993 Education Reform Act changed the rules for local schools in every community in Massachusetts. In a year-long series of reports beginning this week, Community Newspaper Company, which publishes the Cohasset Mariner, will explore the impact this key piece of legislation has had on local schools in the five years since it was signed into law.

Suburban schools struggle with Education Reform

Enrollment increases and spending caps put schools in a pinch

By Chris Szechenyi and Eric Bauer
CNC STAFF WRITERS

It began with a bold promise: billions of dollars in new state aid would provide every public school student in Massachusetts with a consistent level of education, whether they lived in a wealthy suburb or a threadbare urban neighborhood.

Five years later, a coalition of suburban schools is up in arms over the results of the Education Reform Act of 1993. Instead of bringing equity to school funding, they say it has left them struggling to cope with increasing student enrollment, caps on local property taxes and an inadequate slice of the new funding.

Private ways, a prickly issue

Effects of accepting roads debated

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Selectmen are taking the cautious approach when recommending which private ways in town should be accepted as town roads.

The more town roads or "public ways" — the more state money comes back to the town each year to take care of them in the form of Chapter 90 highway funds.

But selectmen are grappling with whether the benefit of the extra money outweighs the possible downside of opening the door to more development.

They also fear they could be setting a dangerous precedent on road construction standards that could be used as a cudgel over the town's head. In other words, if a road is accepted that doesn't meet subdivision standards, a developer might not have to construct a new road to meet the higher standard.

"We are dealing with a delicate issue here. We have Pandora's Box on the table."

— Planning board chairman Al Moore

At Tuesday's meeting, selectmen agreed to defer to the Oct. 26 special town meeting recommendations on accepting Short Street, Oak Street, Norfolk Road, Forest Notch, Reservoir Road and Rocky Lane as public ways.

They withdrew articles — which are items of business before town meeting — proposing acceptance of Whitney Woods Lane, Riverview Drive, Bates Lane, Lantern Lane and Locust Road because of development worries. Poring over local maps, selectmen said these roads could provide future access to the undeveloped land which they abut.

Under the town by-laws, a developer only needs 50 feet of frontage to access a subdivision off a town road and under state law, a property owner who has frontage on a public way can, as a matter of right, use it as an entrance to a subdivision.

The selectmen's decision left the Private Ways Committee in a quandary on how to proceed. The committee, which has studied the private ways issue for the better part of three years, came up with a priority list of roads based on their condition so the town would not have to spend a lot on repairs once they became public ways. The Norfolk County engineers subse-

Scituate Hill water tank deal possible

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Water Commissioner John K. McNabb Jr. has hammered out the details of a possible solution to placing a new water tank on Scituate Hill in a location favorable to both the town and the owner of the land, J. Michael Susi and Sons. McNabb detailed the plans with the caveat that there are still some details that must be worked out for the deal to receive approval by the town and Susi.

"I met with John Michael Susi Sr. and discussed our need for a tank and our need to go to Scituate Hill," McNabb said. "The water commission decided it was better to go to Scituate Hill than fight the neighbors and the ZBA over Bear Hill."

The saga of the search for a location on Scituate Hill began last year when a group of residents vehemently opposed a plan by the water commission to build a second water tank on Bear Hill. Currently, there is one tank on Bear Hill, but the town needs a second structure to provide adequate fire fighting reserves, to create redundancy in the system, and to clean the existing tank to improve water quality, taste and odor. Residents living in sight of Bear Hill felt it was unfair for the town to make them look at two structures, suggesting that the town look at Scituate Hill as an alternative.

The current plan would place the tank on the back part of the hill away from Route 3A. Susi

Register to vote

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or election day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections

The last day to register to vote for the State Election Nov. 3 is Wednesday, Oct. 14, and the last day to register for the Special Town Meeting is Friday, Oct. 16. The Clerk's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. on both these dates. Mail-in registration forms are available from the Town Clerk's office, Cohasset Post Office and Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Political signs up too early

Selectmen are concerned that residents are breaking the town by-law restricting political signs to the two weeks before an election.

The state election isn't until Nov. 3, but dozens of political signs are popping up all over town.

"As I drive all over town, there are political signs everywhere," said Selectman Nan Roth. "I rather liked with when the only signs were in the two weeks before an election."

Selectman Tom Callahan said it was a "free speech issue" and disagreed with his fellow board members.

"What's the big deal, so what?" he said about the proliferation of signs.

But Selectman Diane Sullivan said the by-law should be adhered to.

"A lot consider the signs to be a blight," she said.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he would check into the status of the by-law, which also requires the signs be placed a certain distance from the road.

No parking signs to stay

Despite a plea for abutters, selectmen won't take down the "No Parking Either Side" signs on North Main Street near the end of Jerusalem Road.

Suzanne and Geoff Filby, 134 N. Main St., asked selectmen to remove the no parking signs. The Filbys said in normal circumstances there will be no street parking, but on rare occasions cars must park in the road.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris wanted to reconsider the issue out of fairness. She pointed out that the affected residents did not have the benefit of a public hearing on the matter.

"These people were never notified until the signs went up in front of their house," McMorris said.

Selectman Merle Brown said no public hearing was needed because the traffic committee had taken the matter up and made its recommendation which was adopted by selectmen. Both discussions occurred in public meetings.

Brown said the highway superintendent, police chief and safety officer agreed the signs were a good idea.

Library proposal not supported

Selectmen voted not to recommend the plan to use the old Osgood School as a new town library at the Oct. 26 Special Town Meeting . Library trustees are seeking money to pay for the design phase of their proposal to construct at new 14,000 square foot library in the former elementary school. Instead, selectmen will recommend the town allow them to sell the school building to a private developer who will construct condominiums for senior citizens at the site.

Condition of World War I Memorial

Henry C. Drewes of Harwich wrote to selectmen complaining about the condition of the World War I Memorial on the town common.

"I recently had occasion to drive to Boston at a leisurely pace and went through your beautiful town," Drewes wrote. "I stopped at the memorial to World War I veterans on the village green, as my father left for World War I while a resident in [redacted] hasset."

Drewes went on to say he was disappointed in the deteriorating condition of the memorial.

"Moisture has invaded the glass covered list to the extend that several veterans' names are all but obliterated, including that of my father," he said.

Selectman Merle Brown said he would bring the issue up to the local veterans groups.

Religious observance coincides with camp

Several members of the town's Jewish community told school committee member Patricia Martin that the scheduled trip to Camp Bournedale coincided with Yom Kippur, the most sacred holiday in the Jewish calendar, which begins a Sept. 29 at sundown.

Yom Kippur, the "day of atonement," is marked by 24 hours of fasting and prayer.

Martin suggested at last week's school board meeting that religious observances should be kept in mind when scheduling special events for students in the future.

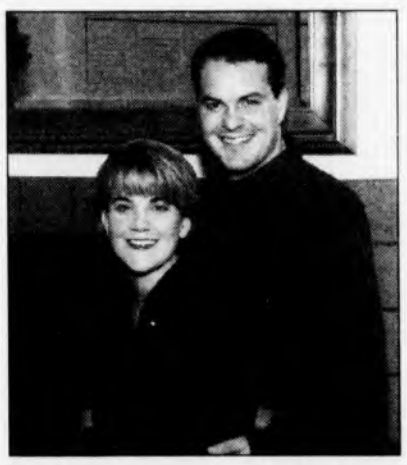
There is a Difference.



As you begin to make your decisions for the General Election, I want you to know that I believe my opponent, Mary Jeanette Murray, has served our district well. Her focus on constituent services is something I pledge to continue if elected as your State Representative. I promise to be a full-time Representative, and my first priority will be to help the residents of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

Unlike my opponent, however, I believe that a Representative can deliver excellent constituent services and at the same time be a strong advocate for our district on important issues like the education of our children, reducing the burden of taxes and water rates, and making our neighborhoods safer. Our Representative must fight for our district on issues which impact all of us on a daily basis, and make sure that we have a strong voice advocating for us on Beacon Hill.

During the next five weeks, I hope to talk with you directly about these issues, and earn your vote on November 3rd. If you have any questions, please feel free to call me at 741-9998. Thank you.

Portrait painter brings life to the canvas

Capturing magic in her art

By Kay Linnehan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

At the end of the 19th century, Mary Cassatt, perhaps the greatest American woman painter, then at the height of her artistic powers, was described by her hometown newspaper, the Philadelphia Public Ledger, as an art student, the sister of the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and owner of the world's smallest Pekinese dog.

Today, at the end of the 20th century, even though 97 percent of the paintings displayed in major museums were done by men, women artists are at last emerging from the shadows of neglect. They are speaking with a creative language that rises from other wellsprings, so that their work mirrors both their femininity and a completeness they find in the beautiful.

> "Even as a very young child, I'd try to draw the illustrations in my storybooks. And I'm still learning, making the pieces of this great puzzle called painting fall into place."
> — Laurie Borden

One such woman is South Shore portrait painter Laurie Borden. Acclaimed by critics and the public alike, Borden paints with a womanly sense of intimacy even as her disciplined technique and the rigorous honesty with which she approaches her work characterize the master painter.

On a cloudless, pristine morning, such thoughts do not intrude on Borden in her sun-drenched studio in the Christopher Gallery, Cohasset, as she repositions an easel so that light seems to vibrate across the surface of a portrait-in-progress — that of five-year old Marade, who sits happily engrossed in the orange and white kitten she gently cradles.

Charcoal sketch of Matthew, age 5, by Laurie Borden.

Satisfied at last with the play of light on color, Borden turns to her visitor and says, "I'm after the mystical connection between this little girl and the kitten. It's magic, and I work to make sure it comes through." Indeed, even though the painting is far from finished, innocence, love and life beckon to us from the canvas.

"This is what I always wanted to do," Borden confides. "It must be in the genes. My father created great dioramas, one of which is in the Smithsonian. My mother's greatest gift was the encouragement she gave to our gifts. Her enthusiasm was the soil that let me flower creatively," she said. "Even as a very young child, I'd try to draw the illustrations in my storybooks. And I'm still learning, making the pieces of this great puzzle called painting fall into place."

Borden credits her father-in-law for encouraging her to do portraits.

"I took classes at the Cohasset (South Shore) Art Center with Clement Micarelli (everybody calls him 'Mic')," Borden recalled. "He got me to be serious about portraiture. I went to see his work at Artist's Son Gallery, loved what I saw, and had to find out how he did it.

"I kept coming back for another look, then another look, and ended up marrying his son Domenic, who owns the gallery. After that, I worked with Dom in the gallery, studied other artists' work, and painted what made me happy, which are children and animals," she said. "Then in 1989 I got serious enough about my own work to begin taking commissions. Right now I have 16 of them waiting."

Photography and sketches help Borden with her portrait work.

"Work on a painting begins," she said, "when I meet and observe my subjects. It's almost impossible to make a child or an animal hold a pose long enough to paint from life, so I take photographs, lots of them. From these I make preliminary sketches, which the client and I approve together. I want to give the client a sense of the size and feel of what the final work will look like. Then I paint from both the sketches and the photos."

"I love capturing my subjects in their favorite settings, even out of doors, if that's where they're best defined. I want my people to leap from the canvas," Borden addded.

She selects a brush from an array before her and once again becomes absorbed in capturing with pigment on canvas the click of the present moment in sync with the eternal rhythms of life.

A graduate of Weymouth South High School, Borden later studied at New England School of Design, The Art Institute of Boston and Massasoit College. While working in an advertising agency as a commercial illustrator, she got her first portrait commission, a painting of the boss' dog.

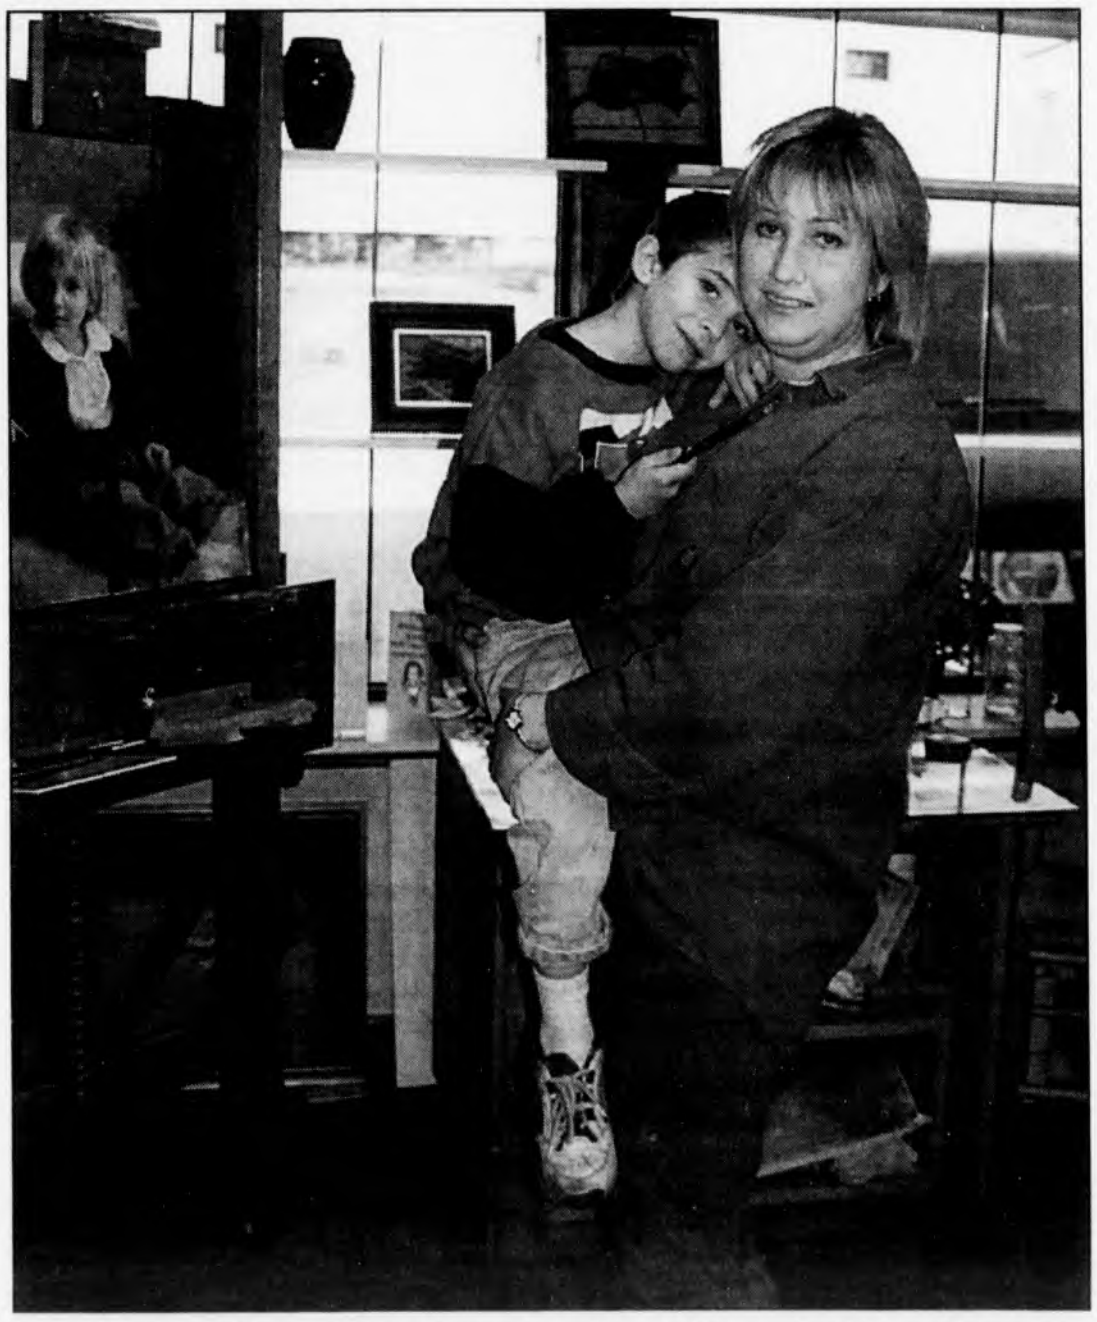
To this day, the illustrator's strong sense of design remains evident in her work. She acknowledges with joy that the birth of her son Christopher deepened the already rich empathy she feels for her young subjects.

Even though Borden is immersed in her work as portrait artist with a year's worth of commissions waiting, she somehow squeezes in time to experiment with making traditional American quilts.

"They're wonderful examples of womanly love of hearth and home that speak to my love of color, harmony, and design."

She also is often involved in what has been called 'one of the great dramas of the kitchen' — the gentle art of baking homemade breads.

"Homemade bread, that peerless homely heritage that must not be smothered by 'store-bought'." Her schedule becomes even more hectic when she plans and hosts, together with her husband, Dom Micarelli, receptions at the Christopher Gallery. (Last year the Artist's Son Gallery was renamed in honor of Laurie and Dom's son Christopher.)



"Marade and Kitten," an oil on canvas, by painted by Laurie Borden.

With no little regret she admits her special personal project, a series of portraits of her son tentatively entitled, 'The many faces of Christopher' goes forward only on an 'as-time-permits-basis,' when he joins her in the studio after school and on weekends.

Borden's work hangs in numerous private collections. Together with prizes and popular choice awards in regional exhibits, she has received much critical acclaim.

Kay Linnehan is a freelance writer living on the South Shore, who is a Life Fellow of the World Literary Academy, Cambridge, England.

Education reform is mixed bag for the town

lation has been thus far.

The 1993 Education Reform Act was designed to bring equity to school financing, and while it has benefited the state's poorer schools, more well-heeled school districts have felt the brunt of increases in student enrollment, caps on local property taxes and minimal state aid.

The "foundation formula" is used by the state to determine how much state aid each school district gets. The formula takes into account, among other things, a town's "standard of effort," based on its property wealth, to tax local property owners to reach a budget goal set by the state (see related chart, page 13).

If taxing itself at that standard of effort fails to reach the school's budget goals, then the state makes up the difference. If a town is wealthy enough to surpass the budget goal, then the school gets minimal aid from the state — $100 per student this year.

Town accountant Michael Buckley said Cohasset has not been adversely affected by the act.

"Our district hasn't experienced significant enrollment growth that has put us in a financial pinch and our per pupil spending hasn't slipped," he said.

School Superintendent Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey would like to see the state kick in more money for schools in towns like Cohasset to take the burden off the local taxpayers.

"We are seeing some student growth and certainly, we wouldn't mind seeing the finances increase on the state side as well," he explained.

Overall, Malvey sees education reform as being beneficial in terms of the programs implemented under the law.

"There are a lot of things happening within the educational framework and we all benefit from that," he said.

Cohasset, which has a small school system, has not suffered from cutbacks in courses and enlargement of class sizes which has been the case for some other affluent towns under the five-year-old act.

"It's the lower and middle class communities that get the lion's share of the funds," said state senate president Thomas Birmingham, who helped craft the Education Reform Act. "That's no accident. That's by design."

Former school superintendent Stephen Hart, who oversaw Cohasset schools adoption of ed reform policy, explained that the benefits have been its emphasis on education as well as clearer guidelines on school curriculum. Hart, as well as Malvey, would like to see the schools receive more state dollars rather than need to rely so heavily on the town's tax base for school funding.

Accepting private ways, can be a prickly issue quently provided surveys of the roads in question as a public service.

"These were our best and brightest," said private ways chairman Ross Rosano. "Either they were the most recently built or are old roads that are in good shape."

But Planning Board Chairman Al Moore cautioned selectmen to move on carefully.

"We are dealing with a delicate issue here," he said. "We have Pandora's Box on the table."

Moore explained that while some of the streets are fully developed, others have open house lots which may back up to larger acreage creating the possibility of a big development the town hadn't planned on.

"I'm not saying we don't want any development," he said. "But we ought to realize that Cohasset has undeveloped land that (currently) has no frontage which we could be opening up."

Planning board member Bob Sturdy said there is case law showing the planning board can't require a developer to construct a road to any higher standard — which includes road construction and drainage — than that of accepted streets.

"Some smartie might come up and say you can't compel me to put in curb stones and a certain width," he said.

Because some of the roads in question do not meet subdivision standards, selectmen asked Town Manager Mark Haddad to ask town counsel for further clarification on the matter.

Moore, the planning board chairman, said the town must ask itself what is had to gain by accepting these roads.

"What do we get out of it?" he asked.

The town gets about $2,000 per year per mile of its public roadways in state money which can't be spent to maintain private ways. There were 12 miles of roads being considered for acceptance as public ways by selectmen this week. The town has received $330,000 in Chapter 90 funds over the past two years (the money comes in two-year allotments), Haddad said.

Town meeting will also be asked to appropriate $50,000 to help maintain the private ways in town.

EEE virus found in mosquitoes

The Eastern Equine Encephalitis Surveillance Program of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health informed the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee that for the first time this season EEE virus has been isolated from mosquitoes trapped in Lakeville Sept. 21.

"Avoid outdoor activity during peak hours of mosquito activity at dawn and dusk."

Because EEE virus has been found in mosquitoes, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health has advised residents of eastern and southeastern Massachusetts to take the following precautions:

"Avoid outdoor activity during peak hours of mosquito activity at dawn and dusk."

"If you must be outdoors when mosquitoes are active, wear long-sleeved shirts and pants. Use mosquito repellent that contains DEET and follow the directions on the label. Avoid using DEET concentrations above 10 to 15 percent on children.

"Take special care to cover up the arms and legs of children playing near swampy areas. Baby carriages and playpens used outdoors should be covered with mosquito netting.

"Repair and securely fasten all screens on the doors and windows of your home.

"Eliminate backyard mosquito breeding areas by preventing the collection of standing water in ditches, clogged gutters, tires, wheelbarrows and wading pools."

If you have further questions, call the Cohasset Board of Health at 383-4116 or Charles Gainor at 383-0498.

Landfill site assignment hearings are postponed

Legal negotiations going well, officials say

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The board of health voted last Tuesday to delay until Nov. 18 site assignment hearings for the Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) landfill. Health board Chairman Kevin Ulmer said the CHL sub-committee he chairs has made great progress toward the negotiation of a settlement of outstanding legal and environmental issues related to the landfill. The site assignment hearings were originally scheduled for Aug. 4, but have been delayed several times so the sub-committee could continue its closed-door negotiations. The site assignment is the chief approval that allows CHL to operate a landfill in town. The sub-committee is working with CHL to settle all outstanding legal issues, remediation matters and closure details.

Sub-committee member John K. McNabb Jr., who is representing the water commission, said the Nov. 18 date is significant because it was exactly one year ago on that same date in 1997 that CHL-owner Paul Barry admitted at a health board meeting to dumping material in Area IV-B, which is not approved for landfilling. McNabb said whatever the outcome of the negotiations by CHL and the sub-committee, site assignment hearings will take place.

"There will be hearings even if the negotiations go fine, and they are going very well," McNabb said. "It's very likely we will have an agreement by Nov. 18, and I think people will be very pleased with what we agree to. We still need hearings because you can't amend, change or rescind a site assignment without a hearing and there will be changes. People should assume there will be hearings."

Barry closed the facility on Thursday, July 2, saying that the landfill was pretty much out of space. The CHL sub-committee held its first meeting on July 1, in executive session only, just one day before CHL closed down. Six town officials make up the sub-committee: Ulmer, McNabb, selectmen Ronnie McMorris, former zoning board Chairman Mark DeGiacomo, and conservation committee Chairman Jeff Waal.

Previously, Ulmer said there is no timetable for the completion of the subcommittee's work. All lawsuits, legal actions and appeals have continued while the sub-committee tries to negotiate a settlement with CHL. The sub-committee has worked hard to reach an all-encompassing settlement which will address five unsettled court cases, wetlands damage, permit violations, illegal dumping, closure details, post-closure plans and other unresolved details.

Scituate Hill water tank deal possible would give the town one acre of land at no cost, help pay for pipes, and provide access to the tank for maintenance. In exchange, Susi would have the right to rent out the top of the tank for communications antennas and keep any revenues from such a lease.

"We told him [Susi] that we wanted the top of the hill, and he said 'If you want the top, you might as well take the whole thing'," McNabb said.

The water commission has the authority to initiate eminent domain proceedings and seize private land for water tanks, as long as it pays fair-market value for the property. The town would not be required to take the entire 62-acre parcel that Susi owns.

Susi plans to build either residential homes or an industrial facility at the very top of the hill, which overlooks the Atlantic Ocean. The tank relies on gravity to deliver water, so a higher location could mean a shorter, cheaper tank than the kind needed on a lower elevation. McNabb said the back parcel is 160-feet above mean sea level, about the same height as the top of Bear Hill, which is 158-feet above mean sea level, the minimum height the water commission needs for a second tank.

But an eminent domain taking would increase the cost of building a new tank. The town originally allocated $1.4 million two years ago to build a new two million gallon water tank on Bear Hill. After intense opposition from residents, town meeting approved an additional $200,000 last year to build a tank on Scituate Hill. McNabb said the water commission estimates the cost of the current plan at around $1.64 million, $40,000 more than the water commission has set aside for the tank.

McNabb said town counsel is examining the plan, which has not yet been approved by the water commission. If the plan is approved by the water commission, a contract would have to be drawn up and signed, and the ZBA would have to approve variances for the tank and any antennas. McNabb said the new tank could be built in about a year if all the hurdles are cleared.

Currently, the water commission plans to build a two million gallon concrete, ground-level water tank. McNabb said the water commissioners are exploring the possibility of building a steel tank instead, either a ground-level unit or an elevated unit on stilts. McNabb said a ground-level steel tank could be several hundreds of thousands of dollars cheaper than a concrete tank. An elevated unit would be more expensive, but the town could make up the cost without sacrificing water pressure by building a smaller tank. The smaller elevated tank would benefit from being raised higher off the ground than a ground-level tank, but there are additional costs associated with placing a huge water tank on steel stilts.

Noel Collins, a local businessman, originally worked in conjunction with Susi to try and find a location on Scituate Hill that gave the town free land in exchange for certain considerations, such as the support of the water commission to change the land from industrial to residential zoning. Collins told the water commission that the back parcel would not be available until Susi received approval for whatever project it chose for the site. McNabb said Susi's latest plans envision the land as the national headquarters for a major corporation.

Schools to take over crossing guard duties

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The school department will seek $6,500 to pay for crossing guards at the Deer Hill and new Osgood School driveway off Sohier Street.

In the past, Cohasset police have provided coverage in the morning and afternoon for youngsters crossing the road at Deer Hill and the old Osgood School off Ripley Road.

But that coverage was not always available because police assigned to the post are "on call" should an incident arise in another part of town.

Police Chief Brian Noonan wrote to then superintendent Stephen Hart last February with his concerns about leaving the school crossings unguarded when police are called away to respond to calls in their sectors.

He asked the school department to implement civilian school crossing guards for this school year.

However, no final plans were made.

"We're the only town that does this, so far as I know. I would totally support the school when they go before the advisory committee on this."

— Police Chief Brian Noonan

"Chief Noonan brought this to my attention and explained the issue came down to manpower," superintendent Dr. Edward "Ted" Malvey told the school committee last week.

In the past, town police provided coverage from 8:40 to 9:15 a.m. and 2:45 to 3:15 p.m. at the Osgood and from 8 to 8:30 a.m. and 2:25 to 2:40 p.m. at Deer Hill.

"We have a shore car and a highway car," Police Chief Brian Noonan explained. "The shore car would cover the old Osgood because it was in the shore area and the highway car would take care of the Deer Hill school. But with the new Osgood moving up behind Deer Hill, it would require the highway car to do both crossings, keeping our officer out of service from 8 to 9:15 a.m. and 2:25 to almost 3:15 p.m.

"It's unacceptable to keep a car off the road three hours out of an eight hour shift. Besides, whenever there was an emergency elsewhere, we'd have to leave," he said.

According to Noonan, Osgood secretary Ilene Colwill was always on the spot to pinch-hit when an officer had to leave for other business.

"She would be there for us in a heartbeat," he said. But, because the new school is situated at about 500-yards from Sohier Street, it would not be as easy for an officer responding to get someone down to cover the crossing.

"We can't predict when emergencies will occur," said Noonan. "We're the only town that does this, so far as I know. I would totally support the school when they go before the advisory committee on this."

During last week's school committee meeting, Malvey suggested hiring a crossing guard at an hourly rate of anywhere from $8 to $10 per hour, the average payment for crossing guards in neighboring towns.

"It's my recommendation that we go to the advisory committee," said Malvey. "I think we have a need for this. We have an obligation to go back to this issue—it's a town issue. These are our children."

According to Noonan, it should cost $6,500 to hire, outfit and pay for a crossing guard.

"Our officers, Lisa Matos and Shellee Peters, were very protective of the kids and the kids used to bring them presents," said Noonan. "It's a great job for somebody who is retired and wants to look out for the children."

For now, police will continue to provide coverage from 8:40 to 9 a.m. and 2:55 to 3:10 for Osgood pupils.

Gas main break on Black Rock Road

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Black Rock Road residents were evacuated from their homes Monday afternoon after a contractor accidentally struck a gas line there.

The call came into the station at 1:16 p.m.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln called Boston Gas which arrived with gas detectors to ascertain if residents' homes had affected by the leak. Evacuated residents were not permitted back in their homes until the residences were determined clear of danger.

A Hull firetruck came in to cover the Cohasset station, as both engines and additional firefighters were called to the scene at 93 Black Rock Road.

"It was relatively routine for us," said Fire Chief Nick Russo of the Hull Fire Department. "This is part of our mutual agreement with all the surrounding towns. Luckily for us, the day was otherwise uneventful in Hull and Cohasset."

The incident could not have been anticipated.

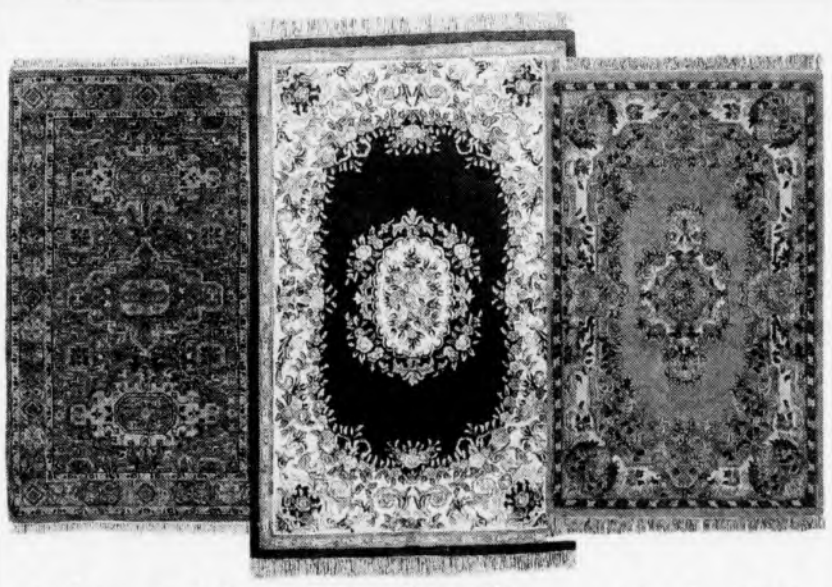
"Gas mains are marked prior to construction," explained Lincoln. "A blaster or anyone else digging is supposed to know within a reasonable distance where the utility is set."

The street had been marked, according to Lincoln, by an organization that not only puts in the markings but is also notified when digging is to occur so that gas mains don't rupture and water mains don't get broken.

Fire captain Mike Trask was the first to arrive on the scene and ordered the initial help. "He evacuated the area and stretched a hose line from the engine to make sure that if there were any gas emission the fire department would be able to control it," explained Lincoln.

When the gas company arrived, workers shut off the flow of gas to the main and then checked the houses for accumulation prior to reopening them.

An ambulance was also on hand, in case of emergency.



"Certainly, we were concerned with the fact that the gas emitting from a break in the main might ignite," said Lincoln. "We were concerned that there be no civilians or spectators nearby. I'm happy that there was no explosion and there were no injuries."

AROUND TOWN

TURNING 100 YEARS YOUNG

I received the best note that you can ever imagine last week, it was from Nadine Ronan. Nadine wanted to make everyone aware of a big celebration scheduled for next week! She will be traveling down to Ruskin, Fla., along with her siblings: Velma Begley, Chuckie Rose and Karla Watts, all of Cohasset, and Dorene Petrosky of Dover, Del., and all of their families, to celebrate the 100th birthday of their grandmother, Louise E. Rose, also of Cohasset. Louise was born Oct. 2, 1898, in West Roxbury, and has resided in Cohasset for 50 years. Currently she is visiting her daughter, Irene Knell, in Florida, which is where the gala event will take place. They are planning to surround her with many friends and relatives, including her eight grandchildren, 20 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild! Mrs. Rose is the wife of the late Carl A. Rose and the mother of the late Charles W. Rose, both of Cohasset. Take a peek at the photo that was taken two months ago — Isn't Mrs. Rose just the cutest lady you have seen in a long time? Precious! Nadine is planning to take this article to Florida with her, so . . . Happy Birthday to you, Louise E. Rose!

Louise E. Rose celebrates her 100th birthday, Oct. 2. Happy Birthday, Louise!

RETIREMENT PARTY

A retirement party was held for former superintendent of Cohasset Schools, Steve Hart, last week. More than 180 people attended the farewell party, held at the Barker Tavern in Scituate, Sept. 17. Principal Curt Collins was the master of ceremonies and did an outstanding job leading the farewells (one of his many talents is keeping a crowd going, and knowing just what to say and how to say it). There were accolades and best wishes galore, and Steve was most pleased! His parting gift was a trip to the spot of his choice, which we are sure he and his wife will love (that is if Mirium can tear him away from the finishing touches he is helping with at the new Osgood School). We want to take the time to wish Steve the very best as he begins the next stage of his life, and to say Thank You, Steve, for your loving care and concern you showed while you were superintendent! You are a gem that will always shine brightly in the world, whatever your next job will be!

NEW GRANDSON

Had a call from Barbara Potolicchio last week, just call her Gramma now! Barbara's daughter Dina and husband John (of Hingham) presented her with a brand new grandson, Joseph Michael O'Neil, Sept. 20. Joseph weighed 8 lbs. and was 19 inches long. Besides his folks and Barbara there to love him to pieces, his Uncle Brad cannot wait to take him on his first adventure — and, the same goes for Joseph's paternal grandparents; Joan O'Neil of Rye, N.H., and Ted O'Neil of Hull. Congrats go to all of you, we cannot wait to see that baby strolling around town!

BIRTHDAYS GALORE

Last month we told you about Libby Pompeo's birthday bash; now we want to extend belated birthday wishes to some other Pompeos! Jeannine Pompeo Coburn, whose birthday was Sept. 4; Tara Pompeo, whose birthday was celebrated Sept. 16 (the day after grandmother Libby); and, Karen Pompeo Burke, whose birthday was Sept. 17. Best wishes to all of you!

HELP CURE BREAST CANCER

There is a special event that is happening this Sunday, Oct. 4. It is the "Concert For The Cure," performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It will be held at Symphony Hall under the conductorship of André Previn and Seiji Ozawa and begins at 7 p.m. The orchestra is donating their services and time for this event, a benefit to help breast cancer research, and there are still some tickets available! Call Ronnie McMorris at 383-1219 or the ticket office (617) 266-1200. You'll have a wonderful time, and a good feeling knowing that you donated to breast cancer research while doing so! Enjoy!

MUM GARDEN DELIGHTS

For those of you who haven't done so yet, be sure that you go up to Alumni Field to see the beautiful mum garden planted to spell out CHS! It was planted by Dick Brown of Brown's Foreign Auto (574 Chief Justice Cushing Highway) — Dick took the whole day off from work Thursday, and planted it to perfection. What a beautiful introduction to our beautiful field — we cannot thank you enough for your time and efforts, Dick, you did an outstanding job.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, SUE

Finally, we have to send Happy Birthday greetings all the way to Maine — Denmark, Maine, to be exact! Oct. 8 is the big day, and the birthday gal is non other than Sue Fone (whom we all miss so much!) All of Cohasset sends love and best wishes, and cheers to many more!

WEDDINGS & ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. & Mrs. Joel G. Whitman

Whitman/Anderson wedding

Brooke Koehn Anderson, daughter of Robert C Anderson of San Diego, Calif., and Mary R. Anderson of Scituate, married Joel Gardner Whitman, son of Blanche and Peter Whitman of Cohasset, July 11, at the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset. The Rev. Gary Ritts and Gardner Jones of Hingham officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father Robert C. Anderson. The Matron of honor was Katie Santarsiero of San Jose, Calif. The Bridesmaids were Karen Atkinson of Cohasset, Paula Casey of St. Louis, Mo.; Terri Rodway of Portland, Maine; Christina Kreuzer of Kingston and Lisa Tennent of Lynn.

John MacDonald III of Cohasset served as best man. Ushers were Joshua, Adam and Eric Whitman of Cohasset and Michael and Christian Anderson of Scituate.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Stonehill College in Easton. She is employed at Cover Concepts Marketing in Boston.

Her husband is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Franklin Institute of Technology in Boston. He is employed at Hewitts Cove Marina in Hingham.

A reception was held at the Lightkeeper's House in Cohasset.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda the couple will reside in Weymouth.

For those veggie lovers out there!

MAY I PRESENT

SALLYANN CHATTERTON

This week let's do something for those who don't eat meat — there are lots out there, so hopefully there are many to enjoy this — even if you think that you cannot live without some form of meat or fowl for a night's supper, you will be amazed how full you feel and how good this tastes for a change. My aunt used to serve this to us, we thought it was a real treat!

VEGETABLE NUT LOAF

2 eggs
1/4 cup catsup
1 cup cooked rice
1/4 cup fine bread crumbs
2 cups mixed canned or leftover vegetables
1/2 cup finely chopped nuts

Beat eggs and add remaining ingredients in order listed. Pack gently into greased loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes. Serve with tomato sauce.

TOMATO SAUCE

1/4 cup butter
1/4 cup flour
2-1/2 cups tomatoes
1 teaspoon sugar
3/4 tsp. salt
1-1/2 teaspoons grated onion
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Melt butter add flour and blend smooth. Add remaining ingredients and cook until thick and smooth. Stir frequently.

With your vegetable nut loaf try baked stuffed turnip!

BAKED STUFFED TURNIP

1 large yellow turnip
1 quart boiling water
1 tbsp. salt
1 tbsp. sugar
2 tbsp. butter
1/4 cup milk
1/4 cup grated cheese
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 tbsp. chopped parsley
1/2 tsp salt
pepper to taste

Wash turnip and cut into quarters. Cook turnip in boiling water with 1 tablespoon salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. When tender, drain and remove pulp, leaving a 1-inch shell. Mash pulp with remaining ingredients in order given, fill the shells with this mixture and place in greased pan. Cook along with the vegetable nut loaf for the same amount of time.

Hope you enjoy this different and delicious meal!

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Five years later

Depending on where you live, the Education Reform Act of 1993 was a boon to your neighborhood school, or a growing hole in your pocket.

Proponents of the landmark legislation saw it as a comprehensive blueprint aimed at leveling the playing field in public education while raising the standards statewide. In lower- income communities, Ed Reform and its complex change in state funding served to pump cash into the public schools, bringing in more teachers, better equipment and an overall improvement in the ability of that community to educate its children. Many middle-income and well-to-do communities - many of the towns in the region covered by Community Newspaper Company publications - have only received a minimum amount of aid, leaving many taxpayers and school officials feeling they haven't gotten their fair share.

It is this formula that has some suburban taxpayers and school officials up in arms. While the quality of education and teacher training in particular are getting the most ink lately, the fairness of the Ed Reform funding formula has been the focus of an important debate since the new law was passed.

This edition of our newspaper includes the first of what will be a monthly series during this school year looking at how we pay for public education, how well the statewide testing program works, how schools stack up against one another, and the cost of special education, among other topics.

This first installment looks at how local schools compare to the state's "foundation budget" - the amount the state recommends as the minimum each town should be spending on its schools. The stories in this series are being created by a team of reporters and editors from throughout the company's 100-plus newspapers in eastern Massachusetts. Our efforts are meant to shine light on this important issue, to look at how the billions of dollars in Education Reform money have been spent, and to find out what you, our readers, think are the successes or failures of Ed Reform.

No one is against quality public education. The debate has always been about how to achieve that and how to pay for it. To help focus that debate, we are planning a public forum on Education Reform starting at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 14, at the Museum of Our National Heritage in Lexington. A panel of educators and experts in the field will face questioning from a panel of journalists. We hope many of the questions raised in this forum will flow from you, our readers. We hope you'll plan to attend the forum, give us feedback through calls, letters to the editor and e-mails to this newspaper. We believe we share an interest in this most important topic: the education of our children.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Beltway billiousness vs. sunny suburbanites

TO THE EDITOR:

Why the discrepancy between the high approval rating of Clinton outside the Washington Beltway and the almost universal disapproval by the pols and pundits inside the Beltway?

Because the insiders have long recognized the cynical hypocrisy and the aura of lawlessness that pervades the current White House. Being egotists, the insiders are outraged that the Clinton crowd would presume them so dumb as to be susceptible to transparent spinning, hair splitting, clever language tricks and other forms of semi-lying to them. The Starr report didn't surprise them, they already knew their man, but it did provide opportunity to vent their resentment of past mendacity.

But what do us hicks from the sticks know? Apparently about 60 percent don't know much, but opinions aren't hampered by the minor disadvantage of knowing little and thinking less. Some have a pathetic compulsion to appear sophisticated by claiming that the President's immorality and character is nobody else's business, while demonstrating naive innocence of the meaning of the evidence. Some believe the nonsense that the President, not the normal cycle of business ups and downs, is responsible for current prosperity. Some want to shoot the messenger, braying that the Starr report is only evidence of Starr's prurience. (I suppose these airheads would respond to a message that their house is on fire by retorting that the messenger is a firebug)!

It's clear that the common denominator of those excusing the President is stunning ignorance of the relevant facts, of the history of the case, of the spectacular incompetence of this administration in foreign affairs, of the discrepancies between Clinton's impressive rhetoric and the minuscule accomplishments.

The Beltway denizens, who observe the President and his noxious minions every day, quite naturally blamed the White House immediately for leaking destructive information about Congressman Hyde and others, even though in this instance the minions probably were innocent.

But that's the unlovely aura that has emanated from the White House these last few years, and that's why the chattering class, the pundits and pols inside the Beltway, have had enough, even though 60 percent of us hicks have yet to catch on.

Youth programs need financial support

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Youth Resources Committee charged with development of Teen Services and facility construction is sending, via the October tax bills, a letter requesting financial support from our community.

The letter, explaining our objectives and goals, will be included with the next tax assessment mailing along with a pre-addressed return envelope.

Our teenage population needs community financial support in order to initially develop both programs and facilities which, once underway, are expected to become financially self-supporting.

The Cohasset Council of Elder Affairs are thanked for its time and efforts preparing both the letters and tax bills for mailing. The council members volunteer their services for all tax bill mailings, as well as other periodic mailings from local organizations.

Our thanks also go to Town Treasurer, Mr. Joseph D. Buckley, for allowing our letter to be included with the tax bills, saving considerable money which Youth Resources can ill afford.

We thank the community for its anticipated concern and generosity on behalf of our youth.

Recreation Director

Murray, Bradley square off on 'On the Mark'

First debate highlights common ground

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

The biggest difference between Mary Jeanette Murray and Garrett Bradley may the their ages.

A former county prosecutor, Bradley, 28, a Democrat, will try to unseat Murray, 73, a Republican, seeking her 12th consecutive term as state representative for the Third Plymouth District in the state election Nov. 3.

On last week's "On the Mark" cable-TV show hosted by Ilana Marks of Scituate, the two candidates found they shared common ground on issues such as their opposition to restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad. They also both put education, public safety and tax relief at the top of their priority list.

Garrett Bradley

Mary Jeanette Murray

Murray has run unopposed for the past ten years except for an 11th-hour sticker campaign two years ago. Bradley defeated challengers Josh Cutler and Walter Murray, both of Hull, for the Democratic Party nomination for state representative in the Sept. 15 primary.

In answering a caller's question, Bradley described himself as socially conscious and fiscally conservative. Murray said she was "middle of the road but leaning conservative" although she supported some social liberal issues.

"Where I lean mostly is where my constituents stand," said Murray, a grandmother, who served as a Cohasset selectman before heading to the Statehouse 22 years ago. "I try to know where my people are coming from."

They both agree that serving as a state representative is a full-time job.

"I've pledged to be a full-time state representative," said Bradley in response to Murray's signs touting her full-time service. "If the time it takes to do the job is anywhere near as much as running a campaign, it is most definitely full-time."

In response to another caller who described the public schools on the South Shore as "abysmal" the two candidates parted ways on the issue of "vouchers" to offset the cost of private schools.

While Bradley, who lives in Hingham with his wife Heather, does not support vouchers for private schools, he advocates increased accountability, oversight and more state money for the public schools.

"Massachusetts is ranked 45th in the nation in the amount of state money going to the public schools, that has to change," he said.

Murray supports vouchers if the state picks up the tab.

They both want to see the state pay for Charter Schools, so that the money does not follow the student from the sending school district to the charter school — as is currently the case — ultimately hurting the sending school district's bottom line.

Concerning public safety, both say domestic violence is an important issue.

Murray is not optimistic that Bradley would be successful with his proposed bill legislating a 24-hour cooling off period for perpetrators arrested following an incident of domestic violence.

He points out that victims don't always get restraining orders and his proposed bill would provide a safeguard so that perpetrators could not return home for 24 hours.

"This will protect them (victims), even when they don't want to protect themselves," he said.

Murray said more emphasis should be put on restraining orders.

"It's taken us a long time for women to understand they have the right," she said.

Both Bradley and Murray are opposed to term limits.

Murray said she supports capping spending in a state representative's race to $18,000, a limit proposed by the League of Women Voters.

Bradley who has raised upwards of $60,000, said it is difficult to run against an incumbent.

"It's hard to get your name out there," he said.

One caller was angry that Bradley and Marks, the host, were not showing Murray the respect she deserves by calling her "Mary Jeanette" and not "Representative Murray."

Marks explained she asked the candidates what they preferred to be called before the show.

Murray said she likes being called Mary Jeanette and when she gets calls asking for "Representative Murray", she knows they are from the Statehouse and are not her constituents.

Bradley opposes the death penalty while Murray favors it.

For murder in the first degree, the penalty is life without parole, Bradley explained.

"Let them die in prison," he said.

Murray said she supports the death penalty when it was aimed at those who kill police in the line of duty.

Asked if President Clinton should resign, Bradley described the president's behavior as "deplorable" but said the impeachment process should be able to run its course.

"There are two sides to every story, when I see the house proceedings and the trial in the senate, then I'll have an opinion," he said.

Murray said Clinton should stay because he only has two years to go.

"We don't know what we're getting in Gore, he'll be investigated, too," she said.

The cable show will be rebroadcast at 8 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 1.

Clarifying the revaluation mystery

By Jim Lagrotteria
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This is the second in a two-part series of articles by the Board of Assessors to help clarify the mystery of revaluation of your property.

State law requires that your property be assessed at market value. Market value is defined as the amount a typical, well-informed purchaser would be willing to pay for a property. For a sale to be a market value (arm's length) sale, the seller and buyer must be unrelated, the buyer must be willing (but not under pressure) to buy, the property must be on the market for a reasonable length of time, the payment must be in cash or its equivalent, and the financing must be typical for that type of property. If there have been no recent arm's-length sales of your property, the next best evidence is the arm's-length sales of reasonably comparable properties. These are properties similar to yours in location, age, style, condition and other features that affect market value, such as the number of bedrooms, bathrooms and size of garage. A list of these sales is maintained in the Assessor's office, is considered public information and is available to any homeowner.

If no reasonable comparable sales exist, we will then consider all other factors that may affect the market value of your property. The cost of replacing your building(s), less depreciation, plus the value of your land could be used. For rental properties, the income and expenses should be considered.

General economic conditions such as interest rates, inflation rates and changes in the tax laws will influence the value of real estate. As property values change in the marketplace, those changes must be reflected on the assessment roll. Not all assessments change at the same rate. There are many differences between individual properties and between neighborhoods. In one area, the sales may indicate a substantial increase in value in a given year. In another neighborhood, there may be no change, or even a decrease in property values. Different types of properties within the same neighborhood may also show different value changes. For example, one-story homes may be in more demand than two-story homes or vice versa. Older homes in the same area may be rising in value more slowly than newer homes. Among the numerous factors to be considered that will cause values to differ between properties are location, condition, size, quality, number of baths, basement finish, garages and many others.

All of these conditions must be reviewed and analyzed before placing a value on your property. Then a further review of this information to ensure that your assessment will correspond fairly to other properties in your neighborhood will be required. Following our review, the State Department of Revenue will review all of the new assessments and then a public review period is allowed. The time of the public review is announced in the local newspapers.

Should you not agree with your new assessment, talk with the Assessors.

During the informal public review period you can learn how your assessment was made, what factors were considered and what type of records we have on your property. Should you further disagree with your assessment, you will need to file an abatement application with the Assessing Department when the third quarter bill is due. The Board of Assessors has three months in which to act on your application and will inform you of their decision on an approved Department of Revenue form. There are exemptions that provide for tax relief for qualified homeowners available, inquire at the Assessor's office to determine whether you qualify.

State law puts the burden of proof on the property owner to show that the assessment is incorrect. Simply stating that your assessment or property taxes are too high is not relevant. You should establish in your mind what you think your property is worth. The best evidence that could be considered would be a recent arm's length sale of your property. The next evidence would be recent sales of properties similar to yours. The closer in similarity and proximity, the better the evidence. An appraisal of your property by an independent appraiser would be additional evidence.

Although the value of your property affects your share of taxes, the actual amount you pay is determined by the budget needs of the town and school. Once this decision is made by the town, a tax rate is adopted that will generate the needed dollars to fund Town Meetings wishes. Your property taxes are determined by multiplying the tax rate by your assessment. Tax Rate times Assessed Value/000 = Taxes.

Bill Clinton in Wonderland

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

"'Have some wine,' the March Hare said, in an encouraging tone. Alice looked all around the table, but there was nothing on it but tea. 'I don't see any wine,' she remarked. 'There isn't any,' said the March Hare."

Am I the only one who has noticed that there is an Alice in Wonderland quality to some of the things that are happening in Washington to and around Bill Clinton?

The president seems to be able to do the things that would get Will Cordero and Dave Meggett banned in Boston and folks will not only forgive him, they'll applaud him as well.

Mind you, these are the very things that pastors all over the land thunder against every Sunday morning. It makes one wonder if anyone is listening.

Kenneth Starr releases a 445-page report chronicling in excruciating detail the many things Bill was doing to Monica and nothing much happens except that I have given up smoking cigars.

A Gallup poll taken when the report was revealed - and the good parts, at least, read by most Americans - showed that 64 per cent of us approved of the job he was doing in the White House.

More difficult to explain is another part of that poll showed that 72 percent thought it very important for a president to provide moral leadership for the country and 68 percent thought Clinton was a weak moral leader.

Yet, when asked if, as a result of the Monica matter, they are more or less likely to believe Bill when he speaks on matters of public policy, 55 per cent of us said they really weren't affected at all.

Mind you, these are the very things that pastors all over the land thunder against every Sunday morning. It makes one wonder if anyone is listening.

A couple of weeks later a video tape of the president's four hour and 12 minutes of testimony before the Grand Jury, even more titillating than the written report, is shown on television sets everywhere.

Polls taken after the broadcast reported that 70 percent thought the questions were fair, 62 percent thought he was hiding something and 81 percent thought that he lied under oath.

Yet 66 percent said they approved of the job he was doing and 68 percent said his sins were not of a magnitude to bring his impeachment.

The same day that the tape of his testimony was shown on TV, his live appearance before the United Nations drew a warm reception.

"It reflects the love and respect the international community feels for you," he was told.

Not only that, but political contributions to Clinton's Democratic party actually went up and a $2,500-per-person fund-raiser for a Democratic candidate for governor of Illinois had to be moved to a larger hall to accommodate the crowd.

"When our donors get angry, they get out their checkbooks," said Ellen Malcolm, a party fund-raiser.

I leave it to Tom Oliphant and Dave Nyhan to figure out what all this means but in the unlikely event that I were to become a politician, the first thing I would do is buzz my secretary and tell her:

"Miss Smith, my popularity is slipping. Send in the nubile interns, please."

ED REFORM:
5 Years Later

Suburban schools struggle to cope

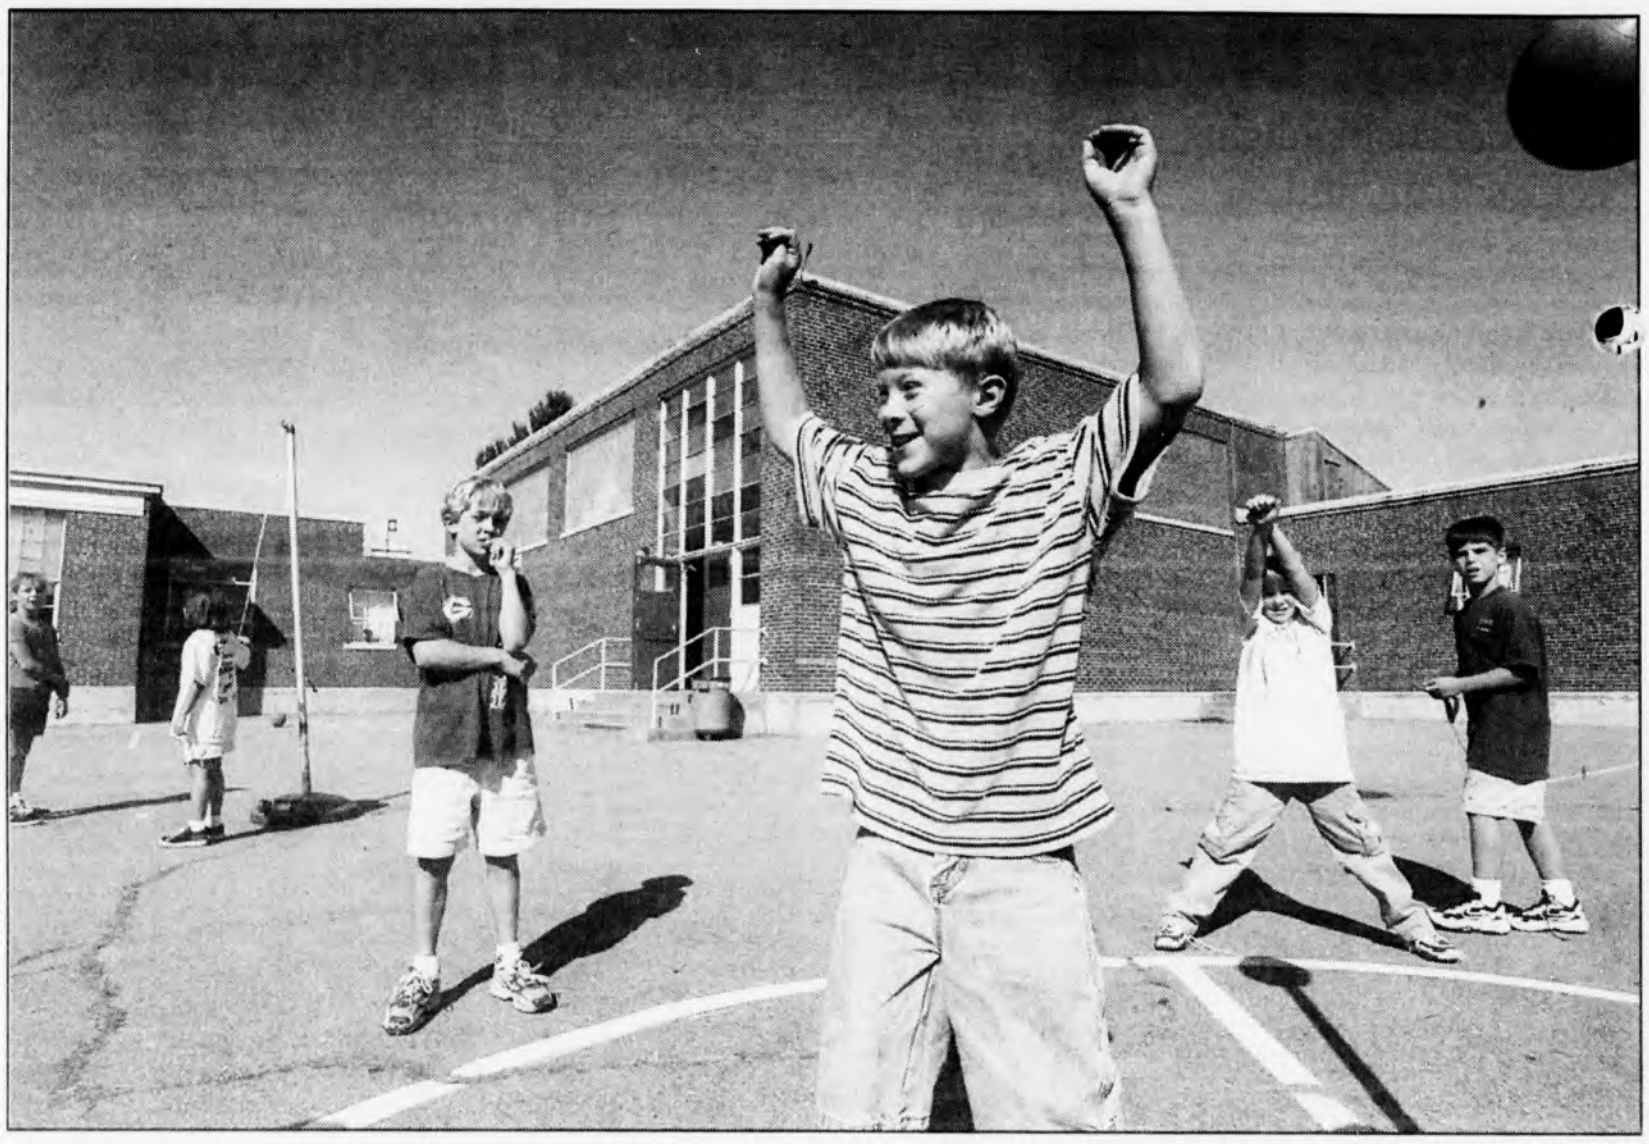
"Education Reform cuts state aid to the bone for suburban school districts," said James H. Powers of Needham, a leader in that coalition. "There are 160 communities on the warpath because they're caught between the state aid formula, Proposition 2 1/2 and state mandates."

What sparked this new movement is the way that more than $2 billion in new funding has been doled out by the state to 350-plus school districts. The complaint from the suburban coalition has now set up a high-stakes showdown between rich and poor school districts. The battleground will be the floor of the State House, as the Education Reform Act comes up for review in the year 2000.

Driving the coalition are representatives of the districts that have been hit by a double blow. They receive only the minimum amount of Education Reform aid - $100 per student this year, up from $25 in 1993. Meanwhile, they have been pinched by Education Reform's costly mandates, such as providing new curricula and added time in class for learning.

The result is that wealthy towns with famous school systems like Lexington and Newton are crying foul over the state funding formula.



"They're beginning to see the level of education they want to provide erode," said Peter Finn, executive director of the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents. "Middle class and some wealthy communities have begun to spend less per pupil. They have begun to curtail programs and go with larger class sizes."

The position has met with a less than sympathetic response from the some of the state's key education and political leaders.

John R. Silber, chairman of the state Board of Education, said he is concerned less with the gripes of suburban schools than with children in places such as Lawrence, Brockton, New Bedford - cities that, he said, have been "devastated by a loss of jobs and a decline in real estate values."

"I don't deny for a moment that there are inequities in any plan a state can devise," Silber said. "But I don't believe that Massachusetts' inequities are anything but minimal. There are only a minority of suburbs that are under-funded. Many of them have enormous waste. They are spending way too much money in the central office."

The coalition will also find a formidable opponent at the State House.

Parker Berg celebrates a winning effort during recess on the playground at Deer Hill School. Local officials say ed reform has improved education but put more of the burden for paying for schools on Cohasset taxpayers.

Today the state contributes a total of $2.5 billion annually to local school operations, representing about 40 percent of the aggregate operating budget. That is up from about 30 percent in 1993.

"It's the lower- and middle-class communities that get the lion's share of the funds," acknowledged State Senate President Thomas Birmingham, a Democrat from Chelsea, one of the architects of Education Reform. "That's no accident. That's by design."

As a result of that design, some of the poorest communities have received the most Education Reform money for their schools. Between 1993 and 1998, for example, state aid per pupil jumped 238 percent in Everett, 111 percent in Revere and 109 percent in Boston, according to data provided by the state Department of Education.

This fundamental change in school financing was prompted, in part, by a 1993 decision by the state Supreme Judicial Court that called it unconstitutional for schools to rely so heavily on local property taxes for funding. It was also designed to ease the effects of recession in the early 1990s, when many schools were forced to cut their budgets.

"Because the system had been so ravaged, the first goal was to stop the bleeding and get the patient back to functional," said Mark Roosevelt, a former legislator who helped draft the Education Reform Act.

Since its inception, the act has narrowed the gap in spending between rich districts and poor districts. Today the state contributes a total of $2.5 billion annually to local school operations, representing about 40 percent of the aggregate operating budget. That is up from about 30 percent in 1993.

By the year 2000, the state will have increased its annual contribution to the schools by $2 billion as a result of Education Reform alone. That has translated into hefty increases for school districts with relatively low property wealth.

"Our system of continuing to rely on property taxes to fund education is fundamentally bankrupt. It creates tensions between schools and other municipal services."

Jay R.Kaufman, Lexington state rep.

Despite those gains, state Rep. Jay R. Kaufman, a Democrat from Lexington, said the process of education funding remains troublesome.

"Our system of continuing to rely on property taxes to fund education is fundamentally bankrupt," Kaufman said. "It creates tensions between schools and other municipal services."

Working with state Sen. Stanley C. Rosenberg, Kaufman has been studying alternatives to the property tax as a basis for education funding.

One target of their concern is districts growing faster than the limits of Proposition 2 1/2 will accommodate, that is, school systems with growing populations such as Ashland and Hopkinton, according to state Sen. David P. Magnani, a Democrat from Framingham.

"Their enrollment growth has been so high, their local property tax hasn't been able to keep up," he said.

That has created a Catch-22 for some school systems whose reputations draw new families to town.

For example, Newton has been unable to reduce class sizes as much as it intended. "The schools here are packed," said School Superintendent Jeffrey Young. "Newton is struggling with the growing number of kids and the resources available."

The city has been "extremely supportive of the schools," Young said. "However, it can go on only so long with local funding. At some point, if the state continues to hold high expectations -as it should - it will have to give us more financial support."

Under the terms of Education Reform, the state uses a complex funding formula with the intent of bringing every school district up to what it calls a foundation budget - the minimum level needed to provide an adequate education.

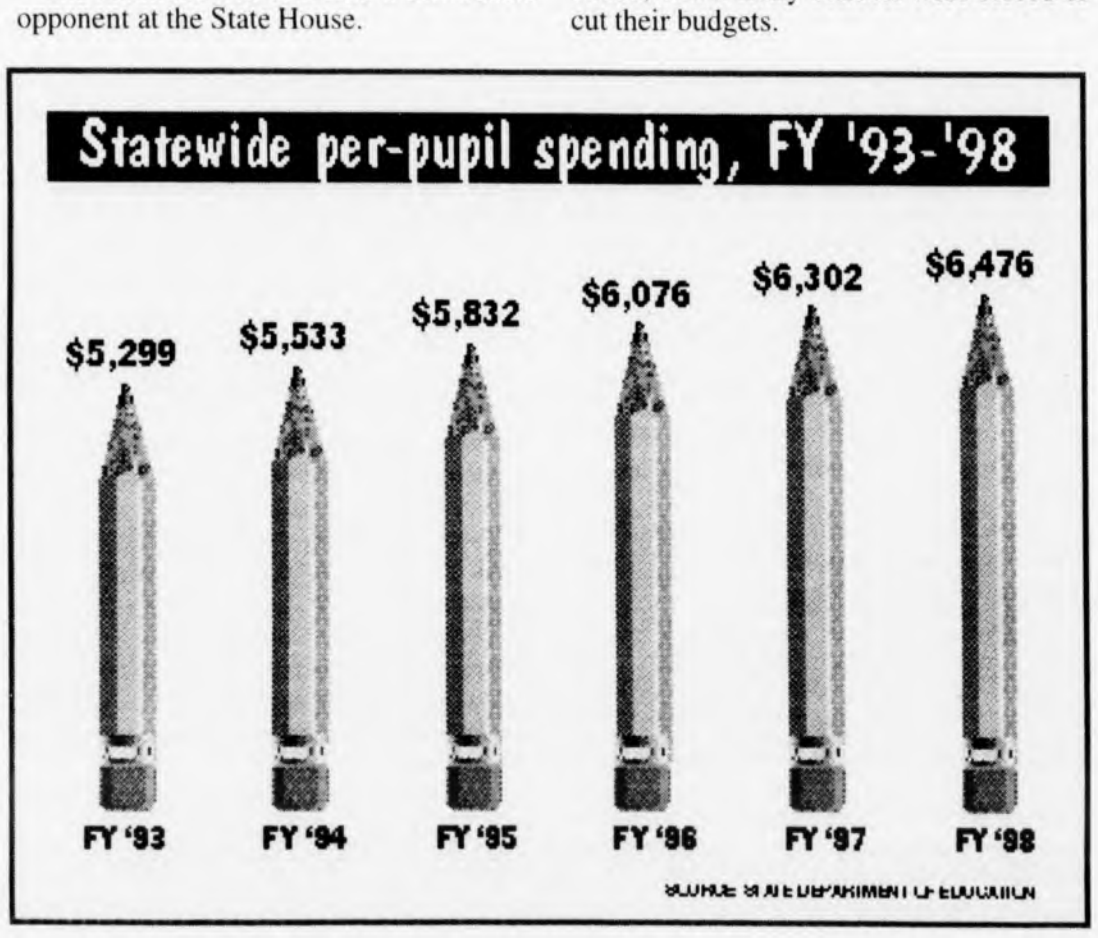
The infusion of state funds has not only helped older industrial cities such as Lynn, Chelsea and Revere, it has benefited smaller Cape Cod towns as well. The state's contribution to Wellfleet, for example, has increased by 287 percent.

By one standard, the program has been a smashing success.

"We're getting very close to that magic point where everyone is spending at least the minimum amount," said Cam Huff, a senior research associate with the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation.

By the year 2000, almost every school district in the state is expected to reach its foundation budget.

However, despite the efforts of Education Reform, rich towns and poor towns still stand far apart in the resources they can muster. Lexington, Wellesley, Brookline, Dover, Concord, Cambridge, Truro, Dover-Sherborn, Concord-Carlisle, Weston and Lincoln-Sudbury each spend between 50 to 100 percent more on their schools than the level defined as adequate by the state, reflecting their rich tax base and commitment to schools.



According to the architects of Education Reform, that powerful resource is not affected by the new formula.

"We do not require a perfectly level playing field," Birmingham said, "but we must lower the trajectory of inequality."

That "trajectory of inequality" has declined steadily since 1993, but the difference between what towns actuallytown of Chelsea spends $6,954 on each student.

The biggest spenders in the state are high schools and vocational schools in wealthy communities that get little Education Reform aid. For instance, Lincoln-Sudbury Regional High School spends $12,158 per pupil and Minuteman, a tax-supported vocational school in Lexington, spends a whopping $20,185 per student.

"This is a very crucial time right now," said Jerry Wasserman, vice chairman of the Suburban Coalition that is leading the fight for a changed formula. "We're nearing the end of the first cycle of Ed Reform. We would like a funding floor that says every community gets a minimum of 25 percent of their education budget from the state."

Already proposals are being prepared to change the formula. The League of Women Voters has offered one alternative measure, and Jay Kaufman said he plans to introduce legislation next year to revamp the funding process.

Despite the backlash sparked by the funding formula, its authors said it has accomplished its goals.

"The biggest achievement of Ed[ucation] Reform is that by the year 2000, no matter where you were born, a decent amount of money will be spent to educate you," said Mark Roosevelt. "Now that begs the question: has education improved?"

Inching toward a resolution of Newtonville wastewater woes

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

The public health emergency caused by failing septic systems at four Newtonville homes continues to plague the neighborhood. The owners of four homes on Atlantic Avenue — numbers 26, 26A, 30 and 36 — have been forced to pump ailing systems twice over the summer to prevent raw sewage from bubbling up onto their lawns. The sewer commission has plans to connect the homes to the sewer system, but that won't happen until next spring. Meanwhile, residents and members of the health board are searching for ways to expedite the sewer connection process and end the septic nightmare in that part of Newtonville.

Recently, Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik sent a letter to the sewer commission regarding a state sewer extension permit needed to connect the four homes to the town's system. Godzik said he hoped his letter would convince officials at the Department of Environmental Protection to approve the permit quickly so work could begin.

"The thing is there's something about the sewer extension permit from the state that must be resolved," Godzik said. "The letter to the sewer commission about the permit may be able to help the process along."

In the letter to the sewer commission, Godzik stresses the need for quick action on the problem. He writes that the only solution to the crisis is to connect the four homes to the sewer system as soon as possible.

"The public health emergency conditions at 26, 26A, 30 and 36 Atlantic Ave. continue unabated with all systems in failure and no reasonable on-site solution available," Godzik writes in the letter.

Additionally, the project must wait while Tutela Engineering, a private company serving as the town's sewer consultant and engineer, obtains easements to connect the four homes, said Sewer Commissioner Ted Guild.

"Tutela has done the preliminary engineering and now we need easements," Guild said. "We got a bid from the contractor who is doing the North Cohasset project and we have the money in the budget."

Godzik said it is important that the work be done as soon as possible to avoid further problems when the water table rises in the late winter and early spring.

"If we get too close to winter, the contractor won't do the project until next spring," Godzik said. "In the winter the water levels rise and by spring it could be a real mess out there."

The four Atlantic Avenue homes sit on rocky ledge that is poorly suited for septic systems. Last April, the board of health declared the four Atlantic Avenue properties a public health emergency because of exposed sewage percolating aboveground from the failed systems. The health board had considered ordering the four homeowners to install tight tanks, sealed septic units, but rejected that option in favor of pumping as needed. Tight tanks have extremely limited capacity and require frequent drainage.

"If we get too close to winter, the contractor won't do the project until next spring. In the winter the water levels rise and by spring it could be a real mess out there."
— Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik

Guild said the four homes would be connected to the town's system using part of the 15,000 gallons per day of additional capacity authorized by the state under the terms of the Second Amended Final Agreement for Judgment. The judgment is a an agreement between the town and the state on terms for resolving Cohasset's decades-old wastewater treatment problems. About half of the additional capacity went to the Deer Hill School and the new Osgood School. The remaining capacity is reserved for other uses, including some businesses, other public uses, and public health emergencies. Guild said the four Atlantic Avenue homes should be connected to the sewer system by next spring.

"I told those families that they would have to endure one more summer of problems this year, and then their problem would be history by next year," Guild said.

However, one of the Atlantic Avenue homeowners, Frances Burnham, wonders what exactly constitutes a public health emergency and what kind of action should follow. Burnham said she has written letters to the health board and sewer commission asking for an answer to that question, but received no reply.

Last April, the health board ordered the sewer commission to connect the four homes within 30 days because the situation posed an imminent threat to public health. The health board even threatened to sue the sewer commission if it didn't connect the four homes. Town Counsel Paul DeRensis ruled that the health board did not have the authority to force the sewer commission to connect the four homes. Since then, the four homes have required pumping on an as-needed basis.

"They have pumped us only when we have entreated them to do so," Burnham said. "There is no schedule for pumping."

Burnham's flooding is exacerbated by flooding off of other people's property because she lives near the bottom of a bowl-shaped depression. In 1995 the fecal coliform (a bacteria from human excrement) count on Burnham's property reached 20,000 parts per million (ppm). Last January the count stood at 6,400 ppm. The town shuts down beaches when the fecal coliform count reaches only 220 ppm.

October flu clinics planned

The Cohasset Board of Health and the Social Service League announce the October Flu Clinics:

It's time to "winterize and immunize!" The best way to protect yourself from the flu is a yearly flu shot. Who should get a flu shot?

People who are 65 or older.

Children or adults with chronic lung disease, heart disease, diabetes or other chronic health problems. Children or teens who, for medical reasons, take an aspirin every day.

People who live with or take care of someone who is at risk of getting the flu (health care workers, primary care givers, etc.)

Anyone wanting extra protection during the winter months from the current flu strains.

There will be two flu clinics for seniors:

1. Tuesday, Oct. 13, 10 a.m. to noon, at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave.

2. Friday, Oct. 16, 10 a.m. to noon at Harborview, 60 Elm St.

Community flu clinics for all Cohasset residents:

1. Saturday, Oct. 17, 10 a.m. to noon at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

2. Saturday, Oct. 24, 10 a.m. to noon at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

3. Tuesday, Oct. 27, 7 to 9 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

Note: Please wear a short sleeve shirt.

Any seniors who have not received the pneumonia vaccine or who have not had a tetanus booster for 10 years or more, may call the league office at 383-0771 or 383-0821 for our walk-in clinic hours. All vaccines are free for Cohasset residents.

Skipper stickmen gaining valuable experience

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

Experience is a funny thing. Every coach wants it, but there's only one way to get it.

You've got to bite the bullet and play the younger kids.

That where the CHS field hockey team stands. At 2-2-1 the very young squad is learning on the fly as they try for a return to the MIAA state tourney.

With only seven upperclassmen to go with 12 tenth graders and 3 freshmen on the roster, 10th year head coach Debbie Bostwick said this season would be full balancing act between trying to get back to post-season play and giving the younger players the playing time they need to grow into experienced varsity-level players.

Bostwick is trying to do all this as a solo act. Although the junior high field hockey program is booming with more than 30 players, the same is not true at the high school where there is no JV program this season because not enough girls came out for the team.

"I've got six to nine kids this season who are picking up a stick for the first time," said Bostwick. "It's a challenge to give those kids the instruction they need while also trying to help the older players develop their game and get the team back to the tourney."

Joining Hull, Carver, Hanover and Hull in the South Shore League, Bostwick admitted her squad "probably the underdog of the group" this season.

Under the leadership of senior captains Meaghan Connolly, Jill Magner and Katie Devine the squad opened the year with a 4-1 win over Middleboro, a team Bostwick said looked very familiar to her.

"They're in the same boat that we are. They're young and re-building," she said. "The girls were excited to get the first game out of the way and

Trowers leads Skippers in big win

By Jim O'Sullivan
CORRESPONDENT

Already, the Cohasset Skippers have equaled their win total from last season. In the wake of last week's well-played, pulse raising 18-12 loss to the Mashpee Falcons, the Skippers ran all over the Dragons of Latin Academy. On the strength of a smothering defense and a versatile, high-voltage offense, Cohasset charged out to a 32-0 lead. Coach Tony Rolfe then pulled his starters to prevent a blow-out.

Breaking through holes wrenched open by a dominating offensive line, sophomore back Daniel Trowers posted 181 yards on nine carries, giving him two consecutive 100-yard games (he rushed for 132 yards last week.)

Cohasset kicked off their scoring when the offense, with runs by Trowers, rolled down to the 17. QB Jamie DeMichele, in only his second start at that position, fired to Brian Krupczak from 17 yards out to put his team on the board. And the romp was on.

The "V" is for victory. Sophomore Brian Kruczack gets a second to catch his breath after scoring against Latin Academy. The Skippers hope for continued success when they travel to take on South Shore League rival Carver at 7 p.m. Friday night.

Minutes later, the Boys in Blue had the ball back and were on the warpath again. Trowers streaked in for a 52-yard scoring run. DeMichele and Krupczak hooked up again for the two point conversion, bringing the score to 14-0, in favor of the home team.

After the stingy Skipper defense ended a second Latin Academy offensive series, senior Ben Roine took the punt in from 45 yards to give Cohasset a gaping 20-0 lead.

Clearly overmatched, Latin Academy couldn't get the ball on Cohasset's half of the field and kicked again. This time, the drive was highlighted by carries by DeMichele and bruising senior fullback Justin Golden. These rushes set up Trowers from the one, and the sophomore phenom found paydirt, pushing the edge to 26-0.

Cohasset wasn't done, however. Their defense bent, but did not break, and senior defensive back Raheem Shepard picked off a Dragon pass at the CHS one-yard-line and took it to the 12 before being brought down.

"We're going to be able to hold our own this season. There's a good deal of spirit and enthusiasm on the team and they're getting more experience every time that they step out on the field. It's a bit of a learning experience, but we're going to be fine."

HEAD COACH DEBBY BOSTWICK

The Skippers wasted no time, as Trowers busted through for an 88-yard TD sprint, his third of the game. This ended the Skipper scoring at 32-0. Rolfe pulled his starters and Latin Academy chalked up 14 points, but the game was no longer in question.

Trowers' three touchdowns brought him to a total of four on the year, making him the fourth leading scorer in Eastern Mass Division 4 football. And this week, The Boston Globe named him a Star of the Week.

Asked if he knew how big an impact Trowers would have, Rolfe replied, "I didn't know anyone on this team before this year. I'd seen him at some track meets and heard so many good things about him, that it wasn't a surprise to me. For a sophomore he runs very well."

Rolfe also credited the Cohasset offensive line in having a hand in the victory.

"Our offensive line did a great job. After watching the film, they did an even better job than I had thought."

Golden, whose blocks helped pave the way for Trowers' 181 yards, evaluated the team's performance.

"The victory came early in the season and we didn't waste time getting in the endzone. We jumped right on them and put some points on the board. I can only hope that we take this momentum into Carver on Friday. If we come out of the gate slow, it could be a long night."

The 1-1 Crusaders will play host as the Skippers travel down to Carver Friday night to put their record above .500.

it was a great way to start the year because everyone was able to get into the game and play."

After a 2-0 loss to Scituate the Skippers bounced back with a big performance against a much bigger and experienced East Bridgewater squad.

Not matter what the makers of Godzilla told you over the summer, size didn't matter here as junior Jen Meehan set up Connolly for a goal with only 33 seconds remaining to give the hometown team a monstrous 1-0 win breaking what had become an extended losing streak against the Vikings.

"That win was a huge boost for everyone," said Bostwick. "We held our own against a team that was much bigger than us. We just kept plugging away and good things finally happened for us."

Such luck was not apparent in a 0-0 tie against Mashpee, a game the Skippers completely dominated but were not able to win.

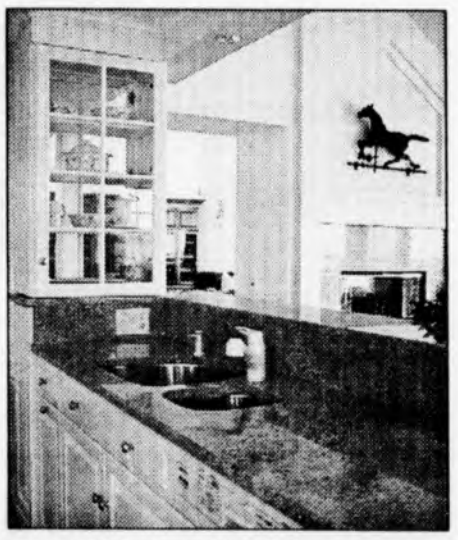
"We did everything but score," said Bostwick, including having more corner hits than Mashpee by a 15-2 margin. "It was just an unbelievable game. The ball just wouldn't go into the net."

They followed up the tie with a 3-1 loss against Carver.

"We're going to be able to hold our own this season," surmised Bostwick. "There's a good deal of spirit and enthusiasm on the team and they're getting more experience every time that they step on the field. It's a bit of a learning experience, but we're going to be fine."

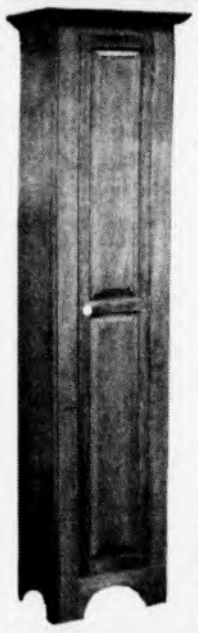
Junior Melissa Romano and sophomore Krysten Considine have been sharing duties in the net.

Break up the Skippers



THE GAME: Cohasset (1-1) at Carver (1-1), Friday night at 7 p.m.

THE HISTORY: The Crusaders spoiled homecoming for CHS with a 28-14 win.



THE SKINNY: After last week's romp over Latin Academy, CHS cannot come into this South Shore League contest with a swelled head. Sophomore Daniel Trowers looks to be one of the better runners in that the Skippers have had in a long while and Jaime DeMichele has looked strong at quarterback but the hometown team will have on top of their game to go into Carver and come out with a win.

Skippers set course for more power

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

CHS boys soccer head coach Jeff Martell is not unlike TV's ultimate tool man, Tim Taylor. They're both on a constant search for a little bit more power.

"We need to get better at converting the offensive chances when we have them," said the second year coach of the 1-4-1 squad. "You're not going to win many games if you don't put the ball in the net."

Such was the case against South Shore League rival Hull in a recent game. Although the game ended up in a 4-4 tie, the Skippers dominated the contest for the most part but were never able to put the final nail into the Pirates coffin

After a week off from games the Skippers get back into action tonight (Thursday) with a doubleheader against the Green Wave of Abington. The girls start it off at 5:15 p.m. with the boys game scheduled to kick-off sometime around 7 p.m.

"The last couple games have been somewhat disappointing to us. We expected to play better than we have been showing as of late," said Martell. "We've got the talent. It's just taking longer to develop than I would have hoped."

One highlight has been the play of keeper Kevin DeVito, whose booming kicks have become an important weapon in CHS' arsenal.

"He's a good keeper," said Martell. "Kevin is solid and he knows what he's doing back there."

Steve Sceery put the Skippers on top in the early minutes against Hull, but the Pirates stormed right back with a score of their own to make it 1-1 only seven minutes into the contest.

The score did nothing to take the steam out of the Skippers as the forward line of Sceery, captain Mark Equi, Erik Shea and Dennis Rooney kept the pressure on the Hull end of the field. The pressure paid off when Ben Littauer launched an innocent enough looping clear-in shot that found its way between the crossbar and the keeper's fingers at the 18:57 mark of the half to put Cohasset up 2-1.

The lead would be short-lived as Hull tied the game once again six minutes later on a penalty kick after a hand ball was called in the crease.

Cohasset jumped on top again before the break when Sceery scored his second of the evening (third on the season) when he converted an Equi corner kick with a low blast from the top of the penalty area.

They added to that lead seven minutes later when Rooney picked up a pass that went over the Hull defenders and deposited it in the net to get Cohasset their first two-goal lead of the game.

"Dennis (Rooney) had a strong game overall," said Martell. "It was good to see him break through and pick up a goal as well as make some really nice crossing passes to set other people up."

Hull came storming back to get to 4-3 with six minutes to go and then tied the game a couple minutes later when Ricky Cox converted a crossing pass just in front of the net.

"That was a little tough to take," said Martell. "We had them down but were not able to finish them off."

To their credit the Skippers did not let the two goals get them down as the game wound down.

Sceery just missed a hat trick when he headed the ball just wide off a cross from Equi and then Justin Maitland put one just over the crossbar as time ran out.

Fielding a veteran team this season, Martell said a number of younger players including Tim Baird, Matt Bilodeau and Ben Bixby had also stepped forward and played well for the Skippers.

Also seeing time at varsity have been Tom Anderson, Jake Nohe, Ben Peterson, Andrew Laing, Travis Moore, Jake Motley, Evan Murphy, Noel Grinnell, Hunt Pile and Devin Buick.

Charter School cancels out Osgood use plan

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

A request from the South Shore Charter School to rent space at the old Joseph Osgood Elementary School has been withdrawn. The 3.7 mile drive from Hull to the empty school, combined with a smoothly-run first week, gave the charter school founder and principal Timothy Anderson second thoughts.

Town Manager Mark Haddad also denied Anderson's request to put up all 115 students because of safety and liability issues in the 70-year-old building.

Originally, Anderson had talked with Haddad about renting out a portion of the old Osgood for 25 to 30 kids.

"We were working towards getting that accomplished when Tim said that they wanted to put all 110 or 115 students there because something had come up," said Haddad. "I told them that that was too much and we decided not to proceed with it."

According to Anderson, the first few days at the secondary school on Nantasket Avenue went well enough for him to realize that though the fit was a bit tight, a basic re-shifting of classroom assignments had allowed the students to continue in their old school.

"If you can imagine kids rushing between classes down a corridor, then just imagine that corridor as a 3.7 mile drive," said Anderson. "That's a long corridor. So we started running into the problem of wanting everyone in one building. We asked Mark if that would be possible and he said, 'Not really.'"

Because many older students spend time out of school at work sites or college courses, there was more room available at the Hull school site than had originally been accounted for.

"It makes more sense to keep the students all together in one space and not accept new students for now," said Anderson.

Anderson said that it was around Aug. 23 that he first learned without an elevator, the school would not be able to use part of the building at 120 Nantasket Ave. that it had been leasing due to lack of handicap accessibility. The structure once housed a motel and restaurant.

"That was only two weeks before school started and we realized we'd have to scramble," he said. "As the date got closer to opening day, we began to look at it a little more clearly. We never went in the Osgood until we'd started the school year for a few days. By then, we realized that we could handle this.

"We're just thankful to Cohasset for their neighborliness and efforts to help us out. We hope that our paths get to cross again," said Anderson.

For now, the old Osgood remains empty and still under discussion for use as a 29-condo facility for senior citizens or new home to the 95-year-old Paul Pratt Library.

LIBRARY CORNER

Vote for your favorite magazine at library

October is the month that the Paul Pratt Memorial Library renews its magazine subscriptions. To help the staff evaluate the usefulness and popularity of its current subscriptions, the library is asking readers which magazines they use most.

At present, the library subscribes to about 150 magazines — all of which may be checked out for home use. "Magazines are an important part of our circulation and we want to make sure we're stocking the right titles," said library director Janet Husband.

So next time you visit the library, be sure to fill out one of the cards at the desk to let the staff know which magazines you value most.

The Cohasset Assemblies to start

Donald Mason, Patricia Leahy and the Committee for the Assemblies announce the starting date will be Oct. 6 at St. Stephen's Church. The Assemblies, a series of social dance classes for fifth and sixth grades designed to introduce youngsters to the basics of social dance and etiquette, have a long tradition in Cohasset.

Each class is opened with a formal receiving line in which the children are taught to properly introduce themselves with a good firm handclasp and good eye contact. The classes include traditional social dances plus contemporary dances, party dances and dance games with candy prizes, making the Assemblies a fun experience for children.

The classes are held Tuesdays from 4:15 to 5:15 p.m. for fifth grade and from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. for sixth grade. Invitations have been mailed to all Cohasset children with dates of classes and subscription information. If you have not received one, please call Mason at (617) 734-3447 or Leahy, (781) 383-1005 or a committee member: fifth-grade girls-Mary Ernst; boys-Donna Morgan; sixth-grade girls-Martha Ogrodnik; Boys-Maureen Terz.

Handicap-access bus conversion still on table

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Still under discussion among school committee members is how best to incorporate handicap-access in at least one of the town fleet's buses so that wheelchair-bound students can travel with peers to and from school and on class trips.

"This is something we'd like to see accomplished," said committee member Mark DeGiacomo. He also pointed out that at this point, handicap access is a legal as well as a social issue.

Indeed, a growing awareness that people requiring handicap-accessibility should be able to travel like everyone else has made its way into national legislation, which will affect the way commercial bus lines provide their service to the public.

New Department of Transportation guidelines will require all bus lines that offer scheduled passenger service to purchase only carriers set up with wheelchair lifts and tie-downs that allow passengers to ride in their own chairs. By the year 2012, only fully wheel-chair accessible vehicles will be allowed to provide passenger service for the bus lines.

For school committee members, the legality of their current handicap-access bus situation was not the driving concern.

Vice-chairman Kathy Ofsthun pointed out that by law, the school is actually covered on this matter. "We provide transportation, "she said. "It's just that the children are not all together."

At this time, a small handicap-access bus provides door-to-door service to transport special needs students. But the separation of physically challenged students from their peers has been a long-standing concern to committee members.

At this time, a small handicap-access bus provides door-to-door service to transport special needs students.

But the separation of physically challenged students from their peers has been a long-standing concern to committee members.

Former school superintendent Stephen Hart looked into converting the fleet's largest bus so that it would be handicap-accessible. At that time, he placed the cost for bus conversion at $3,000 to $3,500.

The issue has remained on the table, with most of the discussion directed at the number of seats that would need to be removed to make way for a lift and wheelchair space.

School Supt. Edward "Ted" Malvey, having done some homework on the subject, has found that the number of potential bus riders (for the large bus) for the new Osgood school had already reached 77, if not more. "That means that on any given day, all 77 could opt to take the public ride to school," he said. "With four seats less to make room for a lift and handicap-access space, that's 12 we can't fit." (Each seat can accommodate three students.)

Another aspect that could impact ridership, according to Malvey, is that some parents are now driving Osgood students to school. "Once the newness of school wears off, parents may not drive their kids to school each morning," he said.

Committee member Joe McElroy suggested that the school committee try for a "switcheroo," whereby one of the fleet's newly leased buses could be switched for another bus that would arrive already set up for handicap-access.

"It may take two to three months to do, but handicap-access on buses is more commonplace now," said McElroy.

Malvey said it's not clear whether a handicap-access bus large enough to transport all potential riders exists in any fleet.

DeGiacomo suggested that a slight reconfiguration of bus routes might lessen the number of children on the 77-seat carrier's run.

Malvey plans to get back to the committee about the possibility of procuring a large-enough handicap-access bus as well as whether the current route can be reconfigured to open up some spaces on the 77-seater by adding some students onto any one of the five other Osgood buses.

Household hazardous waste day

The Town of Cohasset will hold its annual Household Hazardous Waste (HHW) Collection Day from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 10, at the parking lot of the new town Department of Public Works (DPW) garage on Cedar Street.

Community Newspaper Company (CNC) is greater Boston's fastest growing media company. We have both skilled and entry-level positions available in our production departments in Marshfield. From this facility, we publish 19 weekly newspapers, 18 weekly shoppers and a variety of niche publications. Come and grow with us, we offer competitive wages and a comprehensive benefits package including a 401(k) plan.

We currently have the following Marshfield-based positions available:

Advertising Manager
We seek an aggressive, experienced sales professional to direct a team of highly motivated retail advertising representatives. Primary responsibility is revenue growth, therefore the successful candidate must be able to hire, train and develop a climate which fosters individual initiative within a team concept. Prior experience with goal setting, performance appraisal and the ability to develop and mentor sales reps is essential. The ideal candidate has experience in cross selling a diverse product line (internet, weeklies, niche products) to maximize company revenue and customer response. Excellent opportunity for those who seek a challenge. Unparalleled financial opportunity for an aggressive overachiever.

Order Entry Administrator
Terrific entry-level opportunity to join our dynamic sales team. Primary responsibilities include accurate data entry, generation of reports from database and resolving minor discrepancies on insertion orders. Candidate must be organized, detail-oriented with good computer skills.

Promotions Manager
We are looking for a self-motivated, proactive, analytical and creative individual with excellent written and verbal communication skills. Must possess a successful track record; preferably in promotions, trade shows, event marketing, sales collateral design & development, sales promotion scheduling, coordination of calendar of events, and solid marketing research skills. Ability to translate marketing information into actionable format for use by advertising salespeople. BS/BA in Marketing, Promotions or Communications preferable.

Editor (2 positions)
Two exciting and challenging positions available for experienced editors. We need two top-notch editors/writers to oversee our award-winning newspapers for the South Shore and Cape Cod. The ideal candidates should have a flair for writing, be creative and able to coordinate and manage a staff of full-time reporters and freelancers. These are key positions with room to try new things and be part of an exciting team looking for innovation. The individuals must be flexible and able to draw on organizational skills to manage sundry tasks.

Courier
Two part-time positions supporting the sales department. Responsible for pick-up at various customer locations on the South Shore. Excellent driving record a must. Hours: M-F 1-5pm.

We have entry-level and skilled positions available in our mailroom and pressroom.

Press Jogger - Full-time positions in our pressroom on the 2nd and 3rd shift. Stack, jog and assist in press set-up. Heavy lifting, standing and bending required.

Collators - Full-time positions in our Mailroom on 2nd and 3rd shift. Assisting with the mailing/inserting operation. Heavy lifting, standing and bending required.

Lamberts Lane to be added to school bus route

Volunteers to help with bus turnaround

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

The half-year-old Lamberts Lane bus issue came to a stop last week when school committee members approved adding the narrow, winding, dead-end street to the scheduled bus route.

The one condition attached to their okay is that a volunteer be present to guide the bus as it backs up to a gated area at the Cohasset Golf Club to make its turnaround.

The decision was reached after committee member Mark DeGiacomo orchestrated several visits to the site with town manager Mark Haddad, selectman Nan Roth, Lamberts Lane residents, a bus and driver; and golf club president Clifford Mitman.

DeGiacomo outlined a number of "unique conditions" on behalf of Lamberts Lane parents and their schoolchildren: nine miles of narrow, winding road; no safety benefit of sidewalks; truck traffic from two business at the end of the road. That combined with assurances that the street's residents would serve as volunteer guides for the bus back-up, was enough to garner the plan's approval from his fellow committee members.

Supt. Edward "Ted" Malvey also noted that there are eight other streets in town that would like to see similar bus service for their children.

School superintendent Edward "Ted" Malvey drove down to the spot himself for a first-hand look.

"I contacted the Motor Vehicle Registry to find out about the legality of this," said Malvey. "It is legal."

"I think it has merit to send a bus down that particular lane," he said.

According to Malvey, the 25 minutes necessary for this particular route will now take an additional 12 minutes for a total of 37.

"I don't think that's too bad," he said. "I come from areas where kids are on buses pushing close to an hour. It's certainly doable."

Malvey also noted that there are eight other streets in town that would like to see similar bus service for their children.

After the school board's unanimous approval, chairman Rick Shea commended the five residents present for supporting the ongoing effort to bring bus service to their street. The residents stood while applauding and thanked DeGiacomo before taking their leave.

"Thank you, Joe, for starting it," Shea added, referring to committee member Joe McElroy's early push to remedy the Lamberts Lane situation.

Vendors are wanted for the Cohasset Village Farmers' Market Harvest Folk Festival which will be held Thursday, Oct. 15 from 1:30-6:30 p.m.

Consider having your business or organization join over 20 farmers and crafters. The vendor registration is $25 for festival space.

In addition to the Farmers' Market, some activities planned are: folk music, story telling, a magic show, a clambake, cooking demonstrations, pony rides, face painting, a haystack game, pumpkin luminary around the duck pond, pumpkin decorating contest, gymnastics demonstrations and more.

Contact the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce for more information at (781) 383-1010.

A wine tasting at the Carousel

The historic Paragon Carousel, built by the Philadelphia Toboggan Company in 1928, continues to please thousands of riders each year. The Carousel boasts 66 "Philadelphia-Style" horses and two Roman-style chariots, led by flower-bedecked horses. In addition to its glorious horses and chariots, the carousel features 35 oil paintings, scalloped rounding boards, 36 cherubs, 18 goddess faces and the original canopy of painted clouds and butterflies.

The Friends of the Paragon Carousel, Inc., and Jake's Seafood presents: The Last Go 'Round '98 — wine tasting, Sunday, Oct. 11, from 5 to 8:30 p.m. at the Paragon Carousel, 205 Nantasket Ave., Hull, 02045. Donations are $50 per person by reservation only. For more information, call (781) 925-0472.

Appalachia Project deadline: Oct. 15

The Cohasset Applachia Service Project is receiving registrations for their 1999 work project trip. Tentative dates for the ASP '99 trip are June 26 through July 4, 1999. The trip is open to anyone, 10th grade and over. Adults are also encouraged to sign on as advisors for the trip. There are forms available in the office at Cohasset High School, and at the following churches here in Cohasset: Second Congregational, First Parish, St. Stephen's Episcopal, St. Anthony's Catholic and Panagia Greek Orthodox. Forms with a non-refundable fee of $50 must be returned by Oct. 15. For information call Gary Ritts at (781) 383-0345.

The Artist's Way

A workshop for creative people in all walks of life.

To be held at the Second Congregational Church, next to Cohasset Town Hall.

Based on Julia Cameron's book., The Artist's Way, this workshop is designed to provide a process for unblocking one's own creativity and an opening to new benefits, confidence and productivity. No artistic background is required, while those in artistic pursuits are welcome for renewal and inspiration. "Wherev you are is the starting point," says the course. Come with a willingness to follow a process, suspend any concerns for the outcome...and see what happens for you.

Classes will be held at the Second Congregational Church, Thursday evenings at 7:30 p.m. beginning Oct. 1 and will continue through Nov. 19. Margot Cheel will be the facilitator. There is no charge for the course, but do bring a notebook and a copy of The Artist's Way by Julie Cameron to the first class.

Master plan tops Cohasset Village agenda

Revitalization effort moves along

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Nobody said revitalizing Cohasset Village would be easy, but it has its rewards. Successfully obtaining grants or developing an effective plan to connect the harbor and the village help make all the work worthwhile. Members of the Village Revitalization Task Force Committee met last month to discuss their latest projects, including a master plan for the village, a vision for Cohasset's downtown, future grant proposals, and plans to develop ideas to connect the harbor and the village.

"Things are going very well," said task force Chairman Dean Rizzo. "We are hoping to soon acquire a key component of the village revitalization: a master plan to deal with the improvements we're suggesting and an economic development plan."

The task force has applied for a $35,000 grant to pay for the entire cost of the master plan, which would address key deficiencies in the area and offer well-defined, uniform solutions that reflect the needs of the whole community.

"Currently, we are developing a scope of work for what we want to do," Rizzo said. "Also, we are working on the committee's vision for the village. Hopefully, all this work will be done soon, and we can issue an RFP (request for proposal) and select a planner. We can't do a lot of work without funding."

Rizzo said the task force is hoping it acquires the $35,000 grant for the master plan. If Cohasset's application is rejected, the task force will ask the town for funds.

The task force has applied for a $35,000 grant to pay for the entire cost of the master plan, which would address key deficiencies in the area and offer well-defined, uniform solutions that reflect the needs of the whole community.

"We are developing a master plan for the village, which we anticipate the town will incorporate into its proposed master plan for the entire town," Rizzo said. "If we need to seek town funding, we will spend more time coordinating the two plans together to save money."

Some of the areas in the village that need attention include infrastructure problems, poor signage, inadequate parking, poor sidewalks and inadequate lighting. Businesses frequently open and close, there are no large restaurants, sidewalks are not suitable for pedestrians, and the harbor is difficult to reach even though it is within walking distance from the village.

Connecting the village and the harbor is a problem that is receiving extra attention from the task force thanks to a $5,000 Department of Housing and Community Development Municipal Incentive Grant. Local Architect Jim Shipsky is developing possible solutions to the problem with input from the task force and the community. Ri[illegible] about 40 residents respond[illegible] survey in The Mariner asking input on village/harbor connections. Shipsky plans to publish the results in the Oct. 8 Mariner, five days before a public meeting on the subject.

The task force is also pursuing grants for several projects. The state awarded the town a $165,000 grant to construct a new sidewalk and associated improvements in front of St. Stephen's church. The sidewalk proposal is on hold while the task force focuses on the master plan. There is also a regional application for $60,000 to study ways to connect the downtowns of Hingham, Hull, Scituate and Cohasset to attract consumers, tourists and visitors from neighboring communities.

Fire Department open house

The Cohasset Fire Department at 44 Elm St. will host its second open house Oct. 3 from 1 to 4 p.m. Learn about fire prevention and enjoy free Papa Gino's pizza. Meet Sparky!

This year the Cohasset Fire and Police Departments will sponsor a Kidcare Photo I.D. Event. The purpose of the Kidcare Event is to provide parents with a free standardized, high quality instant photograph of their child in an I.D. booklet where they can also maintain current vital statistics. The Kidcare Photo I.D. provides parents with information necessary to have handy if their child is ever lost or abducted.

This year the Kidcare Event will be for those children in grades Kindergarten through third grade.

Memorial for shipwreck victims

The Ancient Order of Hibernians, Father John Murphy Plymouth Division No. 9, will hold a memorial Mass Sunday, Oct. 4, at St. Anthony's Church on South Main Street in Cohasset. The Mass will commemorate the shipwreck of the Brig St. John which took place Oct. 6, 1849. This shipwreck resulted in the loss of 99 lives of emigrants who were fleeing the Great Hunger in Ireland.

After the 1 p.m. Mass, there will be a reception at the Cohasset Community Center, where the principal speaker will be Peter Stevens, a regular contributor to the "Boston Irish Reporter," as well as a gentleman who has written several books about New England and Irish American history. Coffee and light refreshments will be available.

After the community center they will go to the Cohasset Cemetery where a wreath will be left and final prayers will be said in memory of the victims of this tragedy. Everyone is invited to attend. Anyone wishing more information, may call John Sullivan at (781) 545-1144.

Village, harbor issues to take center stage

Public forum is Oct. 13

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Local Architect Jim Shipsky has been charged with the task of studying ways to connect the village to the harbor and how to revitalize both areas. Using a $5,000 state grant, Shipsky has spent several months soliciting public comment, conducting surveys, and meeting with various committees to discuss the village and the harbor. Shipsky has collected enough ideas to present the information at a public discussion on the subject.

The Village Revitalization Task Force will hold a public discussion next Tuesday, Oct. 13 at 7 p.m. in the town hall auditorium. Shipsky will also use the forum to discuss a survey which appeared in The Mariner asking for residents' comments on various proposals for the village and the harbor. The results of the survey appear on page 5. At the forum, Shipsky will also go over some of the ideas he has included in his planning study at Tuesday's meeting.

"There were 29 responses total, clearly not enough for me to claim a representative sample of the town," Shipsky said. "Maybe the responses represent primarily the more opinionated, but I have already incorporated some comments into my planning study."

Despite the small number of responses, Shipsky said he was surprised by some of the comments he received. None of the respondents

Political season sprouts an early crop of signs

By David Tibbetts
CORRESPONDENT

Political signs. They're everywhere. Especially this year when incumbent state representative Mary Jeanette Murray, D-Cohasset, is facing a challenge from newcomer Garrett Bradley of Hingham. The mere existence of an important political race shouldn't affect the number of signs in town this early in the election cycle. After all, Cohasset has a town policy prohibiting political signs until two weeks before a primary or general election and one week after. Residents must also pay $1 for each sign. But someone has challenged the town's policy, which is not a bylaw, as unconstitutional and a restriction on free speech. Currently, the policy is not being enforced.

"It is the right of the people under the Constitution for free political speech. What they had was a system of regulation that no one would own up to."

— Norm Paley, Malone supporter

The issue of the signs first came up publicly at the Sept. 29 selectmen's meeting when selectman Nan Roth lamented the number of political signs already on front lawns six weeks before the election. The selectmen thought there was a town bylaw in place, but after some checking, Town Manager Mark Haddad determined there was no bylaw. Haddad couldn't find any-

King Street guardrails stalled

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

King Street neighbors, who are members of a group lobbying for increased safety measures on their narrow winding road, say installation of guardrails could make the problem worse.

"We ask you to postpone them to allow us to research other alternatives," said Heidi Salerno, 487 King St.

The group — known as ASK! (A Safer King Street) — was concerned about a warrant article before the Oct. 26 Special Town Meeting asking for $15,000 to install guardrails in two places along the street which is described as one of the most scenic in town.

Salerno explained that the street is so narrow that the guardrails will force pedestrians into the road and create a visual barrier making the cars travel more closely creating conditions for a head-on collision.

Plans were to install guardrails along the road at Peppermint Book and on James Hill.

Selectman Nan Roth said the guardrails would keep a car from going into Lily Pond and affecting the town's water supply. She also said it would be interesting to hear other people's opinions on the issue.

Ed Connolly, 1 Lily Pond Lane, said more research on the negative aspects of guard rails is needed.

And Debbie Cook, 281 King St., said that pushing baby carriages or riding a bike would be more treach-

Twenty years in Cohasset

This week, the Cohasset Mariner celebrates its 20th anniversary. When the paper debuted in October of 1978 Jimmy Carter was president, Michael Dukakis was governor, the prime rate hovered at 12 percent, and the average house in town cost about $68,000.

Inside, through photographs, interesting facts, stories and familiar faces — we take a look back over the past two decades and spotlight some local people whose contributions help make the Cohasset Mariner unique. We hope you enjoy this special issue which is our way of thanking you, our readers, for 20 great years.

PUBLIC NOTICE

TOWN OF COHASSET, MA
COHASSET SEWER COMMISSION

PUBLIC MEETING

A Public Meeting has been scheduled by the Sewer Commission to provide information and solicit responses from concerned residents regarding sewer warrant articles to be presented at the upcoming Town Meeting. The proposed warrant articles include the following:

Art. 10 - Increased funding authorization to permit the Town to complete the North Cohasset Project.

Art. 11 - Funding to evaluate and design the extension of the Central Cohasset Project to the area of Lily Pond.

Art. 12 - Authorization of the taking of additional easements in connection with the Central Cohasset Project.

Copies of the warrant articles and related exhibits may be examined prior to Town Meeting at the Office of the Town Clerk at the Town Hall, and at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Location: Town Hall Auditorium
41 Highland Avenue

Date: Thursday, October 15, 1998

Time: 7:30 p.m.

Edward M. Guild, Chairman
Cohasset Sewer Commission

Register to vote

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or election day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections

The last day to register to vote for the State Election Nov. 3 is Wednesday, Oct. 14, and the last day to register for the Special Town Meeting is Friday, Oct. 16. The Clerk's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. on both these dates. Mail-in registration forms are available from the Town Clerk's office, Cohasset Post Office and Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Correction is noted

Last week's article about a Black Rock Road gas leak incorrectly used the word "emission" instead of "ignition". It should have read, "[Fire Captain Mike Trask] evacuated the area and stretched a hose line from the engine to make sure that if there were any gas ignition the fire department would be able to control it," explained [Fire Chief Roger] Lincoln. The Mariner regrets the error.

Household hazardous waste day

The Town of Cohasset will hold its annual Household Hazardous Waste (HHW) Collection Day from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 10, at the parking lot of the new town Department of Public Works (DPW) garage on Cedar Street.

While the event is primarily for Cohasset residents, it is also open to resident of other South Shore towns who get a "Reciprocity Letter" in advance from their local board of health or department of public works and are in towns that are members of the South Shore which are: Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Scituate and Weymouth.

Household hazardous waste items accepted include paint thinner, kerosene, gasoline, dry gas, paint strippers, spot removers, degreasers, antifreeze, brake fluid, waxes, photo chemicals, drain cleaners, glues, weed killers, pesticides, herbicides, insecticides, rat poison, insect repellents, batteries, acids and aerosols.

Wastes that will NOT be accepted include any type of commercial wastes, such as PCB's, dioxin containing wastes, radioactive materials, explosive materials, ammunition, pathological wastes and compressed gasses (other than aerosols).

Cultural Council grants available

The Local Cultural Council of Cohasset, Sen. Robert Hedlund and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, announce that $3,300 was recently made available to Cohasset from the Mass. Cultural Council in Boston to fund applications for community cultural programs and PASS grants. (PASS is a ticket subsidy program for school children).

Application forms are available at the Selectmen's office at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

Application deadline grant forms must be received by Thursday, Oct. 15, for Arts Lottery/Pass Grants 1999 cycle.

Mail or deliver completed applications in care of: Nancy Connolly, Chairperson, Cohasset Town Hall/Selectmen's Office.

For more information, call 383-9883 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Village, harbor issues to take center stage

are identified by name, but the comments serve as an interesting look at the way people feel about connecting the harbor and the village.

About two-thirds of the people who responded favor changes to the village harbor area and offered suggestions in harmony with Shipsky's survey. Many people favored using town funds for some improvements, especially a walkway and changes to the village center.

"This really surprised me," Shipsky said. "I thought the question made it easy to say, 'Let the Feds pay for it.', but 20 people want it enough to pay for it. This is solid support."

Some of the positive comments from the survey include: "I would like to see a jogging/bike path along the water. A lot of our town is too dangerous and hilly to enjoy as a family. We love jogging, biking, roller blading and just got back from Boulder, Colorado, where the developed the Boulder Creek for all to enjoy with a 20-mile path along it. We spent every day there. It's fabulous."

Another respondent lamented the lack of dining in the area. "If you want to go for an affordable dinner or drinks, you need to go to Hingham, Hull or Scituate to be by the water. What about Cohasset?"

Other people responded more succinctly. "It's about time," one person commented.

Some residents responded by telephone with ideas that Shipsky loved. Charles Santoro suggested holding an annual kayak tournament and festival in the harbor. Santoro suggested that kayakers could race in the rapids at the Border Street bridge. The festival could include a lobster cooking contest, a chowder competition, parking at the Charthouse with shuttles to Sandy Beach and the Music Circus, and possibly a blues festival or other musical entertainment.

Al Odermatt suggested drawing a picture of the existing area and then how it would look if all the changes were implemented. He also disliked the idea of using the DPW garage as a teen enter because it will interfere with the Red Lion Inn.

Other respondents suggested eliminating overhead wires, improving wheelchair accessibility on sidewalks and planting elm trees along Elm Street.

The people who responded to the survey were evenly split on additional parking in the village and the harbor.

"What surprised me here was how many respondents who were otherwise strongly in favor of the suggested improvements were against having more parking," Shipsky said. "These people do not want to see more cars and parking lots in Cohasset."

Not everyone liked the idea of making changes to the village and harbor. Seven people disagreed with the entire purpose of the study.

"There were seven respondents who were extremely negative about the whole thing," Shipsky said. "They circled every 'DISAGREE'. They think Cohasset should be left alone. No signs to identify things, changes of any sort, no more parking, no public toilets. They clearly feel strongly about this."

Some of their comments: "Leave the town as it is. The beauty of the town is that it is quaint and untouched. If people want activity and boardwalks, go to another town. A few feared turning Cohasset into a less attractive town. "This is not Rockport. We don't want it to be." Some chastised Shipsky for his ideas. "Enjoy your job; don't overdo it," wrote one respondent. "Please do not destroy the beauty of Cohasset. It is not a place to make your millions. It is a wonderful place to live," wrote another.

Residents will have an opportunity to discuss the survey, offer suggestions or talk about matters related to the village and harbor at Tuesday's meeting.

King Street guardrails stalled

erous with the addition of guard rails.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said the board is committed to working with the group to find solutions to safety issues on the street but the matter went beyond abutters' concerns.

"We need to look at what may be safest for all citizens who use the street," she said.

Selectmen decided to keep the request for the money in the town warrant but assured the residents no decision on guard rails would be reached without more research and their input.

Initially ASK! wanted the town to close off King Street to through traffic – which would divert the traffic from Beechwood to Route 3A — but have agreed to see how effective a new four-way stop at King and Pond Street is toward slowing down traffic.

In a telephone interview, ASK! Member Betsy Connolly said a new traffic study revealed that of the 2200 cars that travel King Street daily, 1600 use the street in the commuting hours of 6-9 a.m. and 4-6:30 p.m.

"That shows a lot of cars are cutting through from Norwell and Scituate," she said.

Political season sprouts an early crop of signs

thing in writing referring to political signs, and the selectmen determined it had just been an informal town policy used over the years.

The problem with the sign actually started before the primary with Norm Paley of Scituate, who was working on the Joe Malone campaign. A Malone supporter wanted to put up 25 signs in Cohasset, but couldn't afford to pay $25 for 25 signs. Paley was outraged.

"I went ballistic," Paley said. "It is the right of the people under the Constitution for free political speech. What they had was a system of regulation that no one would own up to."

Building Inspector Robert Egan said he first became involved when Paley complained about the policy. Egan said the town has bylaws covering every type of sign except for political signs. As an example, real estate signs are restricted to one six-square-foot sign in one location on the actual property that is for sale.

Although Egan said the town would probably craft a bylaw limiting the size and timing of political signs without charging a fee, selectmen have rejected such a plan. On the advice of Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, selectmen decided not to pursue a policy so they would not infringe upon anyone's right to free speech.

Paley said his research has shown that state law does not allow fees for political signs, but does allow towns to restrict when signs can be posted.

"State law says you can regulate dates, you can restrict signs to private property, you can implement certain control measure, you can ask for a bond and to be responsible for taking down signs so the DPW doesn't have to do it," Paley said. "I think that's reasonable.

"But a town doesn't have the right to charge you for a service when they're not providing one. It's not like charging for a building permit to pay a building inspector."

How do the two candidates feel about all of this? Murray has adhered to the policy for all of her previous elections. But this year, she said she has been inundated with requests for signs. Murray is also facing a challenger this year. She said Hingham used to ban all political signs until the attorney general ruled the restrictions unconstitutional. Generally, she doesn't place signs in Hingham, but added she may have to this year because she is facing a local challenger.

In addition, she usually took down her Cohasset signs right after the primary with the help of her husband, who died not too long ago. Andrew Paley filed his complaint. Murray spoke with Haddad, who told her that the policy would not be enforced and she could keep her signs out. Many of the signs bearing her name are left-over from the primary.

"I've never had a problem with the policy and I always paid because I thought it was a bylaw that had been passed at a town meeting I missed," Murray said. "If that's the policy they want, I would abide by it."

Bradley also had no problem taking down his signs until two weeks before the primary if Murray agreed to do the same.

"We took our signs down after the primary, but kept seeing Murray signs as we went through Cohasset," Bradley said. "The we were told it isn't really a rule. Signs are a necessary evil in a campaign. We've put some up because we really don't want to be at a disadvantage. If Mary Jeanette (Murray) agrees to take them down, I would agree to that."

This close to the election there may be little point in taking down political signs Murray said, adding that she would do it if the town asked her to abide by the policy. With the election just four weeks away, she may be right. Both candidates plan to take down their signs within one week following the November election.

Definition of storage to be studied

Just what the zoning by-law means by "storage" when it pertains to trailers is something the zoning board is pondering.

James R. Lennon, 20 Tad Lane, is appealing the building inspector's decision that the camping trailer being kept across the street is not a violation of the zoning by-laws. Even though his neighbors, the Campedellis, have moved the trailer further back, Lennon can still see it from his house and thinks it's unsightly.

John McNabb, who is the spokesman for Lennon, said the 34-foot Airstreamer should not be allowed in town for more than 30 days, under the zoning by-laws.

However, the zoning board and building inspector aren't so sure. The question may come down to what the definition of "storage" is.

Building Inspector Bob Egan explained the zoning by-law, in his view, protects against trailers or mobile homes being used as living quarters to replace a house.

"It is not intended to prohibit someone owning a camping trailer and then when they are not using it, legally parking it on their property and adhering to all setbacks, etc.," he said.

McNabb said he inferred that "stored," which is not defined in the by-law, meant being enclosed in a building, like a garage.

Noreen Campedelli said the silver-colored trailer is a recreational vehicle.

"I guess beauty is in the eye of the beholder," she said.

The zoning board pointed out that the storage of boats is allowed in all districts in town and bring about few complaints.

"Winter storage of boats is a very time-honored tradition," member Jane Goedecke said.

"And a messy one," member Barbara Power replied.

The board took the matter under advisement.

"It comes down to our definition of storage," chairman Woody Chittick said.

Ribbon-cutting ceremony at the new Osgood School

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

A crowd of 500 turned out Sunday afternoon for a ribbon-cutting ceremony to mark the opening of the new Joseph Osgood Elementary School and was treated to a tour of the new facility followed by a playground presentation.

"We had a good crowd, it ran smoothly and I think everyone enjoyed themselves," said school committee member and event organizer Patricia Martin of the late afternoon gathering that gathered on the new school grounds.

Community representatives who had been involved in bringing the new school to fruition stood by as school committee chairman Rick Shea cut a large gold-trimmed red ribbon. Joining him were Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris, school facilities chairman David Chase, Osgood Principal Marilee Cantelmo, school superintendent Dr. Ted Malvey and past-school superintendent Stephen Hart.

"The best part was the 'oohing' and 'aahing' people did when they toured the building and the pride that registered in the faces of the children and staff."

— Patricia Martin, school committee

"We had everything going for us including the weather," said Martin. "The best part was the 'oohing' and 'aahing' people did when they toured the building and the pride that registered in the faces of the children and staff."

The playground presentation included a bench for the site, which the husbands of Adrienne McCarthy and Mary Goodwin, who had been involved in organizing the project, delivered with pride and humor.

"Ronald Goodwin and John McCarthy presented a bench to their wives," said Martin, "because they were proud of their wives' achievements, recognized what a difficult role they had played and said that the bench would give them a chance to sit."

The bench was purchased with funds from the PSO (Parent School Organization) and another donor.

Those members of the crowd who had been involved in the effort to get the new school up and running were singled out for recognition, both during the ribbon-cutting ceremony and later, when the playground was dedicated.

"I was glad that it went so well," said Martin. "It was inspiring that so many people showed. It was a real good feeling for the community and a real source of pride for everyone."

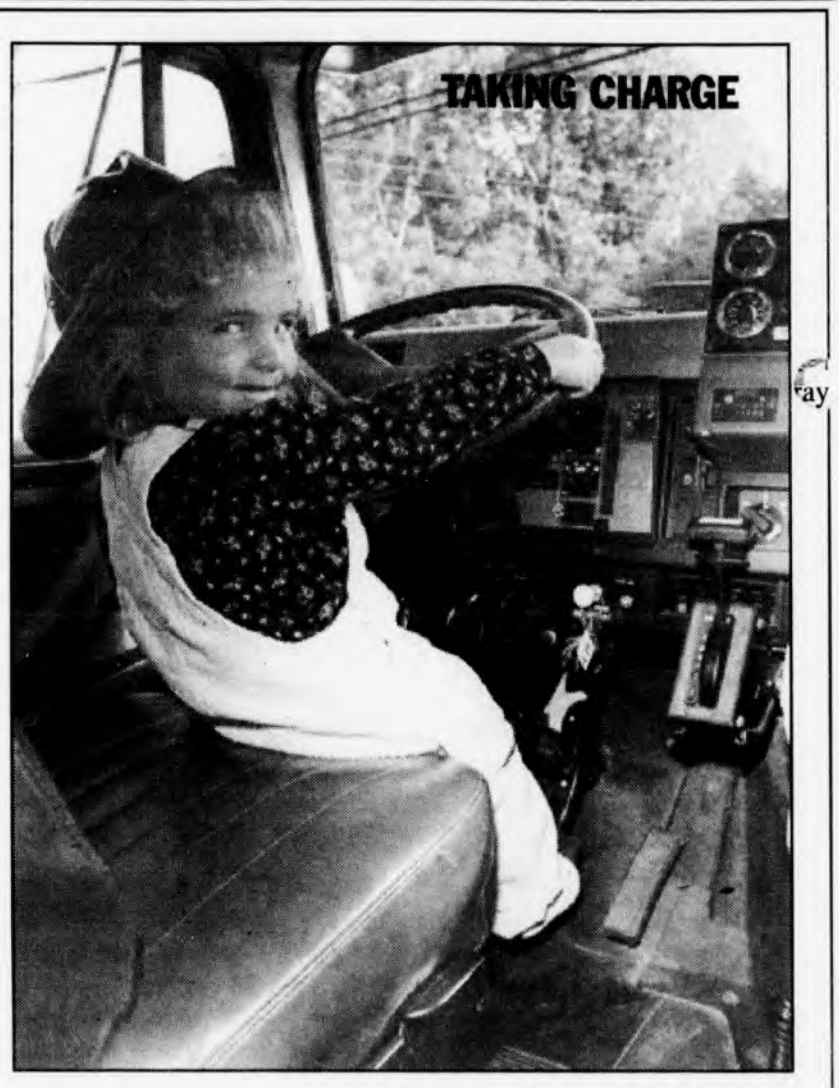
AROUND TOWN

WELCOME HOME

As I begin to write this week's around town column, I must admit to being a little nervous! Why, you ask? Well, my former English teacher, Mr. MacDonald, is back, living in Cohasset! When I met him today, he told me that he had just finished reading my column — oh heavens! I can only tell you what I told him, that everything I know about writing I learned from him. What a wonderful man! And what a terrific teacher! I'm sure that everyone felt exactly the same way, and that through his teaching many are probably enjoying reading and writing as much as I do! Many thanks to you, Mr. MacDonald, and Welcome Home!

ON THE MEND



Dennis Walsh was spotted around town yesterday, he looks and feels great! His surgery is behind him, and everything is A-OK! You know he was feeling much better, he was up at the high school putting the hockey team together. Such good news! Den reports that he will be back teaching in November, and we're sure that his students cannot wait!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

"Lokie" had a wonderful 72nd birthday Sept. 30 — his brother and sisters and other relatives surprised him by taking him out to dinner to celebrate, and a great time was had by all! Happy birthday, Lokie, and here's to your next 72 years!

DEDICATED SEASON

If you weren't there, you have probably heard about it by now, but on the off chance that you haven't, we'll tell you — last Friday night (the opening home game for the CHS Football Skippers), the Gridiron Club asked Clark Chatterton to draw the winning raffle ticket. When Clark got out on the field it was announced that the team had dedicated their season to him — then, with their helmets held high, each member of the team shook his hand, as did the coaches. They showed him their helmets, they all have CC on them in honor of Clark. Isn't that just the nicest thing to do? You had better believe there wasn't a dry eye in the house, it was very moving! So much so that even Clark was rendered speechless! He was very touched by the gesture, and is cheering even louder for "his" Skippers!

OH, THOSE SIGNS

As was noted in last week's issue of the Mariner, lots of people don't like the political signs that are "sprouting up" all over town — what several people have mentioned to us are the yard sale signs — why aren't the sale holders made to take the sign down after the sale is over? Just one more thing to think about.

MAGAZINE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Please don't forget that October is the month that the Paul Pratt Memorial Library renews its magazine subscriptions and they want your input as to which ones you use the most. Make it a point to fill out one of the cards at the desk, so that the staff may do their best to please you!

GET WELL SOON

We surely hope that Bob Leavitt is on the mend as this goes to press! Bob has been battling viral pneumonia for some time now, but we are confident that he'll be fine! There are few people finer than Bob, and everyone loves him! Couple that with all the prayers headed his way, and we know he will win! Just know that everyone loves you and that everyone cares, sooo much!

Are You "Programming" Yourself For Good Health?
Like a computer, your body has to be programmed for best results. Rest, proper diet, sensible exercise and a good mental attitude are essential. Sometimes, even with all those, good health seems elusive. The difference could be a condition you haven't even noticed — a vertebra that has gotten out of position, perhaps from a fall long before. When that happens, the nerves that extend out from between the vertebrae aren't able to serve body organs as they should. Once the vertebra is restored to its rightful position, the body is given the opportunity to program natural health. A chiropractic checkup can be an important first step in programming health.

HATS OFF

Hats off to Mary Goodwin and Adrienne MacCarthy, all of their efforts certainly paid off for the new Osgood playground! According to the proper authorities (the kiddos) everything is just as they hoped it would be and it is a lot of fun! Good work, ladies! By the way, if ever you need coordinators, remember all of the work that they did, and all of the work they got their enlisted help to do! Awesome!

FLU CLINICS

That nasty word is back — FLU! We have been asked to remind Seniors that there are two Flu Clinics for you: Tuesday, Oct. 13, 10 a.m., at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., and Friday, Oct. 16, 10 a.m. to noon at Harborview, 60 Elm St., Cohasset. There will also be Community Flu Clinics for all Cohasset residents: Saturday, Oct. 17, 10 a.m. to noon, at the Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.; Saturday, October 24, 10 a.m. to noon, at Cohasset Town Hall; and, Tuesday, Oct. 27, 7 to 9 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. You are asked to please wear a short-sleeved shirt!

Owls of New England

The South Shore Community Center, in conjunction with South Shore Natural Science Center, will present "Owls of New England" Oct. 13 at 1 p.m. This 45-minute presentation will introduce youngsters to these birds of the night with an opportunity to learn about these magnificent, silent hunters and see a live owl up close. Tickets are $5 and are limited. Pre-registration for the event is necessary.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

A generation of news

Twenty years ago this week, the Cohasset Mariner debuted in town. While in the overall scheme of things, two decades is just a moment in time — for those of us who have lived through that moment, it's everything. Children were born and grew up, some friends and family passed away, while others got married, changed careers and moved away.

A generation ago, Cohasset was much the same place it is today. A beautiful seaside town, it was still recovering from the after effects of the "Storm of '78" in October when the premier issue of the Mariner arrived in your mailboxes. In contrast, the winter of 1998 was a mild one with no major storms.

The planning board — chaired by Glenn Pratt — completed a cemetery study that year. Today, Mr. Pratt sits on the cemetery study committee, which is still grappling with the issue. And the waiting list for mooring permits was as much a problem then as it is now as evidenced by then harbor committee chairman Charles G. Fink's recommendation that establishing a new procedure for mooring space is a priority.

Some local landmarks changed hands or were created. Hugo's was replaced by the Chart House now soon to be replaced by Atlantica. The Log 'n Line, now Bernard's, was a popular spot for locals and the Minot Light Replica and the refurbished Lightkeepers' Residence hadn't yet come into being.

Two major motion pictures called Cohasset home for a summer — "The Witches of Eastwick" in 1986 and "Housesitter" in 1991.

We were happy to find that some familiar names and faces were as involved then in town affairs as they are today.

Harold Litchfield, who took over the new position of DPW superintendent just last year, was highway surveyor; Sheila Evans and Barbara Power were and are library trustees (Mrs. Power, who sits on the zoning board today, was also a planning board member in 1978); Noel Ripley was and is chairman of the Cohasset Historical Commission. Some people changed hats or moved up the ladder — then Selectman Mary Jeanette Murray was also our state representative; Police Chief Brian Noonan was a young patrolman and Fire Chief Roger Lincoln was a young firefighter.

Little did we know in 1978 that William F. Weld who ran unsuccessfully for state attorney general losing to Francis X. Bellotti would be a future governor. And who would have guessed that after Gov. Michael Dukakis failed to win the nomination of his party in the state primary that year — setting the stage for a new governor, Edward J. King — Gov. Dukakis would stage a comeback four years later.

With the prime rate hovering at 12 percent and price increases in Middle East oil driving inflation — state taxpayers would soon take control of their local taxes by passing Prop. 2-1/2 in 1980.

All that news aside, no anniversary issue would be complete without thanking our cartoonist, Jim Hamilton; around town columnist, Sallyann Chatterton and sports correspondent Jim O'Sullivan for all the "local color" they add to the paper every week. And of course, we couldn't do it without you, our readers.

Over the past 20 years, the Cohasset Mariner has been proud to publish the most thorough coverage of the place you call home, be it in the schools, sports, town government, community events, civic groups or people around town. We look forward to being there for the next generation and beyond.

More EEE virus found in mosquitoes

The most recent report from the Eastern Equine Encephalitis Surveillance Program of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, dated Oct. 2, indicated that the Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) virus has been isolated "from five pools of ... mosquitoes trapped on 9/27 in Kingston (1), Carver (1), Easton (1) and Halifax (2)." The report also notes that "a total of eight EEE virus isolates ... have been identified in mosquitoes trapped through 9/21 in Rhode Island."

Last week's edition of the Cohasset Mariner (Oct. 1, page 5), listed five precautions to take, as recommended by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. The Mosquito Control Committee of the Cohasset Board of Health urges all citizens to observe and put into practice all those precautions applicable to their situation.

For more questions, call the Cohasset Board of Health at 383-4116 or Charles Gainor at 383-0498.

Parents grateful for support

DEAR SCHOOL COMMITTEE MEMBERS:

On behalf of the residents, we would like to thank the school committee for their time and consideration in resolving the Lamberts Lane bus issue. As parents, we have a great sense of relief that our children's safety has been addressed.

Throughout this process a number of people have been helpful and generous with their time: Joe McElroy, the Cohasset Police including Officer Richard Yocum, Cliff Mitman of the Cohasset Golf Club, the Board of Selectman, Mark Haddad, Hugh Morgan and especially Mark DeGiacomo.

In support of new library at Osgood School

TO THE EDITOR:

I was director of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for 29 years, retiring in June 1998.

The Board of Library Trustees are giving the town excellent advice: to turn the Joseph Osgood School into a public library.

The outgrown library building and site have hampered library services for several years. If the town misses this opportunity, services will continue to be inadequate. Cohasset will not long endure an inferior library. Will the town act in five years, 10 years? Will a site as good as Osgood School be available then? Will land and building then cost closer to $10 million?

Cohasset residents make unfair, uncompensated use of the Hingham Library. Some compensation to Hingham would be appropriate if Cohasset does not furnish accessible, adequate services.

The Board of Library Trustees worked very hard from 1973-78 to develop a marvelous renovation of the library, at a modest cost of $200,000. At that time I strongly recommended a new, one-level library with adequate parking. The renovation has served a good 20-year life, capping a fine 100 years of service from Paul Pratt's gift.

Now the town has a fine opportunity to again renew the town library, founded 120 years ago under the leadership of then-superintendent of schools Joseph Osgood.

Osgood Library supported

TO THE EDITOR:

There's a great opportunity in Cohasset to have a library for the 21st century at a comparatively low cost. Then we could enjoy the many services a modern public library building offers — easy access, all services on one floor, space for more books, computers, tapes, videos, space for teenagers, space for a meeting room for library programs.

Handsome as the Paul Pratt building is, it was built for a smaller population, for the library needs of the public nearly 100 years ago. We need to look ahead to the next century, to be able to provide library resources needed then.

I was much impressed by the architect's plans for remodeling the Osgood School into a library. The exterior looked like the public building it is and the interior is well adapted to serve library needs. The floor plan is flexible, so that whatever future technologies that might develop could be provided for. If the school can be recycled as a library, everyone in town can benefit, from toddlers to the oldest citizens. Eventually we would have to build a larger library, undoubtedly at higher cost. Why not seize this opportunity now?

I have spent all my working life as a librarian and have been involved in planning three library buildings and remodeling a fourth. I see the use of the Osgood School for a public library as a great advantage to the town of Cohasset. Plan to go to Town Meeting Monday evening, Oct. 26, and support Article 8 in the warrant. I urge parents whose children will be using the library in the coming years, and indeed all others, to vote for this use of the Osgood School.

Community Center looks great

TO THE EDITOR:

If you have recently been downtown Cohasset, you have probably noticed how wonderful the Community Center looks!

We have just finished painting the outside of the building thanks to Keating Painting Co. We are in the process of hanging shutters on the outside of the building thanks to Matt Salerno. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset has trimmed, planted and edged in our front yard and what a difference it has made! Barbara Anglin, The Secret Gardener, has done a wonderful job on the Friendship Perennial Border Garden, as can be seen from the abundance of flowering plantings. She is looking for new perennials to add, and would love some Japanese Anemones and Coneflowers. If anyone is cleaning out their garden this fall, we would be happy to accept any plantings they might have to donate! Please keep in mind that she would love to add in some spring bulbs, particularly Anemone Blanda and Grape Muscari, or any other bulbs you might have. To donate, call the Center at 383-0088. We can arrange for pick up, or you can drop them at the office during the week.

Again, I would like to say "Hats Off!" to all of the Center's friends who have helped us spruce up our appearance this year!

ZBA approves dog runs

The zoning board approved a special permit allowing the addition of 15 dog runs in the west wing at the kennel at 249 Cedar St.

The existing kennel, which was built in 1983, has places for 60 dogs but only half those cages have dog runs. There are no plans to increase the number of dogs.

The plan is a scaled-down version of the one proposed last spring which asked for 30 additional dog runs. Kennel owners, John and Christine Millar, subsequently dropped plans to add an east wing with 15 dog runs because it further encroached into the sideline setback restriction.

The zoning board was satisfied that the increased dog runs would not exacerbate any noise problems. The owners said there would actually be less barking because the dogs would not have to be removed from their cages and walked by hand. When that happens, the dogs are paraded in front of other dogs which stirs them up.

"They made a reasonable case to cut down the noise," chairman Woody Chittick said.

The perils of courtesy in the workplace

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Little did Safeway supermarkets know that when they started their "Superior Service" campaign to make things a little more pleasant for their customers that they would be opening a can of worms.

But that's the way things seem to go nowadays. There's some form of litigation at the end of even the most innocent of moves.

To Safeway, "Superior Service" meant its employees were supposed to smile at customers, not snarl at them. They were to be courteous, even offer to carry out their groceries and, above all, make eye contact with them to show them that they really care.

But to some customers, it meant something entirely different.

A dozen Safeway workers in California, 11 women and one man, have filed union grievances, complaining that the smile-and-make-eye-contact policy is being misinterpreted by the customers.

The smile and the eye are taken by shoppers, mostly of the male persuasion, as a signal that the clerk is offering more than help in locating a bunch of grapes or a head of lettuce or even a cut of tenderloin.

The smile and the eye are taken by shoppers, mostly of the male persuasion, as a signal that the clerk is offering more than help in locating a bunch of grapes or a head of lettuce or even a cut of tenderloin.

"Let me decide who I am going to say hello to with a big smile," said Richelle Roberts, a produce clerk in Martinez, Calif., one of the 12, who said she was propositioned every day by men who were not really interested in the price of celery.

(You don't suppose Monica was into "Superior Service" when she smiled at Bill and . . . naw?)

The AP news story of Safeway's dilemma doesn't say what the lone male clerk is grieving but I suspect he's not getting the same attention as the women and he'd like his share before Safeway dumps the policy altogether.

A policy of giving two free drink coupons to frequent fliers as an apology for a recent pilots' strike is about to land Northwest Airlines in hot water, too.

Already, flight attendants (who we used to call "stewardesses") are starting to complain the extra drinks are raising the libidos among the passengers, male, of course.

It's not an exact science, this business of encouraging the help to be nicer to the customers who pay the freight.

The Mass Turnpike Authority tried to solve the problem earlier this year by offering bonuses to toll takers who were polite to the motorists and didn't try to rip the toll out of their hands and throw their change at them. As far as I know, it's working, possibly because there is money involved.

The matter of rude behavior is not confined to the humble workers in the vineyard either.

It wasn't too long ago that the U. S. Congress itself found it necessary to set up a retreat for senators and representatives where they could learn not to insult each other - or at least do it in a nice way.

This was shortly after Cong. Dick Armey of Texas accidentally mispronounced our own Cong. Frank's name was Barney "Fag."

You can measure for yourself the success of the retreat by the dialogue in Bill vs. Monica.

If you're 18 or older, that is.

Looking back on 15 years 'Around Town'

Chatterton spreads the good news

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

Just drop the "ton" and it's a perfect name, acknowledged Sallyann Chatterton, whose Around Town column has given Cohasseters something to chat about for the past 15 years.

Birth announcements, class reunions, work achievements and other milestones are sorted out from the information-filled bits of paper Chatterton collects over the week. "People stop me downtown sometimes," she said. "I'm not always prepared so I write on the backs of deposit slips or whatever I can find."

From the antiquated Smith Corona she puts on her kitchen table, the latest happenings pour out, sometimes at 4 a.m. "I sit there in my sweats and type away," said Chatterton. "A UPS man came by the other day and said, 'You're the first person I've seen with a typewriter in the longest time.' But it's electric, I'm upgraded."

Chatterton inherited the antiquated "office piano", along with the column, from the prior around town writer, who had something new that she wanted to look into at that time and asked Chatterton to cover the position for a little while.

She's been at it ever since, keeping track of the comings and goings of townspeople, many of whom she's known since her relocation to Cohasset at age 16. She and her father moved here from her grandparents' Cape home, where they had moved seven years before when Chatterton's mother died.

It was there that she found a love for the ocean, where she learned to sail and swim. "I've always lived near the sea," said Chatterton. "I'm lucky that way. I don't know what I'd do without it. I used to swim, but now I just love to go there. You realize the scope of things and how little you are."

Perhaps that sensibility carries over into her work, which Chatterton keeps clear of local gossip.

"Happy things, that's what I choose to write about," she said. "If you want negativity, all you have to do is turn on the TV. I don't think there's room for that in a local paper. I also write about people who are sick so people can send them a card. People say, 'thanks for telling me so and so was sick because I wouldn't have known otherwise'."

Chatterton's husband, Clark, athletic director and math teacher at the high school, as well as manager of the Music Circus and Cape Cod Melody Tent concession stands, has recently faced his own bout with illness and received well wishes from many townspeople.

"Clark just finished the last of six months of chemotherapy for his bladder cancer and will soon start radiation treatment," she explained. The prognosis is good because all of the cancer was removed and the follow-up treatments are what the Chattertons refer to as "health insurance".

Chatterton's husband is as much a town fixture as she is. His father, the Rev. Frank Chatterton, was minister of the Second Congregational Church in town. Currently, Clark's mother, Mimi, lives in an addition he built to the back of his house for his parents 25 years ago.

Chatteron explained, "Clark kept asking his father when he was going to retire and found out that his father felt he couldn't retire because the church owned the parsonage—where would he go? So Clark built the add on. That's the kind of person he is."

Their home is filled with colorful collections that pay tribute to family, whether its her brimming shelves of Italian pottery started years ago by her grandmother and then added on to over the years; her grandfather's prize fish plaque; her father's wooden soldiers or her many framed photographs. "I'm a collector," shrugged Chatterton.

Collector, indeed. Favorable feedback is stored up as happily by Chatterton as any other part of her collection. "It's the most rewarding part of the job," she said. "I just got a thank you note from a girl who had been visiting here from Texas. It's amazing how many people receive the Mariner from out of state."

Perhaps the ultimate high point for Sallyann was meeting up with her high school English teacher, Al MacDonald, in town. "He said to me that he just finished reading my column and it was very good. It was as though I'd never even graduated! But he is responsible for all my writing—Al MacDonald. Oh, he was wonderful. I also wrote that he was wonderful in my column."

One more perk for Chatterton, she said, is that people feel that they know her just from reading the column.

Community Newspaper Company (CNC) is greater Boston's fastest growing media company. We have both skilled and entry-level positions available in our production departments in Marshfield. From this facility, we publish 19 weekly newspapers, 18 weekly shoppers and a variety of niche publications. Come and grow with us, we offer competitive wages and a comprehensive benefits package including a 401(k) plan.
We currently have the following Marshfield-based positions available:
Advertising Manager
We seek an aggressive, experienced sales professional to direct a team of highly motivated retail advertising representatives. Primary responsibility is revenue growth, therefore the successful candidate must be able to hire, train and develop a climate which fosters individual initiative within a team concept. Prior experience with goal setting, performance appraisal and the ability to develop and mentor sales reps is essential. The ideal candidate has experience in cross selling a diverse product line (internet, weeklies, niche products) to maximize company revenue and customer response. Excellent opportunity for those who seek a challenge. Unparalleled financial opportunity for an aggressive overachiever.
Order Entry Administrator
Terrific entry-level opportunity to join our dynamic sales team. Primary responsibilities include accurate data entry, generation of reports from database and resolving minor discrepancies on insertion orders. Candidate must be organized, detail-oriented with good computer skills.
Promotions Manager
We are looking for a self-motivated, proactive, analytical and creative individual with excellent written and verbal communication skills. Must possess a successful track record; preferably in promotions, trade shows, event marketing, sales collateral design & development, sales promotion scheduling, coordination of calendar of events, and solid marketing research skills. Ability to translate marketing information into actionable format for use by advertising salespeople. BS/BA in Marketing, Promotions or Communications preferable.
Editor (2 positions)
Two exciting and challenging positions available for experienced editors. We need two top-notch editors/writers to oversee our award-winning newspapers for the South Shore and Cape Cod. The ideal candidates should have a flair for writing, be creative and able to coordinate and manage a staff of full-time reporters and freelancers. These are key positions with room to try new things and be part of an exciting team looking for innovation. The individuals must be flexible and able to draw on organizational skills to manage sundry tasks.
Courier
Two part-time positions supporting the sales department. Responsible for pick-up at various customer locations on the South Shore. Excellent driving record a must. Hours: M-F 1-5pm.
We have entry-level and skilled positions available in our mailroom and pressroom.
Press Jogger - Full-time positions in our pressroom on the 2nd and 3rd shift. Stack, jog and assist in press set-up. Heavy lifting, standing and bending required.

could think of was this summer when she mistakenly added 10 years on to a class reunion story. "The reunion organizer, Paul Sinopoli of CHS 1978, called me and said, 'I'm growing old fast enough, thank you!'"

If she could name one unpleasant aspect to her job, Chatterton would say it's "when someone calls about someone else because they have an ax to grind. If you can't say something nice, don't bother. I don't put that kind of stuff in. Everyone here has something positive about them and I prefer to focus on that."

But such acrimony is uncommon. For the most part, Chatterton enjoys her forays into the world of Cohasset via bank slip notes and her trusty Smith Corona. "Not much has changed in the good news I hear," she said. "Although, the children I once wrote about are now calling me to tell me about their own children. You get to the point where you feel as though they're all your own."

"Happy things, that's what I choose to write about. If you want negativity, all you have to do is turn on the TV."

Film Flashback

'Witches' lands in Cohasset, Scituate

By Constance Pittman Lindner
STAFF WRITER

It was a bit racy, by New England standards, and the means that justified the end for the Hollywood crew that descended on Cohasset common and breezed into Scituate Harbor in 1986 angered some—but most residents look back and smile on the summer that the Witches of Eastwick came to town.

The 1986 film starring "witches" Cher, Michelle Pfeiffer and Susan Sarandon who conjure up the "ideal man" who turns out to be the devil himself (Jack Nicholson), turned Cohasset into Eastwick for a time. Local business signs and even the town hall's sign, were replaced with Eastwick signs. In Scituate, the landmark Quarterdeck was dubbed 'The Yapping Fox.'

But selling the town did not come cheap.

According to then-selectmen chairman Diane Sullivan of Cohasset, the town got $25,000, St. Stephen's earned the same for use of their church and Roukounakis' gas station got a nice sum because the film crew parked there during the shoot.

Cohasset Hardware, and Cards and Shards fared well, too, in their agreement to replace their signs with Eastwick names.

Sullivan explained that there was some controversy about using a town church for filming but that the parish did vote to do so. "Generally, people are of the Hollywood persuasion," joked Sullivan.

"Most of the money paid to the town went to rehab the pond on the common. Some people thought it a bit racy, but a lot of people did well by it," said Sullivan

Others didn't fare as well.

Some car owners returning to their parked vehicles discovered they had been towed by the film crew to clear the "set". The cars were returned later to the same location, along with a Hollywood-style peace offering—a bottle of champagne.

"Sure, there were some complaints," said Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan.

"People in the Jerusalem Road area got mad because they had to park their cars elsewhere and one resident on Little Harbor Road had to cut through backyards to get into his house. But overall, people would get out of their cars and watch the acting from a distance. I think they enjoyed it."

Perhaps none enjoyed it more than Noonan himself, who took a week's vacation to work with the film crew. He found Warner Bros. "a very nice outfit to work with—very nice people," during the time that he provided security for them.

Noonan was one of four men hired by the movie production company to work five to six days of the week.

"They usually worked 12 hours a day and had meals made for everyone out of a huge trailer," recalled Noonan. "The girls (Cher, Michelle Pfeiffer and Susan Sarandon) were very nice. It was very warm one day and I met one of the actresses, Michelle Pfeiffer, who gave me a drink of water. That was nice of her. She just saw that I looked thirsty. They were a nice group and it was interesting to watch how they did things."

Bringing "Eastwick's" witchery to film meant take after take, as well as old fashioned gadgetry.

"It was very thrilling," said Cards and Shards owner Sue Straley. "Most people don't get a chance to see something like that. That summer was a college education in film-making at its best. There were just so many things that I didn't know about, like how many times they have to keep doing things; how they put cameras on tracks and ride along for the fast-moving scenes; and how they could "float" the witches in the air by lifting them up on a board and lightly bobbing it up and down outside a second floor window."

Robert M. Davenport recalls seeing a crew one night on Border Street, filming a pink doorway that served as Cher's character's home. "It was a full moon and it was sort of interesting to see them out there," he said.

Davenport also got to see "rain" dashed against Susan Sarandon's "cottage" on Scituate's Bassing Beach with a little help from large water hose and even larger fan.

Besides getting an insider's view on Hollywood instruments for make-believe, Straley was the recipient of a "nice sum" for changing her sign."

"It was one of the best times we ever had here," she said. "We ate lunch in our backyard with the actors after filming was over. It was a fabulous experience. They were very considerate and we were closed only one day, really."

For the two weeks that their real sign was in limbo, Straley and her staff had visitors coming in for the deli food advertised on the Eastwick sign outside.

There was also a family trying to attend a funeral in town who wan-

While primarily filmed in neighboring Cohasset, the 1986 shooting of the Witches of Eastwick made its way into Scituate Harbor, too. In the movie, Cher brings her wares to Scituate's Quarterdeck, which was re-named The Yapping Fox during the shoot.

HIDING PLACE

Mrs. Farwell called and told the secretary that her toilet was stopped up. I went to the house with my closet auger in hand, but I couldn't clear the blockage after repeated attempts. I finally decided to remove the toilet. I undid the connection and carried the toilet out of the house and placed it on the front lawn. I turned the bowl over and immediately found the problem. There, wedged in the horn of the bowl was a squirt gun. Kali, the three-year-old baby of the house had been watching me intently since I had arrived and had now followed me outside. When she saw the squirt gun she piped up, "I hid that in there on my brother so he wouldn't shoot me any more." Well Kali, I think your mother is going to be a little upset when she finds out you did this. It costs a lot of money to hide things in here.

dered in to ask Straley how to get to Cohasset. They thought that they were in Eastwick, despite following the directions to the funeral home.

Eastwick, indeed, with a cape-clad Nicholson in a chase scene on Jerusalem Road and the three actresses suspended in mid-air.

Bedevilment was in the air and many caught the acting bug.

"Lots of townspeople were in the church scene," said Sullivan. "My son reacted so well in the scene when Nicholson threw up next to our pew that Nicholson came over later and complimented him on his acting ability. It's funny, but only a week or so ago, a video store worker asked me if I was in the church scene in that movie. He recognized my hair," said Sullivan, whose trademark coif has remained the same since her "Hollywood" days.

The heat and humidity registered on the extras filming the church scene; the church is not air conditioned. A machine with a large pipe poured cool air into the room but people still needed to mop at themselves with the boxes of Kleenex the film crew passed around between takes, according to Sullivan.

A pony-tail clad Jack Nicholson makes his way from a movie scene shot at Cohasset Harbor.

Extras worked four days a week at about $50 per day and had to wear the same clothing for [illegible] days in a row for one scene, and another set of clothing for two days for another scene.

An entertaining moment for Sullivan was watching actress Victoria Cartwright, who played the chairman of the board of selectmen in the church scene, in a particularly lively moment. "It was kind of interesting when she lost it in the church scene, and it was my job to watch this from my pew."

Though a decade has come and gone since the filming of the Witches of Eastwick, some still have their opinions about Nicholson's friendliness or lack thereof, the hardship on the community and the propriety of bringing author John Updike's supernatural thriller to Cohasset.

"There were some negatives," agreed Sullivan. "The filming of the bicycle scene on Beach Street involved some language that some people weren't happy with. But overall, it was positive. Maybe if we knew it was such a racy movie, we would have thought about it twice. Still, the pluses outweighed the minuses. I don't recall us taking a lot of heat."
